British Government Announces a Bill Which Will Abolish the Hereditary Principle.

SECOND CHAMBER LIKE OURS

But Postmaster General Samuel Says the Veto Power Will Not Be Restored.

NOT TO BE LONG DELAYED

Declaration Made That the Measure Will Be Passed in the Lifetime of the Present Parliament.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, March 13.—An important statement was made by Postmaster General Samuel in the House of Commons last night regarding the Government plans for the reform of the House of Lords.

Premier Asquith earlier in the evening, speaking on the subject, had said he would take the earliest available opportunity of proposing a plan which would make the House of Lords a true and impartial judicial authority. It was left to Mr. Samuel to indicate briefly the lines on which the reform is to be carried out. The new Second Chamber, Mr. Samuel said, would contain no vestige of the hereditary principle. Under no circumstances would its absolute veto be restored. The present House of Lords would be abolished in the course of the lifetime of the present Parliament.

This is as far as Mr. Samuel went, but previous declarations of the Government show that the proposal is likely to be for an elected Second Chamber of about 150 Senators, or "Lords of Parliament."

The question of the reform of the House of Lords arose in the course of a debate on the official Opposition amendment to the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne moved by Walter Long. The amendment was concerned with the operations of the Parliament act and submitted that, "It would be improper to proceed further with measures of so great importance as the Government of Ireland bill and the Welsh Church Disestablishment bill while the constitution of Parliament is still incomplete and without reference to the electors."

Mr. Long said the Government had shattered the constitution by its failure to fulfill its debt of honor and reform the House of Lords. The country had been left under a single-chamber Government, for the House of Lords was at present paralyzed so far as effective action went. Mr. Asquith, in replying, asked "Who shattered the constitution?"

"Our old constitutional arrangement was shattered," the Premier answered, "when some three or four years ago the House of Lords rejected the Budget. Everything that has since happened in the rearrangement of our constitutional system is a direct, legitimate, and inevitable consequence of that arbitrary and revolutionary proceeding."

After declaring that the Parliament act was an "imperfect and incomplete thing," Mr. Asquith added:

"I shall welcome with unaffected sincerity the day—and I hope it will very soon arrive—when I shall have the honor of proposing a plan which will reconstruct the Second Chamber into a true, impartial, judicially minded revising authority."

For some hours the debate continued in a house almost empty. A. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, in winding up the debate for the Opposition, asserted that the country had every reason to believe that great bills like the Irish and Welsh bills would not be carried under the Parliament act and before the reconstitution of the House of Lords. Those measures, he said, ought not to be carried without the consent of the electors.

The Government, Mr. Bonar Law asserted emphatically, was endangering the system of representative Government. Second Chambers were necessary, because autocratic power could not be intrusted to any man or body of men.

Mr. Samuel, in winding up the debate at a late hour, addressed himself chiefly to the question of the Lords. He said that, as the Opposition if they returned to power would repeal the Parliament act, the Liberal Party would be blind indeed if they did not reform the House of Lords themselves. He declared amid loud cheers that this they would do within the lifetime of the present Parliament, creating a second chamber with no vestige of the hereditary principle, and in no circumstances restoring the veto.

Perhaps at some future time, said Mr. Samuel, the Opposition would sigh for the good old days of the Parliament act, and for a House of Lords which delayed all Liberal measures for three years, but let Conservative bills through at once. The Government could not carry out the reform scheme this session, for that would mean dropping the Home Rule bill and the Welsh Church bill or holding another Autumn session. They would introduce their proposals

CABINET MEETINGS ON CALL.

To be Held Only When There's Something to Discuss—New Wilson Rule.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Washington continues to be shocked by the innovations of the new Administration. They may not seem to be very revolutionary to the eyes of the country at large, but here in Washington they seem to undermine the foundations of society.

The latest thing the President has done has been to inform the Cabinet that he sees no reason for their meeting unless they have something to talk about. Hence the regular Tuesday and Friday Cabinet meetings are abandoned except when events call for them.

The memory of the oldest inhabitant runneth not back to the time when the President did not solemnly enter the Cabinet room in the White House at 11 o'clock on Cabinet days and take his place at the head of the long table, with the Secretary of State at his right and the Secretary of the Treasury at his left and all the rest streaming down the table.

It made not a particle of difference whether there was anything to discuss or not. The Cabinet meeting had to be held. When there was nothing to talk about the President, if he were Lincoln, told funny stories, and if he were McKinley he listened to John Hay telling them. After the proper length of time had passed the Cabinet arose and put on its silk hats and went out, telling the waiting newspaper correspondents that its lips were sealed.

This solemn farce has been going on so long that it seems to Washington folks like the first amendment to the Constitution in point of venerability. The fact that this iconoclastic President has relegated the Cabinet meeting to the background along with the inaugural ball has jarred the town extremely.

All this is not to be taken as an indication that there will be no Cabinet meetings. Of course there will be plenty of them. The President simply thinks that the idea of having a regularly stated time is stilted and useless. He cannot see any reason why as busy a man as he should have to quit his business regularly at a certain hour in the morning of two days in the week and preside over a meeting where there is nothing to discuss. The Cabinet cleaned up its business satisfactorily this morning, and the President sees no reason for its meeting again on Friday.

7,000 MILES BY WIRELESS.

Cairo Hears Key West—500 Miles More, and All the World May Hear Together.

KEY WEST, Fla., March 12.—Capt. Hayden, commandant of the Key West naval station, has received a letter from Cairo, Egypt, saying that the Lloyds wireless operators in that city had on numerous occasions copied mesages sent from the Key West station. It is said that this breaks all wireless records, the distance being more than 7,000 statute miles, or more than 500 miles further than a former world's record.

Gibraltar Talks with Washington.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, March 13.—The Gibraltar correspondent of The Daily News says that the United States scout cruiser Salem left that port yesterday afternoon for home on the conclusion of a special cruise for carrying out important experiments in improved wireless telegraphy.

Transmission was effected over 2,300 miles, while night communications between Washington and Gibraltar were kept up. The results were highly satisfactory.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—The scout cruiser Salem left Gibraltar to-day for Hampton Roads. On her return voyage the Salem will test wireless communication with the Naval Radio station at Arlington as she did on the voyage from Hampton Roads to Gibraltar. While at Gibraltar the wireless experts of the Salem were permitted to use the British station for special experiments.

The tests on the way across to Gibraltar proved that in the day time dispatches could be received continuously by the Salem's apparatus from the powerful station at Arlington up to a distance of 2,400 miles. Arlington was able to hear the Salem in the day time up to a distance of 1,300 miles. At night, when the atmospheric conditions are especially favorable for the transmission of wireless messages, communication was maintained easily at much greater distance.

The navy experts regard the tests of the Arlington station and the Salem's plant as most successful. No definite conclusions in regard to the tests will be made public until after the daily records taken at Arlington and on the Salem can be compared

REDMAN, 99, HAD NIGHT OF IT.

Angry Now Because Son-in-Law Nash Had Police Looking for Him.

Dennis Redman, 99 years old, denied last night that there was any occasion for alarm when he stayed out all Tuesday night. He intimated his displeasure because his son-in-law, Battalion Chief Nash, with whom he lives at 899 Morris Avenue, the Bronx, had caused a confidential alarm to be sent out by the police for him.

"Just because I'm 99," said Mr. Redman, "is no reason why I can't look after myself. I don't feel 99. I feel like a young boy. I can't see why my son-in-law sent out an alarm for me, and I told him so."

The young-old man walked out of the house on Tuesday morning. Nothing had been heard of him by evening, so Chief Nash went to the Morrisania Station and notified the police. The Battalion Chief was much worried until yesterday morning, when his father-in-law returned home. He was told the police had been looking for him for many hours, and he warmly berated the Battalion Chief.

"I used to live in the old Fourth Ward," he said last night. "I had not been downtown for four or five years and I thought I'd like to look up some of my old friends. I found some and I stryed with them for the night. That's all there was to it. I wasn't lost. Of course, there's a lot more big buildings downtown than there used to be, but they don't bother me any. But to think he sent police to look for me. Bah!"

TWELVE STATES JOIN ILLINOIS VICE FIGHT

WOMAN OFFERS $50,000 FUND

Letters from Women of the Underworld Scoff at Work of Chicago Investigators.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 12.—A dozen States, through their Governors or other officers, have notified Lieut. Gov. O'Hara that they desire to join in the Illinois crusade and help to wage a Nation-wide war on white slavery and vice.

Gov. Ferris of Michigan announced today that he wanted every city in Michigan investigated with regard to the social evil. In Ohio Gov. Cox has announced himself in sympathy with the Illinois movement for a minimum wage law for women, and urges similar legislation for his State. Messages of a similar character came from Sacramento, Philadelphia, Salt Lake City, and other points, indicating that the Illinois investigation has caused unusual interest in all parts of the country.

Activities of the Vice Commission in Chicago were temporarily suspended today. The members of the commission were in Springfield to attend the sessions of the Legislature or pair their votes so that they might be able to continue the investigation.

Mr. O'Hara announced that the investigation would be transferred to New York next week. At a secret session of the Senate Committee in the office of the Lieutenant Governor it was decided to go East a week from to-morrow. On the way home the commission will stop in Washington with a view to interesting President Wilson in the investigation along National lines.

Mr. O'Hara said it was not likely any further public hearings would be held in Illinois for some time.

The bill appropriating $10,000 to pay the expenses of the investigation is pending in the House, and the money is not yet available. If the appropriation is not made by the time arranged for the New York trip there will be no delay for lack of funds. It is reported that a Chicago woman has volunteered to contribute $50,000 to prosecute a thorough inquiry into the white slave evil. The name of this woman is being kept secret, but Lieutenant Governor O'Hara is authority for the statement that such an offer has been made.

It is the intention of Mr. O'Hara to urge the Governors of various States interested in the vice inquiry to have representatives meet the Illinois Commission in Washington.

The nation-wide agitation which has followed the investigation promised today to crystalize in the appointment of a Federal commission to establish a minimum wage law. The members of the Commission believe their visit to President Wilson will result in more than an expression of approval from the nation's head.

Throughout the hearing in Chicago nearly all of the State Street merchants signified a willingness to accept a Federal minimum wage law for girls. Members of the Commission, on questioning the merchants privately learned also that they were willing to meet the Commission half way and voluntarily establish a minimum wage among themselves without recourse to the Legislature.

In some of the Chicago department stores to-day several girls demanded larger salaries. All were assured that they would be taken care of as soon as something definite had been agreed upon. Several girls resigned as a result of parental advice.

A mass meeting for the discussion of "Living wage and a Saturday half holiday for women" will be held on Friday night.

Plans for establishing a squad of twenty-five police women for duty in the City of Chicago are assuming definite shape and have the unqualified support of club women, settlement and social workers, to say nothing of the cordial indorsement of Mayor Harrison.

"I am sure the woman police officer will find much to do, and I am glad the plan meets Mayor Harrison's approval," said Mrs. Bowen, originator of the plan. "I would have women police stationed in dance halls and in the cheaper theatres, and in all places where young girls go accompanied by young men. They should be in evidence in amusement places where young girls drink, and should have authority to prevent girls from drinking."

Letters received by the Vice Commission from women of the underworld ridicule the work which the legislators are doing. One of these letters, signed "M. R. L." reads:

"Girls don't go wrong because they are hungry or because they need clothes. They go wrong because they are tempted by lies and overpowered by the evil in men. They listen to the fair and pretty things that men tell them, and they fall because they think they can trust themselves and trust the tempters. It is not the employer. I was a good girl and I worked in a store.

"I didn't get much money, but that didn't matter. I lived on $8 a week and would be living like that now—but I was thrown in contact with men who seemed to consider me their prey."

Another woman wrote: "You are looking for the things that make women wicked. Low wages, dance halls, hunger, cold. They all helped a bit, but they were not entirely responsible. You are afraid to look the thing in the face and afraid to learn the truth. Why don't you make the men be good? All the wages in the world won't help us. Make the men good and the girls will be good."

ANTI-VICE CRUSADE SPREADS.

Many States Take Up Fight for Women's Minimum Wage Law.

BOSTON, March 12.—Gov. Foss wrote to-day to Lieut. Gov. O'Hara of Illinois replying to a suggestion that other States follow the example of Illinois and investigate white slave conditions. He said:

"A resolution has been adopted by the Senate of Massachusetts and is now pending in the House of Representatives to provide for an investigation of the white slave traffic, so-called. It provides for

NEXT SUNDAY'S TIMES

President Wilson and Representative Underwood Agree to Put Date Back Six Days.

MORE TIME NEEDED ON BILLS

Question Whether Tariff Revision Will Be in One Bill or Several Not Yet Settled.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—It was practically decided at a conference today between President Wilson and Representative Underwood, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, that the extra session for the consideration of tariff measures should be called for Monday, April 7, instead of Tuesday, April 1.

President Wilson's proclamation calling the Congress in extraordinary session will be issued this week, according to information furnished to-day, and unless something comes up in the meantime April 7 will be the date fixed for assembling.

April 1 was the date agreed on by President Wilson and Mr. Underwood just before the inauguration. Mr. Underwood had assured the President that the tariff bill or bills would be ready then. Since then it has been decided that the Democratic caucus of the House would be asked to determine whether the tariff legislation should be embodied in one bill or several. There is believed to be much sentiment among Democratic Representatives in favor of the single bill idea.

Mr. Underwood has been confident that the entire revision programme would be in shape by the first of the month, but it is understood that he told the President to-day that he believed a safe margin should be allowed to enable the committee to complete its preparation of the new schedules. He still adheres to the belief that the session should be devoted exclusively to the tariff and the President is understood to have accepted his view. The President and Mr. Underwood are in hearty accord, it was said to-day, over the rates fixed by the Ways and Means Committee up to this time. Every effort will be made by the committee to follow the President's wishes in the matter of determining rates of duty.

President Wilson has decided upon a policy of meeting legislative developments as they arise rather than planning a programme for the extraordinary session of Congress. This, it was learned from White House callers to-day, will be the President's answer to those who are urging that currency legislation, Philippine independence, Alaskan questions, and other subjects be taken up during the session of the new Congress.

The President will send to Congress first a message, pointing out the necessity for tariff revision, and will follow this with a series of messages upon specific things, which he believes Congress may be able to act upon without unnecessarily prolonging the session. This course is said to have been approved at to-day's Cabinet meeting.

The suggestion that only tariff revision be attempted at the coming season arose from the fear that other subjects might becloud the tariff question and interfere with it. Assurances have been coming, however, from various quarters, principally the Senate, that the anticipated difficulty with the tariff may not materialize after all. The reorganization of the Senate with control of the committees in the hands of Senators who are in close sympathy with the Administration, is said to be one of the circumstances from which the conclusion has been drawn that the tariff as well as other questions may be disposed of without great difficulty.

LOSES LEGS A SECOND TIME.

Boy Sacrifices Artificial Ones to Save Woman from Train.

WESTBURY, L. I., March 12.—When William Fitting of East Williston was run over by a Long Island Railroad train more than four years ago, his legs were cut off, but after a long time in the hospital, he was able to go out again, with wooden pegs where his legs used to be and crutches to help him about. Grown up to a boy of 19, he was standing, crutches and all, upon the Westbury station platform of that same road this afternoon, when he say a Polish woman walk onto the tracks, just after a train had pulled out of the station. She had just alighted from that train apparently because she had taken the wrong one, and now she was wandering helplessly about in what seemed to be a state of complete confusion.

Certainly it seemed that way to Fitting, who had an old horror of the Long Island tracks and who saw that another train was approaching the station. He yelled to her to get off the tracks, but she did not hear, or if she heard, she did not understand. She just stood still, gazing about her as if wondering where to go next. It was too much for Fitting, and as there seemed to be no able bodied men about, he hobbled from the platform and without wasting any more breath in warning, he simply pushed her off the tracks.

She cleared them just in time to save her from the train as it roared its way past the station, but Fitting went under the wheels. The persons who saw all this from the platform sent up a shout of horror. When the train had gone by they hurried to the spot, where the lame boy lay huddled beside the rails.

But he had not been killed. He was not even badly hurt, for the wheels of the train had simply shorn away the wooden pegs. For the second time within five years he had come out alive from such an accident on the same road. But this time there had been no real legs for the boy to lose.

NO LEAVE TO TEACHER SOON TO BE A MOTHER

Board of Education Votes 32 to 5 to Refuse Mrs. Edgell's Plea for Year's Absence.

COMMITTEE HAD VOTED FOR IT

And Recommended That the Board Suspend All By-Laws That Would Operate to Prevent It.

The request of Mrs. Katherine C. Edgell, a teacher of physical training in the Erasmus Hall High School, Flatbush, for leave of absence without pay for a period of one year from Feb. 1, 1913, in order to bear and rear a child, was denied by the Board of Education at its meeting yesterday. The result was expected. Before the meeting began rumors were current that not only would the request be refused, but that discussion on the subject would be barred.

Interest in the case was evidenced by an unusually large attendance of members of the supervising and teaching staffs. The gallery of the meeting hall was filled with spectators and the space outside the railing on the main floor was crowded. There were more women than men.

Thirty-seven members of the board were present, including President Churchill and the Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar, who was recently appointed by Mayor Gaynor to succeed Congressman Herman A. Metz as Commissioner. The absent members were Miss Martha Lincoln Draper, Drs. Haupt and Pisani, Gen. Wingate, and Messrs. Barondess, Man, McGowan, C. J. Sullivan, and Whalen.

Mrs. Edgell's case was No. 42 on the calendar. It came before the board as a report of the Committee on High Schools and Training Schools, signed by its Chairman, Arthur S. Somers, and stating that the committee had by a majority vote on March 5 decided in favor of the teacher's request. There were present at that committee meeting all of its nine members. Vice President John Greene left the meeting before the vote was taken on the question. Of the other eight members only Patrick F. McGowan voted no. Those in favor of Mrs. Edgell were Chairman Somers, Miss Leventritt, Dr. Ira S. Wile, Messrs. Man, Thomas, and Wilsey, and former President Winthrop.

Favored Suspending By-Laws.

The committee's report stated that Mrs. Edgell's request had been submitted first to the Board of Superintendents, which is empowered under subdivision 11 of Section 44 of the by-laws to grant leave of absence without pay to principals and teachers for a period not exceeding one year for study or restoration of health. Mrs. Edgell said that her reason for her request was that she was soon to become a mother.

The Board of Superintendents referred the matter to the Committee on By-Laws and Legislation for its opinion as to whether the case came within the provisions of that section of the by-laws. The committee on Jan. 14 decided that the case did not come within the provisions. The entire matter was then submitted to the Committee on High Schools by Associate City Superintendent Stevens. After careful consideration the committee decided to recommend that the Board of Education grant the request and suspend all by-laws to the contrary.

Chairman Somers yesterday moved the adoption of this report and Dr. Ira S. Wile seconded it. Commissioner Abraham Stern said:

"I deprecate discussion of this subject, and trust that there will not be any. Discussion of it will do no good. There has been much discussion of it already in the public press. It is a matter within the comprehension of each and every member of the board. I don't think that any remarks will change a single member's view."

Commissionr Stein moved that discussion be closed. Dr. Wile objected. It was, he said, a matter of much concern to the board. If it could be discussed by the committee it could also be discussed by the full board. It was the first time such a report had been made. The by-laws did not cover such a case. The board ought to face the issue and listen to argument.

Mr. Stein said that too much embarrassment to a bride who married had already been given. He insisted on his motion that discussion be closed.

Vote 32 Against to 5 for Her.

The motion to close discussion was carried 28 to 9. The nine were Miss Leventritt, Mrs. Bamberger, former President Winthrop, Dr. Wile and Messrs. Bigham, Levy, Martin, McCafferty and Somers.

A vote was then taken on the committee's report favoring the granting of Mrs. Edgell's request. The result was 5 ayes and 32 noes. The ayes were Mrs. Bamberger, Miss Leventritt, former President Winthrop, Dr. Wile and Mr. Somers. Mr. Barrett voted aye by mistake, but changed to no before the result was announced. Both Mrs. Kramer and Mrs. Post voted against Mrs. Edgell. So did Dr. Farrar.

When informed later at their home of the action of the board, neither Mrs. Edgell nor her husband would discuss it or their future intentions.

City Superintendent Maxwell replied at some length to the report of the special committee advocating changes in the methods of the Board of Examiners. Commissioner Abraham Stern, Chairman of the committee, replied to Dr. Maxwell. The Board of Education decided to print Dr. Maxwell's reply and the committee's answer to that reply and laid the matter over until a later date.

There was a long discussion over the report of the Committee on Buildings favoring the rescinding of the resolution making provision in the corporate stock estimate for a site and building for a vocational school in the vicinity of McCarren Park, Brooklyn. Mrs. Kramer said it was not fair treatment of the Brooklyn people, who had been promised this school. On motion of Mr. Greene it was decided to include the school in the estimate, with the understanding that it might be classed as an elementary school.

SULZER AFFRONTED McCOMBS

Offered Him Judgeship McCall Left—To Decide About Paris To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Gov. Sulzer tried to compose the vexed situation of a place for William F. McCombs by offering Mr. McCombs the New York Supreme Court Judgeship left vacant by the appointment of Justice McCall as Public Service Commissioner. Mr. McCombs refused the offer with a good deal of vigor and left the Governor in no doubt about his opinion of such a compromise.

Mr. McCombs, at 9:30 to-morrow morning, is to call on the President and tell him whether he will or will not accept the Paris mission. He had a talk with Postmaster General Burleson and another with Senator O'Gorman to-day, but would not reveal what the conversations were about.

BERNHARDT HURT IN CRASH.

Suffers Painful Injuries When Auto Runs Into Truck.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 12.—Sarah Bernhardt, the noted French actress, suffered painful but probably not serious injuries in an automobile accident here to-night. She was on her way to Los Angeles from Venice for the evening performance at a local theatre when her automobile collided with a heavy truck.

The machine was wrecked. The actress's ankles were wrenched, her lips were lacerated, and she received bruises on the body. After receiving medical attention she insisted upon playing to-night, but her act was put last on the bill so that she could regain composure after the shock of the accident.

NEW ANTI-BETTING BILL.

Knight Measure Would Prohibit Gambling of Any Kind at Racetracks.

ALBANY, March 12.—A new anti-racetrack gambling bill, which seeks to overcome the recent decision of the Appellate Division, was introduced to-day by Assemblyman Knight. The bill would prohibit betting of any kind on the racetracks.

It provides that any person who "with or without the exchange of money or property participates in pool selling, bookmaking with or without writing, or in any other kind of gambling," or who "as bettor or the taker of a bet directly or indirectly records or registers bets," is guilty of a misdemeanor.

LAST CALL TO NEWSPAPERS.

Burleson Ready to Enforce Publicity Law Upon Delinquents.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Unless the Supreme Court restrains Postmaster General Burleson from enforcing the newspaper publicity law, as it was asked to do yesterday, he will immediately put the act into effect, according to an announcement which he made to-day.

Final notices have been sent to several publishers that if they do not produce the information required by the law within ten days their publications will be thrown out of the mails. Approximately 91 per cent. of the publications affected have filed their reports with the Postmaster General. The delinquents generally include daily newspapers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and St. Louis.

200 MILL GIRLS STRIKE.

1,000 More Threaten to Leave Oliver Mills Unless Wages Are Raised.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, March 12.—Two hundred girls employed in the iron mills owned by United States Senator George T. Oliver went on strike to-day for more wages. One thousand girls are expected to walk out to-morrow unless the wage scale is modified. These girls are employed at threading bolts. For this they receive 5 cents a thousand. Their demand is for an additional 2 cents a thousand. None of the girls makes more than $8 a week. Those who earn so much are the faster and more enduring.

The strikers asserted to-day that it was impossible for any girl to earn more than $8 a week. Some girls receive no more than 28 cents a day, the girls say. The girls striking to-day are the best paid in the Oliver mills.

Threading bolts is heavy work for women. Frequently their hands are lacerated. A great many of all the 1,200 threading bolts wear bandages on their hands. With hands bound up the girls say it is hard to work fast enough to earn decent wages.

FIREBUG CHIEF CONFESSES.

$500,000 Collected from Blazes He Started, Says Danies.

CHICAGO, March 12.—John Danies of New York City, alleged chief of the Arson Trust, made a confession to-day to Frank Johnston, First Assistant State's Attorney. Danies, according to Mr. Johnston, named forty members of thearson ring, including several men "higher up," and admitted he had set more than twenty fires in Chicago.

The confession is said to be even more startling than that made recently by Benjamin Fink, who confessed complicity in 100 incendiary fires. An aggregate of $500,000 in insurance coney was collected from the Danies fires, said Mr. Johnston, who announced that at least forty warrants for business men, public fire insuranceadjusters, and actual incendiaries named bq Danies would be issued.

"I tried to get out of the business," Danies's confession runs, "but people would not let me alone. They kept sending for me to do jobs for them, and I kept on going in the same old way for fifteen years. My experience with fires happened in my own home, and when I settled for the insurancean adjuster told me that I could make lots of money by getting incendiary fires. That's how I got mixed up in this rotten stuff."

TAFT FOR JOHNS HOPKINS?

Movement Afoot in Baltimore to Make Him President of University.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 12.—There has been considerable discussion in local university circles lately regarding the possibility of ex-President Taft being asked to take the presidency of Johns Hopkins University. Dr. A. R. L. Dohme, a former instructor and President of the City Wide Congress, said to-day:

"I have become so convinced of the correctness and advisability of the plan that I have laid my views upon it before the board of trustees of the Johns Hopkins University and advocated the election of William H. Taft as President of the University in as forceful a manner as I could.

"I have talked it over with many people, and my suggestion seems to me to meet with enthusiastic support from everyone to whom I have mentioned it. It would do him honor and he would do the university the highest honor. He would bring to our Alma Mater the best traditions of the same school that produced Daniel Coit Gilman, and couple with it the vast experience of a contact for many years with the greatest minds and best thought of the civilized wold."

LIPTON'S OFFER IS TURNED DOWN

New York Yacht Club Declines Challenge Because Yacht Size Is Restricted.

OBJECTS TO 75-FOOT LIMIT

Club's Members Take the Attitude That Offer Must Be Without Conditions.

STILL HOPE FOR A RACE

It Is Rumored That Another British Yachtsman Will Send a Cup Challenge.

Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge for the America's Cup has been declined by the New York Yacht Club. This action was taken last night at a special meeting of the club members at the clubhouse, 37 East Forty-fourth Street. The refusal on the part of the club to entertan the challenge was due to the restrictions imposed by the British yachtsman in stipulating that the defending vessel should not exceed 75 feet on the water line, which imposed a handicap contrary to the spirit of the deed of gift.

The action of the members of the New York Yacht Club followed the precedent established in 1907, when Sir Thomas Lipton challenged with a 68-foot yacht. At that time the challenge was issued through the Royal Irish Yacht Club, and the stand taken by the New York Yacht Club plainly indicated the attitude of the club in respect to challenges, which must be free and unrestrained.

Refusal Was Foreshadowed.

The refusal of the New York Yacht Club to entertain Sir Thomas Lipton's effort to regain possession of the America's Cup for England will cause little surprise in yachting circles, as it was foreshadowed by the general sentiment of the members of the club, which was opposed to the acceptance of any challenge that prevented the club from selecting a vessel of such size as it pleases, provided she be not less than sixty-five nor more than ninety feet on the water line.

It is, however, probable that a race for the America's Cup will be held in 1914, as it was intimated that a challenge may be expected in the near future from a prominent British yachtsman. This challenge, it is understood, will contain no restrictions, and will be framed along the lines of former challenges, which left the club free to build defending vessels which carried out the spirit of the deed of gift.

The objectionable feature of the challenge as sent by the Royal Ulster Yacht Club was the condition that the cup be defended by a yacht with a length on the water line not exceeding seventy-five feet. This condition left no option with the club, but made it imperative that the defender be the same size as the challenger, whereas the deed of gift permits the boats to be of sixty-five to ninety feet in length, according to the wishes of the challenging and defending parties. The challenge from Sir Thomas follows:

Royal Ulster Yacht Club,
Bangor, County Down, Ireland.
Feb. 26, 1913.

To Secretary New York Yacht Club,
New York:

Dear Sir—I am requested by Sir Thomas J. Lipton, Bart., K. C. V. O., to forward you this challenge for the America's Cup, subject to the same regulations as governed the last contest, and which proved to be so satisfactory, namely, the best three out of five races over the same courses with like starts and other details.

The first race to be sailed on Thursday, the 10th day of September, 1914.

The second race to be sailed on Saturday, the 12th day of September, 1914.

The third race to be sailed on Tuesday, the 15th day of September, 1914.

Further races, if any, to be sailed on each following Thursday, Saturday, and Tuesday until finished.

I, therefore, on behalf of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club, and in the name of Sir Thomas J. Lipton, a member of the club, challenge to sail a series of matches with the yacht Shamrock IV. against any one yacht or vessel constructed in the United States of America for the America's Cup.

The following are the particulars of the challenging vessel:

Owner—Sir. Thomas J. Lipton, Bart., K. C. V. O.
Name of Yacht—Shamrock IV.
Length on Load Water Line—Seventy-five feet.
Rig—Cutter.

The Custom House measurement will follow as soon as the vessel can be measured for registration.

In forwarding this challenge I am desired by the committee to say that it is sent on condition that the cup will be defended by a yacht with a length on load water line not exceeding seventy-five feet.

I shall be much obliged if you will cable the receipt of this challenge.

(Signed) E. F. PATTERSON,
Honorary Secretary, Royal Ulster Yacht Club.

Challenge Slightly Discussed.

The meeting was presided over by Commodore Dallas B. Pratt, and was attended by about 350 members representing forty yachts. There were no preliminaries, and Secretary G. A. Cormack at once read the challenge. The discussion that followed was brief and indicated that the members had already decided to decline the challenge. The sentiment, as expressed by several of the members of the club, left little doubt as to the action that would follow. The previous challenge of Sir Thomas Lipton in 1907 was referred to, and it was pointed out that the present challenge was practically the same as on that occasion, with the modification that the length of the vessel was increased seven feet.

After a short discussion Lewis Cass Ledyard offered a resolution that the challenge be declined on the ground that it imposed a condition that deprived the New York Yacht Club of the right given to it by the deed of gift to select a vessel of such size as it pleases provided it was not less than sixty-five or more than ninety feet on the waterline. The resolution was unanimously adopted and ordered to be cabled to the Doyal Ulster Yacht Club.

Sir Thomas Lipton's latest challenge is the fifth received by the New York Yacht Club from the Irish yachtsman. Three of the former defis complied with the deed of gift, and were accepted, and two were rejected. The first challenge was received through th Royal Ulster Yacht Club Aug. 6, 1898, when the Shamrock I. was named as the challenging yacht. The defending yacht, Columbia, was built by a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan. Shamrock I. was brought from Belfast by William Fife, Jr., the yacht's designer, and Charles Russel. When officially measured just before the races it was found that Columbia would have to allow the Shamrock 6.31 seconds, her racing length being 101.92 and that of the American sloop 102.13. The challenger's dimensions were 128 feet over all, 87.60 waterline, 25 feet beam, and 20.25 feet draught.

The second challenge from the Royal Ulster Yacht Club was recived by the New York Yacht Club on Oct. 2, 1900, again naming Sir Thomas Lipton, who was then Rear Commodore of the challenging club. The challenge was accepted. Sir Thomas named Shamrock II. as the challenging yacht, and the sloop Constitution was built as a new candidate for the defense of the cup by a syndicate composed of August Belmont, James Stillman, Oliver H. Payne, F. G. Bourne, and Henry Walters

The challenge received by the New York Yacht Club in 1902 for a race in 1903 was accepted on Oct. 16, and the dates agreed upon for the races were Aug. 20, 22, and 25. The new cup defender, designed and built by the Herreshoffs for a syndicate of yachtsmen headed by J. P. Morgan, was named Reliance. Shamrock III., the challenger, was jointly designed by Fife and Watson.

Sir Thomas challenged a fourth time through the Royal Irish Yacht Club on Sept. 25, 1907. It was declined by the New York Yacht Club on the ground that "the America's Cup, held by this club as Trustee, under the deed of gift, is a trophy which stands pre-eminently for speed and for the utmost skill in designing, construction, managing, and handling the competing vessels, and should, therefore, be sailed for by the fastest and most powerful vessels that can be produced." Six other reasons for its declination of the challege were given by the club, the principal reason being that Sir Thomas Lipton had sought to challenge with a 68-foot rating sloop under the universal rule of measurement.

In the first of the series of races between Columbia and Shamrock I., sailed in October, 1899, Shamrock was beaten 10:08, in the second race she did not finish, and in the third she was beaten 6:34. In the first, second, and third races between Columbia and Shamrock II., in 1901, the challenger was beaten 1:20, 3:35, and 0:41, respectively. Reliance and Shamrock III. made nine starts in 1903, but were only able to complete three races, all of which were won by Reliance, the first by 7:03 and the second by 1:19. Shamrock missed the finish line in the fog in the third race and so was not timed. All the races since 1885, when Puritan defeated Genesta, have been sailed with time allowance. In the last race Reliance allowed Shamrock III. 1:57 over a thirty-mile course.

PROTESTS CLUB'S ACTION.

One Member Intimates That Sir Thomas Didn't Get a Chance.

The following letter was received by THE TIMES last night from Evans R. Dick, Jr., of the New York Yacht Club after last night's meeting:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an ardent lover of the sport of yacht racing, I protest most violently against the action taken by the New York Yacht Club in regard to the challenge of Sir Thomas Lipton for the America's Cup. I feel, as do most salt-water yachtsmen throughout this country, that the real contest for the America's Cup is not between one club in this country and one club in Great Britain, but between America and Great Britain, country for country. It is not a sporting event between two clubs, but a race of international importance.

The motion to reject the challenge was railroaded through without a word said in opposition. A proposed letter of rejection was read, as previously framed up, even before the motion to reject the challenge was put to a vote. There was not a member of the club who had the franchise who said a word in opposition to the drastic speech made in introducing the motion to reject the challenge.

The reason given to the members for the refusal of the challenge was that the club was, so to speak, trustee of the cup, and that as such was not free to act as it pleased in the matter. It was said that the America's Cup was the greatest yachting trophy in the world, and that as such should be defended only by a vessel unrestricted as to design, length and power except as by the deed of gift. It was made to imply that it should be the fastest vessel that can sail the seas. Such, however, is not the case, and it was admitted that the deed of gift restricted tne contesting yachts to 90 feet length, load water line.

The yachtsmen of this country admit almost unanimously that the type of yacht which has defended the cup within recent years has been the sort of vessel which makes for all that is undesirable in yachting. The present yacht racing measurement rules were adopted by the New York Yacht Club to drive this very type of yacht out of existence. The recent defenders have been racing machines pure and simple, which are and can be of no use whatsoever for the purposes of yachting or any other purpose after the race. They are either broken up for junk or kept out of commission for the event of another race.

Is this the kind of boat we American yachtsmen stand for? Is this the type of yacht the members of the New York Yacht Club are trying to develop and encourage? We hope not!

Sir Thomas Lipton has challenged in good faith with a type of boat which has power and size enough to stand for all that is grandest in yachting, but of a size and power which will tend to develop a type of boat which will express and bring out more than a mere racing machine—a yacht which, though it is a racer, is, nevertheless, a yacht, and can always be used as a yacht. That is what we, as yachtsmen stand for, and we hope that the country which can produce and sail a vessel which will still be a yacht, and in addition be the fastest yacht will capture or hold the America's Cup.

The New York Yacht Club is, in my opinion, not only the trustee of the America's Cup, but also, I may say, trustee of the international yachting interests of this country. By its action to-night, by its false hypotheses that the America's Cup stands for the fastest vessel that can sail, by its refusal to recognize, though it fully understands, what is best in yachting, this club forfeits the right to the premier honors of yachting in this country.

I feel that the yachtsmen throughout this country will deeply regret the blow which has been struck against the interests of yachting in the country.

Very truly yours,
EVANS ROGERS DICK, Jr.

FAVORS STATE POWER PLANT.

Would Cut Price of Electricity for Albany and Neighbors.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—The Murtaugh-Patrie Hydro-electric Power bill, which provides for the erection of dams at Visscher's Ferry and at Crescent for the use of surplus barge canal water in the generation of electric power under State auspices and its distribution, was reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee to-day. The advocates of the bill say that it will pass the Legislature. Powerful interests, however, are arrayed against this new venture in State ownership.

The cities of Albany, Troy, Rensselaer, Cohoes, and Watervliet, it is said, would benefit if the bill becomes law and the work is undertaken by the State. They would be able to buy electric current for lighting or industrial purposes for about half the price which they pay at present.

If this enterprise is successful, the plan is to extend operations to the entire State under the auspices of the Conservation Commission. An outlay of about $700,000 is provided for in the bill which has been opposed on the ground that an expense would be saddled on the entire State, while at least in its early [illegible] State power and lighting [illegible] benefit only a [illegible].

GOVERNOR ACCUSES PRISON SUPT. SCOTT

COLONEL EXPECTS REMOVAL

His Course Toward Russell, Mills and McDowell and Thaw's Matteawan Privileges Is Attacked.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—Charges of "non feasance and neglect of duty" were served on Colonel Joseph F. Scott, Superintendent of State Prisons, by Governor Sulzer to-day. The Governor gave Colonel Scott until noon to-morrow to answer the charges, either orally or in writing. Colonel Scott said to-night his answer would be forthcoming on schedule time even though that time was short. He fully expected that the Governor would remove him before many hours.

In the main the charges are based on the report made to the Governor by his Commission of Inquiry last Friday. Some of the accusations against Colonel Scott in that report, however, the Governor has omitted in his formal charges since it became known that Colonel Scott, in the official acts which served as a basis for them, had been guided by recommendations made by Attorney-General Carmody.

There are six specifications in the charges. In the first he is accused of "intentionally and willfully neglecting and refraining from dismissing" from office Frederick H. Mills, sales agent of the Prison Department, until a demand was made by Gov. Sulzer on or about Feb. 28. The official wrongdoing which formed the basis for Mr. Sulzer's demand was that Mills was interested in a company which sold supplies to State institutions in competition with prison-manufactured products.

Skip in Civil Service List.

The second specification sets forth that Col. Scott, in appointing a successor to Robert S. Lamb as Superintendent of the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane in Matteawan in August, 1911, passed over on the civil service list the name of Dr. Amos T. Baker, Assistant Superintendent, who was thoroughly experienced in the care of the criminal insane, and appointed Dr. James V. May, who, besides having received the lowest percentage on his examination for that place, was known to Col. Scott to lack all such experience.

A third specification tells how Dr. May and Dr. John W. Russell, who was appointed to take charge of the institution in Matteawan after Dr. May was made head of the State Hospital Commission, made a professional examination of Harry K. Thaw, an inmate, and entered their observations in the case book of that asylum. It alleges that Dr. May knowingly altered the record and Thaw was permitted to make alterations in it. Complaint is made that Dr. Russell, who is alleged to have known all about it and to have failed to divulge the changes to Justice Keogh of the Supreme Court in Westchester County, before whom Thaw appeared in a habeas corpus proceeding to obtain his freedom, was not removed from office by Col. Scott for that offense.

Col. Scott is charged not only with failure to remove Dr. Russell, but also with neglecting to order an investigation of Dr. Russell's official conduct, although the then Matteawan Superintendent testified in that proceeding that Thaw might be set free as sane, provided he, Dr. Russel, were hired by Thaw's family to act as a special attendant.

Too Much License for Thaw.

The fourth specification has to do with the lack of restraint on Thaw in Matteawan, which was disclosed by testimony before the Commission of Inquiry in the Clark case. It charges Col. Scott with lack of proper supervision over the institution. It also alleges that Dr. Russell knowingly permitted Harry K. Thaw, though a criminal insane patient, "to receive and have in his possession large sums of money amounting to thousands of dollars and valuable stocks and bonds, and permitted Horace A. Hoffman many times and Alfred Henry Lewis, William F. Clark, John Nicholson Anhut, and other persons several times and practically whenever they desired to see the insane patient,' and to transact business with him without official surveillance.

It is charged that Thaw was permitted to give to all of them large amounts, and that he gave Anhut $25,000 in the hospital to procure his release.

The fifth specification calls up the $20,000 negotiations between Anhut and Dr. Russell disclosed by the testimony before the Inquiry Commission. It charges Col. Scott with willful neglect of duty in failing to suspend Dr. Russell and to investigate the allegations made before the commission, and, finally, in permitting the physician to resign over the telephone,' "thus intentionally attempting to defeat the demand of the Governor for the dishonorable dismissal of Dr. Russell" from the State service.

The last charge has to do with the failure of Col Scott to dismiss from the service John C. McDowell, Secretary of the State Prison Department, after the latter uttered in the presence of Col. Scott and several reporters offensive words about the Governor, "in willful disregard of the respect and courtesy due by all State officials toward superiors in public office."

It was remarked in the Capitol that the course followed by Gov. Sulzer in the proposed removal of Col. Scott was somewhat unlike that followed in a similar case several years ago, when Austin Lathrop, the last Democratic incumbent of the office now held by Col. Scott, was removed by Gov. Black. Mr. Black made charges against Mr. Lathrop, but, rather than sit in judgment on a case where he was the prosecutor, referred it to a Commissioner. Senator Elon R. Brown, at present leader of the minority, heard the testimony in that case.

Might Elevate McDowell.

The removal of Col. Scott would make Mr. McDowell acting head of the Prison Department. Gov. Sulzer conferred with Attorney General Carmody as to the authority of the Executive to place some one temporarily in charge of the department, in the event of the removal of the Superintendent. The Attorney General will give an opinion.

Walter N. Thayer of Brooklyn is a candidate for appointment if Col. Scott is removed. Mr. Thayer was appointed Warden of Clinton Prison by Gov. Hill, and served through the administrations of Govs. Flower, Morton, and Black. Before Cornelius V. Collins was succeeded as Superintendent of Prisons by Col. Scott he appointed Mr. Thayer Warden of the new Great Meadows Prison in Comstock, but soon after Col. Scott assumed office he asked for Mr. Thayer's resignation.

DR. FLINT ATTACKS SCOTT.

Tells Sulzer That Thaw Disdains Escape from Matteawan.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—Gov. Sulzer tonight made public a letter he had received from Dr. Austin Flint of New York, one of the alienists who had examined Harry K. Thaw and pronounced him insane when he sought to regain his freedom. Dr. Flint makes startling charges against the management of Matteawan during the régime of Col. Scott. In his letter Dr. Flint says:

"I am more than ever convinced that the appointment of Scott and his appointments of May and Russell were in the interest of the release of Thaw."

Dr. Flint goes on to say that exposure prevented the original plan of action, and continues:

"I think I express the general views of the profession when I say that Col. Scott, Dr. May, and all directly or indirectly concerned in the attempted sacrifice of Matteawan to a dangerous person and lunatic, who has expended vast sums in his efforts for release and is willing to spend more, should be suspended from office at once and finally removed."

NEWSSTAND BILL ADVANCED.

Assembly Cities Committee Makes Favorable Report on It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—The Levy bill giving the Board of Aldermen authority to issue permits for news stands at Subway entrances and other places was favorably reported by the Assembly Cities Committee to-day. The bill has a good chance of being passed, but some of its friends fear it may be vetoed by Mayor Gaynor.

The only opposition to the measure so far has come from the city authorities. Mr. McAneny, President of the Borough of Manhattan, has informed Chairman Coughlan of the Cities Committee that the proposed law would be a serious obstacle in his crusade against private encroachment upon the public streets. It is contended that the Board of Estimate already has the power which the bill would confer upon the Aldermen.

Clark in Supreme Court Practice.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Speaker Champ Clark was to-day admitted to practice before the Supreme Court. He was introduced by former Judge Sheppard Barclay of St. Louis, Mo., who vouched for his good standing and qualifications as a lawyer. The Speaker does not expect to practice before the court in the immediate future.

Wisdom of Japan for Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 12.—Japanese graduates of Harvard University have subscribed $20,000, to be used by the corporation as a foundation to establish lectureships on Oriental philosophy. It is proposed to have professors from the leading universities of Japan come to Cambridge for two or more years at a time to give courses.

within the lifetime of the present Parliament, but had no intention of abandoning important bills in order to bring in the proposals immediately.

On one point, said Mr. Samuel, both sides were agreed. That was that the question of the Lords could not be allowed to rest where it was and that the reform of that chamber was essential. There were two defects in the constitutional arrangement under the Parliament act that could not make for a parliamentary state of things. The first was that the legislative power of the Lords was left in the hands of a chamber composed upon the hereditary principle, and the other that the procedure under the Parliament act allowed undue delay before liberal legislation could become effective.

According to The Daily News, Mr. Samuel used the words, "the Lords will be abolished," but The Times's Parliamentary report of the speech does not contain the word "abolished."

The House of Commons debate was finished too late to permit editorial comment on Mr. Samuels's statement. The Daily News, commenting on the earlier portions of the debate, refers to the old, wearisome failure of the indictment which the Opposition, for lack of anything of substance, is compelled to reiterate ad nauseum, that the Government repudiated a debt of honor in delaying to reform the House of Lords. It says:

"What is the use of pretending that the Government has broken any pledge to take in hand the reform of the House of Lords? That is to come, as it was always clearly understood that it should come after Home Rule and Welsh disestablishment. All this is so obvious and has been demonstrated so often that the persistence of the Opposition in repeating such flyblown fictions makes a psychological puzzle."

The Times's commentary upon Premier Asquith has nothing to complain of in his presentation of the Liberal case as regards the reform of the Lords, except his total failure to reconcile it with other parts of his speech. In declaring that the Parliament act by itself was an imperfect and incomplete solution of the constitutional difficulty, he admitted the Unionist case.

OTHER EFFORTS AT REFORM.

Liberals Have Sought to Curtail Lord's Power Since 1907.

The proposed measure to reform the Upper House is the latest development in a fight which has been waged by the Liberal Government against the House of Lords since 1907. On Feb. 26 of that year a bill to reconstitute the House of Lords was introduced in Parliament, and the following June a measure to curtail its powers was advocated by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, then Premier. The resolution was passed by Parliament, but was bitterly opposed by the Conservatives. The suggestion was later offered that a committee of peers should elect representative commoners to the House of Lords, and on Dec. 3, 1908, the Reform Committee of Parliament drew up proposals for radical changes in the powers of the Lords as a legislative body.

In December, 1909, the rejection of Lloyd-George's budget by the House of Lords gave additional impetus to the movement to curtail the powers of that body, and in the following January Lord Lansdowne admitted in a public speech in London that certain reforms were urgently needed. On Jan. 25, 1910, Premier Asquith proposed to limit the Lords' power of veto, while the Radicals urged its abolition. On Feb. 5, 1910, the extremists in Parliament urged the postponement of debate on the subject of the budget until the Lords had been shorn of certain objectionable powers. The Laborites on Feb. 10, 1910, attempted to have passed by Parliament a resolution advocating the total abolition of the House of Lords, and on Feb. 21, 1910, Premier Asquith lost the support of the Nationalists under John P. Redmond by his action in placing the legislation to curb the powers of the House of Lords after the passage of the budget.

The next step in the fight was the refusal of the United Irish League to support a candidate at a ParliaWmentary bye-election until the Government secured guarantees from the Crown enabling it to pass the bill to abolish the veto power of the House of Lords. On March 5, 1910, Lord Rosebery proposed a plan to placate the enemies of the Upper House by suggesting the discontinuance of the solely hereditary principle and the election of some members. In an address before the Lords on March 14, 1910, Lord Rosebery assured that body that erform must come from within, or that, as the result of Liberal policy, the hereditary chamber would eventually be succeeded by a second house elected by the people. Lord Rosebery was supported by Lords Curzon and Cromer in his position, the former declaring absolutely against a purely elective House of Lords.

In a speech before the House of Commons on March 21, 1910, Premier Asquith presented a plan to disable the Lords from power of rejecting the money bill. A week later, when he opened debate upon his resolution to limit the power of the Lords, he received the support of the Nationalists, while Balfour announced that the Conservatives would stand for the hereditary rights of the Lords. In June, 1910, on the suggestion of King George, a conference was decided upon between committees of peers and commoners. The conference dragged along without any apparent approach to a settlement until August of that year, when Premier Asquith announced that a compromise was likely.

In the meantime, in April, the Lords had accepted the budget without division. Finally on Aug. 10, 1911, by a vote of 131 to 114, the House of Lords accepted Viscount Morley's motion not to insist upon the Lords' amendments to the veto bill, and Premier Asquith succeeded in limiting the power of the House of Lords to a two years' suspensory veto and vastly increasing the prerogatives of the House of Commons. The victory was won through the threat of the Liberal Ministry to create "[illegible] sufficient in number to [illegible] of the upper body.

WAR TALK RENEWED BY SULZER'S FRIENDS

Albany Full of Rumors of Split with Murphy and Possible Extra Session.

GLENN SCOUTS AT REPORTS

Yet Legislation Is Delayed and the Governor's Supporters Are Suspicious.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—At the Capitol the balmy spring air is filled with the rumors of war. According to some friends of Gov. Sulzer, a sanguinary conflict with Tammany Hall is impending. According to other friends of the Governor, the war is already on. But for all that, a listening ear would not catch up a sound even faintly resembling the noise of battle, nor the rattle of a distant drum.

The war talk first came—from a source close to the Governor—coupled with the name of ex-Alderman James E. Gaffney, a close friend and former business associate of Charles F. Murphy. The Governor's friend told some newspaper correspondents, after pledging them not to use his name, that Mr. Murphy had urged the Governor to appoint Mr. Gaffney State Superintendent of Highways, to succeed C. Gordon Reel, another friend of Mr. Murphy, whom the Governor has just removed from office.

Mr. Murphy's persistence on behalf of Gaffney, was said to have taken the form of threats that the Governor's pet constructive legislation would be held up by the Legislature, which is dominated by Tammany Hall. As a result, it was said, the Goveronr had come to the conclusion that Gaffney's candidacy must be ignored, even if this should mean a fight with the organization.

The question has naturally arisen why the Governor, if so strongly prejudiced against Mr. Gaffney, appointed him Chairman of his Advisory Highway Board only a few days ago. At that time Gov. Sulzer was asked why he had appointed such a close friend of Mr. Murphy at the head of this important board, especially after the disclosures linking Tammany Hall and some Democratic leaders of the "practical" school with scandals in the present State Highway Department. Gov. Sulzer at that time had nothing but words of praise for Mr. Gaffney.

After the correspondents had read the explicit denial of Mr. Murphy that he had urged the appointment of Mr. Gaffney for this or any other place, Gov. Sulzer was asked to-day whether the statement of the Tammany leader corresponded with his understanding of the situation.

"I have nothing to say," was the Governor's only reply.

In connection with the Gaffney matter, it should be noted that the first mention of Mr. Gaffney's name in connection with the post until recently held by C. Gordon Reel occurred in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Tuesday morning.

The reference was based on information which reached THE TIMES correspondent late last week from a close friend of Gov. Sulzer, who said that the Governor had discussed Mr. Gaffney as a good man for the place at the head of the Highways Department; that he understood Mr. Gaffney was in no sense a candidate for the job, but thought he could be "teased" into taking it. The very next day the first report that Mr. Murphy had been perniciously active in Mr. Gaffney's behalf was handed to a newspaper correspondent at the Capitol.

Yesterday's version was somewhat revised to-day by an informant in the Governor's confidence. To-day's report, anonymously contributed, was not to the effect that Mr. Murphy had urged that Mr. Gaffney be appointed, but ran as follows:

"The Governor is receiving letters from all parts of the State in favor of the candidacy of Mr. Gaffney. That shows that it was a well-planned affair. Mr. Murphy must have known of the use of Mr. Gaffney's name. Many legislators have come down to the Governor to tell him that unless the man appointed to succeed Reel is one acceptable to the organization his constructive legislation is doomed to defeat.

"It is asinine for Mr. Murphy to say that there is no trouble between the Executive Chamber and Tammany Hall. Does anybody believe it? At the end of January the Legislature was ahead of its record in the progress of work. Now it is a month behind. Not one piece of constructive legislation has been allowed to move in the last month. Furthermore, the nomination of Milton E. Gibbs, whom the Governor appointed a member of the State Hospital Commission, has been held in the Senate Finance Committee for more than a month. The word went out that Gibbs was to be turned down, but Tammany changed its mind. The name is still before the Senate Finance Committee.

"The game is to see what the Governor will do; to make him show his hand on appointments. Well, Mr. Murpny will wait a long time if that is his purpose. If the Legislature does not pass the bills, and the conditions are shown to require it, it will be brought back in special session. The Governor can wait here as long as the Legislature."

It is true that the Legislature is somewhat behind in its work and that none of the Governor's constructive bills have been passed as yet. But there is a reason for the delay. The necessity to investigate police conditions in New York City kept Senator Robert F. Wagner, Temporary President of the Senate, away from the capital for two whole weeks. In the absence of the Senate leader and the other members of the legislative committee no important legislation was attempted in the Senate. Regarding the Gibbs case, the organization leaders point to the charges against this appointee of the Governor, on which there was a hearing this afternoon, as accounting for the delay to take action in his case. All other nominations made by Gov. Sulzer, including that of Edward E. McCall, whom he proclaims as his personal appointee, for Public Service Commissioner, have been promptly confirmed.

Lieut. Gov. Martin H. Glynn, who is not suspected of being a Tammany man, and who, in any combat between the Governor and Tammany Hall where a vital principle was at issue, would certainly line up with Mr. Sulzer, when his attention was called to the widely circulated rumors of coming war, said:

"There is no foundation for the fear that the Governor's constructive legislation is in danger, or that it is being held up. In fact, at conferences which were held last Saturday and Sunday and which ran into Monday, I went over the entire legislative programme with some of the leaders who were here. We decided at these conferences that all the constructive legislation recommended by Gov. Sulzer was to be enacted, with the exception of a single measure for which in my opinion there is no real demand."

The one bill referred to by the Lieutenant Governor provides for a Board of Contract and Supply. This legislation was recommended by the Governor's committee of inquiry, but it was learned to-day from one of the members of that committee that they really did not expect to see it enacted.

"If the Governor is looking for a fight," said Mr. Glynn, with a laugh, "I am afraid he will have to manufacture it himself. I am going to tell the Governor that his constructive legislation is in no danger and that this sort of talk will do neither him nor the party any good."

For all the talk of peace, the possibilities of war are at hand. But if it comes it will be of the Governor's own making. No legislation that the Governor has proposed as yet is too progressive for Tammany Hall. His appointments in the past have not been displeasing to Tammany. But the Governor is not liked by the Tammany element in the Legislature. There is a suspicion in their hearts that he is trying his hand at building an organization to further his own political ambitions.

GIBBS ADMITS CHARGES.

Sulzer's Appointee Tells of Withholding Damage Funds from Clients.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—Milton E. Gibbs of Rochester, whose nomination by Gov. Sulzer to be a member of the State Hospital Commission has been held up by the Senate Finance Committee for the last five weeks, appeared before the committee to-day when a hearing was given on charges which had been sent anonymously from Monroe County.

Mr. Gibbs was charged with withholding a portion of funds turned over to him as attorney for two section hands on a railroad who were injured in an accident.

Mr. Gibbs was sworn and was asked to give his explanation of the affidavits. He said the claims were settled at $1,200, and that he retained $800 of this as fees, giving each man $200. He said that when the claim agent of the company appeared at his office the men signed releases and were informed by the agent as to the amount paid by the company. Mr. Gibbs deposited the drafts, and on the following day the men came for their money.

"I reminded the men that they had been willing to settle with the company, and I asked them if they would be willing to take pay on a basis of $300 each," said Mr. Gibbs. "They agreed, and I paid each $200, retaining the rest."

"You took $500 of a reward of $700?" Chairman Frawley asked.

"Well, if you put it that way, yes," Mr. Gibbs said.

The majority of the committee clearly indicated that they would not vote for the confirmation of Mr. Gibbs. After an executive session of the committee it was announced that action would be deferred until next week in order that the testimony might be examined.

GOSSIP OF THE CAPITAL.

Prospective and Probable Appointees of the New Administration.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Third Assistant Postmaster General Dockery is in a peculiar position. When he served in Congress he was known as one of the watchdogs of the Treasury. He was the most influential member of the Appropriation Committee, and in that capacity he would watch hungrily for a recommendation from the Post Office Department for some appropriation. When it came along Dockery would pounce upon it and strangle it to death.

Henceforth it will be Dockery's duty to recommend appropriations, and to watch some new and rising watchdog of the Treasury spring on them and choke them to death. The whirligig of time brings about its own revenges.

The President received a letter to-day, of which the following is a part: "An act which I think should be enforced is to compel dirty housekeepers to keep their homes clean. Water and soap are cheap enough. Boards of Health should look more closely after this. Poverty is no disgrace, but dirt is."

The President is too busy with the tariff to take the matter up at the present time.

When the Cabinet adjourned this morning there was a report, and it emanated from one of the members thereof, that a resolution had been unanimously passed requesting Secretary of Commerce Redfield to shave. According to the information received by the members of the press from this Cabinet member the matter was duly brought up, the resolution properly offered in regular form, and passed with President Wilson in the chair.

Efforts to obtain a denial from other Cabinet members proved futile. They only laughed and scurried away, and the President could not be seen. Mr. Redfield sports a pair of red Burnsides, which are the object of either envy or scorn on the part of his nine colleagues, all of whom are clean shaven. When he takes his place at the foot of the Cabinet table, alongside Secretary Wilson, the reflection from his flaming whiskers is said to disturb seriously the deliberations of the more thoughtful among those present. Others say that it does not interfere with their mental processes, but it does dazzle their eyes.

Edwin F. Sweet of Michigan has been selected as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. He served one term in Congress and was defeated for re-election last year. Mr. Sweet comes from Grand Rapids, and during his term in Congress served on no committees of any importance. Secretary Redfield also served only one term, and it is reported that Mr. Sweet's appointment was due to a personal acquaintance between the two new Congressmen, and not to any political influence.

Henry S. Breckenridge of Kentucky will probably be Assistant Secretary of War, though Secretary Garrison does not want to make any change in that office immediately. Mr. Breckenridge is editor of The Lexington Herald, a son of former Inspector General Breckenridge, and a member of the famous Kentucky family of that name. What lends special interest to Mr. Breckenridge's probable selection is that he is a Champ Clark man. The impression is general that the President is bending over backward in his desire to soothe and conciliate Champ Clark.

Thomas Nelson Page is striking such obstacles in his effort to become Ambassador to Rome that it looks as if he will have to go on writing novels and histories. He hails from Virginia, and ex-Gov. Montague and Representative Glass are backing ex-Lieutenant Governor Joseph E. Willard of that State for a diplomatic post. Mr. Willard is put forward as a progressive candidate. He is the principal owner of the Willard Hotel in this city. Tnere is very little chance of Willard getting a place, either, but he and Page seem to be checkmating each other.

OCEAN MAIL DELAYS DUE TO SLOW LINERS

Post Office Answers Complaints That Fast Steamships Have Been Withdrawn from Atlantic.

WINTER TRAFFIC TOO LIGHT

Mails Not Profitable Enough to Run a Full Service in That Season, Say the Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Postmaster General Burleson, on being asked to-day by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent for an explanation in response to the complaints by business men that fast mail steamers have been taken off the transatlantic lines this Winter, frankly confessed that the subject was entirely new to him, and he was unable to furnish any information in regard to it. The new Postmaster General said that since taking office his time had been occupied exclusively in receiving candidates for office and other visitors. But he was willing that any explanation the department could make should be furnished by Joseph Stewart, the Second Assistant Postmaster General, whose jurisdiction includes ocean mails. He, thereupon, prepared the following statement:

"During the Winter season the passenger traffic between America and Europe is light, and as a consequence it is customary for the British and the German steamship companies to reduce the frequency of the sailings of their fast steamers in the transatlantic service and to take off a part of their vessels. These vessels are sometimes employed in cruises among the West Indies and on the Mediterranean. The Winter season is also the season when the steamship companies overhaul their vessels, because that is the season of light traffic. The American Line maintains its regular schedule because it is under a contract with the department for ocean mail service under the subsidy act of 1891, but in that case it is customary to allow this line to blank some trips during the Winter in order to overhaul its vessels.

"The question of the amount of compensation which the United States pays for the mail service does not enter into the question of frequency of trips maintained by the steamship companies except by the American Line. This Government pays for the transportation of only the mails dispatched from the United States, and does not pay for the transportation of the mails to the United States. The American Line is paid for service on the mileage basis for each outgoing trip. Consequently, when a trip is not made no compensation is paid. Service otherwise performed by other steamship lines is paid for on the pound rate basis under the provisions of general law.

"All mails for dispatch from the United States are duly carried and paid for at the regular rates during the Winter season the same as during other times, and as the mails are heavier during that season the compensation paid to vessels carrying on the pound rate basis is more than at other periods. Aside from the American Line we have no control over the schedules of the steamship lines.

"It is apparent that the reduction in frequency of sailings on the individual lines is due altogether to considerations other than mail pay. Aside from service by the American Line, which is under regular contract, the department must depend entirely upon such schedules as may be furnished by the steamship companies to meet the requirements of their ordinary business. We cannot require specific frequency and schedule without a formal contract. We cannot contract with vessels under the law of 1891 unless they fly the American flag.

"The rate paid under this act is large and amounts to a subsidy. It is not customary to enter into formal contracts for service on the high seas excepting under the authority of the act of 1891 as above mentioned. The compensation paid for service on the pound rate basis, although it is adequate for the service performed, would probably not be sufficient to warrant a transatlantic line in making a contract for maintaining greater frequency and speed than is maintained for their ordinary business purposes."

a commission of five persons with ample authority for the investigation.

"I have no doubt that this commission will co-operate as fully as possible with your Commissioners in a joint effort to eradicate this form of vice."

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—In an effort to obtain accurate information regarding the necessary expenditures of working girls and women, the Consumers' League of this city is having thousands of condensed account books printed and will distribute them among workers in mercantile and industrial plants. If the bill for a minimum wage commission becomes a law, the information obtained by the league will be placed in the hands of the commission.

HARRISBURG, March 12.—Pennsylvania will have a State Department for the Suppression of Vice if a bill introduced in the Senate yesterday becomes a law. Under the terms of the measure the departmnt would be conducted by a "Vice Commissioner," to be appointed by the Governor. The proposed law would require physicians, surgeons, druggists, or other persons "having knowledge of the existence of cases of certain diseases within the State," to report the same to the department.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 12.—A bill has been offered in the Ohio Legislature to require all persons or corporations employing five or more women to report to the State Inspector of Workshops and Factories giving detailed information as to the wage the women receive and the hours of occupation. The information is to be turned over to a State Industrial Commission. Governor Cox has announced that he is in favor of a minimum wage law for women, but the bill as drawn does not provide for that feature.

LANSING, Mich., March 12.—In a statement indorsing a proposal for a joint vice investigation by Illinois and Michigan, Gov. Ferris urged that the Michigan investigation extend beyond so-called white slave conditions.

"I want every city in Michigan investigated regarding the social evil. What we want is a cleaning up at home."

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 12.—The legislative committee appointed to investigate the causes of white slavery and the effect of low wages in that relation was organized to-day under the Chairmanship of Senator Gates of Los Angeles. The inquiry will begin at once. Gov. Johnson declared he was in favor of a National campaign for a minimum wage scale for women.

MILWAUKEE, March 12.—A working-woman needs $8.90 a week to support herself in Milwaukee, according to the opinion of the Milwaukee Federation of Charities, expressed in a report made public to-day. The report urges young women who expect to support themselves to keep away from the city unless they have an assured income of at least $9 a week, domestic service excepted.

LACROSSE, Wis., March 12.—B. S. Steadwell, President of the World's Purity Federation, to-day issued a call to the pastors of all denominations in the United States urging them to make Nov. 9 next Purity Sunday. This Sunday will be during the week of the World's Purity Congress at Minneapolis.

ALBANY, March 12.—Replying to an inquiry received from Chicago, Gov. Sulzer says he favors "a minimum wage law for women along lines that shall be just and fair to all concerned."

LATIN AMERICA HEEDS WILSON

FURTHER STATEMENTS SOON

Electoral Reform Great Need of Southern Republics to Insure Stability.

POLICY PRAISED IN MEXICO

Minister de la Barra Says That Deeds of Like Character Will Spread Wilson's Fame.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—President Wilson's statement yesterday of his purpose to co-operate with the Latin-American republics to promote the interests common to them and the United States is only preliminary to another and possibly several more declarations, which will not be long in coming. It is known that Mr. Wilson cherishes the belief that the moral force of his Administration will be able to work out great reforms in all the Latin-American republics.

President Wilson thinks that the Latin-American republics' need is electoral machinery which shall lead to genuine self-government. No subject of discussion among the representatives of Central and South American republics here to-day has so absorbed their attention. They have received the statement of the President's views with expressions of satisfaction.

Dispatches received to-day at the State Department indicate that the statement has already had effect in more than one Central American republic. This was evidenced in the hesitation in the movements of men believed to be plotting (simultaneously with the change of Administration in the United States) attempts to overthrow Governments that have had the friendly countenance of the Taft Administration. These conspirators have been under observation for months, and their plans are more thoroughly understood than generally supposed. Their conviction has been that, with the installation of a new Administration in the United States, revolutions would become easier. This notion is responsible for great activity in the juntas in New York, New Orleans, and elsewhere. But the incoming Administration's call for order has made these gentry pause.

President Wilson is to believe that a Government based on the consent of the governed should be safeguarded by an electoral system modeled on the best yet tried. There seems a strong possibility that the trial now being made in Cuba of the electoral system of the United States will serve as an example to be followed in other Latin-American countries.

It is understood that President Wilson intends to take up the question whether such a change cannot be brought about in the method of conducting elections in Mexico and the Central and South American republics. While this effort will express itself in general declarations and the influence of benevolent and high-minded example in international intercourse, there will be specific refusal to entertain relations where there has been conspicuous failure of enlightened self-government. For instance, it is now well understood that there will be no recognition of the Huerta Government except as it may be necessary for the protection of the life and property of Americans in Mexico. Thus the task that the President has set for himself will involve international intercourse that for the time will be disagreeable, but in its broad and humanitarian motive will be justified.

POLICY ENCOURAGES MEXICO.

Minister de la Barra Says Latin America Will Like Wilson.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, March 12.—Francisco de la Barra, Minister of Foreign Affairs, discussing to-day President Wilson's policy, said that, if the President of the United States followed his words with deeds he would greatly increase his fame and popularity in Mexico and in all the rest of Latin America. Señor de la Barra commented the policy was one of honesty, which he said was the best policy. President Wilson's statement came as a distinct relief here, in view of the reported mobilization of United States troops north of this republic and the presence of American warships in Mexican waters.

David de la Fuente to-day took the oath of office as Minister of Communications and Public Parks, Minister de la Barra administering the pledge. In addition to the constitutionally provided oath, Minister de la Fuente swore to work for the establishment of peace. He was congratulated heartily by all who were present at the ceremony.

Members of the British colony here sent a protest to the State Department to-day against the attacks on Ambassador Wilson, expressing their thanks for the protection and care given to foreigners in general and particularly to the British by the American Embassy during the bombardment in the streets of the capital.

Newspapers here continue their daily discussion of the probable appointment of a new Ambassador here. The rumor of the appointment of Mr. Slayden caused much uneasiness owing to the fact that he is a Texan.

A report reached here this afternoon that Alberto Guadjardo, commanding a detachment of Carranzistas, had surrendered with all his forces. No confirmation could be obtained officially.

No news is reaching the capital from the seceding State of Sonora, owing to the interruption of the telegraph service. There was a rumor here to-day that Hermosillo, capital of that State, was besieged by Federal forces, and that an attack was expected at any time.

Gen. Pascual Orozco, Jr., arrived in the capital to-day. He was accompanied by a large number of his followers and some of his principal lieutenants. A special train left Mexico City this morning to meet the former rebel leader's party up the railway line. A gigantic demonstration was made at the railroad station on his arrival. Gen. Orozco was met at the station by Enrique Zepeda, Governor of the Federal District, who was there as the representative of President Huerta.

Among the well-known men with him were Señors Campos, Terrazas, and Caraveo. Gen. Orozco refused to be interviewed to-night. He went to a hotel at once.

The police had difficulty in keeping the crowd of curious men and women from the hotel. The doors were closed to prevent the policemen from being overpowered. A great mob tried to catch a glimpse of the northern military leader.

Gen. Orozco will have an interview with President Huerta to-morrow. Members of his party said to-night peace could be arranged easily.

REBELS TAKE AGUA PRIETA.

Provisional Government Promises Protection to Americans.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., March 12.—Agua Prieta fell to Constitutionalist sympathizers who crossed the border from Douglas late to-day. Not a shot was fired. Gen. Ojeda, commanding the Federal garrison with 500 men, evacuated the town, leaving thirty rural police to guard Federal interests. After the surrender of the border town 650 State troops under Col. Elias Galles arrived and a provisional municipal government was set up.

Late this afternoon twenty-four of the guards left by Gen. Ojeda deserted to the rebel standard and the six who refused to join the Constitutionalistas were driven from the town. Unarmed men from Douglas crossed the border to-night and reinforced the rebel garrison. The new arrivals found 18,000 rounds of ammunition, rifles and camp supplies left by the Federals in their haste. To-night those in control of the border town celebrated the bloodless victory.

"Viva la Constitution!" was shouted through the streets.

Although the troops paraded in hilarious fashion Col. Galles said no American need have fear. He sent word to Douglas for all refugees to return and be assured of protection.

Riding worn army horses and hauling three machine guns, Gen. Ojeda's Federals marched slowly toward the Naco Mountains toward Nogales. The move was viewed by a reinforced United States patrol. At Naco 100 Federal troops are ready to join Ojeda and at Cananea 500 will reinforce him. That will leave every point in Northern Sonora, except Nogales, in the possession of Constitutionalistas.

Col. N. M. Diequez, with 500 State troops, is making a forced march to a point twenty miles south of Naco, to intercept Gen. Ojeda's Federals. The State troops left their camp twenty miles south of Agua Prieta at noon.

Only one woman, Mrs. Anna Gatliff, keeper of a curio store, remained in Agua Prieta last night.

BRYAN MISSED DANGER SIGN.

Red Card Not on Message to Ambassador When Signed, Perhaps.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Why William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, signed an official commendatory telegram to Henry Lane Wilson, American Ambassador to Mexico, had not been made clear to-night, and it was said probably never would be told. From the State Department viewpoint, the incident was closed, and there was no intention of making a scapegoat of anybody.

No evidence had been produced to connect Huntington Wilson, the hold-over Assistant Secretary of State, with the dispatch. Mr. Wilson did not write the highly eulogistic telegram which Col. Bryan signed.

It was prepared in the course of departmental routine by the chief of one of the State Department divisions and went to Col. Bryan with other papers that required his signature. Exoneration of Mr. Wilson was clinched by the facts that the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan were guests of honor at a dinner in the Wilson residence to-night, and that Col. Bryan asked Mr. Wilson to act as Secretary of State during the Colonel's coming visit to Nebraska.

Bryan's Recall Too Late.

As a Washington dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES has told, Secretary Bryan signed the message approving Ambassador Wilson's manner of handling the Mexican situation. That much has been established. It seems to be equally well-established that the Secretary did not read the telegram before putting his name to it. When Col. Bryan learned that such a communication had been transmitted to Ambassador Wilson over his signature, he telegraphed to the Ambassador that he desired to recall his eulogistic utterances. But Mr. Wilson had construed the original telegram to be intended as much for other members of the American colony in Mexico City as for himself, and had given copies of it to newspapers there and to American newspaper correspondents, who had telegraphed it to their newspapers in the United States.

Secretary Bryan began an investigation. He wished to find out how the Secretary of State could have signed such an important document, amounting to an approval of the policy pursued by Ambassador Wilson under the Taft Administration, without having had his attention called to its vital bearing on the Mexican situation. What he found out was this:

The telegram had been prepared by an official of the department, who had sent it to Secretary Bryan with other papers. But why had not its importance been called to Col. Bryan's attention? It had—so the explanation ran. When a paper containing statements of consequence is placed before the Secretary of State for his signature there is attached to it a little red card three-quarters of an inch wide and three inches long. That red card is intended as a danger signal. It means "Look out! Here is something that you must examine carefully." The official who wrote the telegram for Secretary Bryan's signature asserted that when the message left his office a little red card was attached to it.

Col. Bryan had been warned about the little red cards. He had been told he must never overlook one. Any paper that had a red card fastened to it with a clip was to be examined by the Secretary with the greatest care before signing it. The question to be answered in the investigation, therefore, was whether a red card was attached to the telegram of approval addressed "Wilson, American Embassy, Mexico City."

The clerk in the Secretary's office to whom is entrusted the duty of seeing that the Secretary's mail is presented to him for signature asserted that he had no recollection of seeing the little red card appended to the telegraph form when it lay on Col. Bryan's desk. Certainly Col. Bryan did not notice it. The question of the hour in the State Department—in fact, the question of a good many hours there—is: What became of the little red card? A search under Col. Bryan's desk and in every other part of his big office has failed to reveal it. It has not been found in the room where the telegram was prepared, and nobody has appeared to testify that he picked it up in the State Department corridor.

Col. Bryan is not disposed to blame anybody for trying to "put one across" on him. Nor is there reason to believe that the Secret Service fund of the State Department, which is used for purposes seldom made public, is to be drawn on to obtain the services of expert detectives to clear up this mysterious occurrence which has clouded the first few bright hours of the Commoner's administration of the foreign relations of the United States.

No Reflection on Wilson.

According to official records of the State Department Ambassador Wilson stands second to none in the department's estimation.

A story was printed to-day that Vice President Marshall had taken up the cudgels in Ambassador Wilson's behalf and was trying to have him retained as the diplomatic representative of the United States in Mexico in the face of a desire on the part of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan to get rid of the Ambassador as quickly and emphatically as possible. When the Vice President recovered from his vexation over that yarn he punctured it as follows:

"I have never spoken to or addressed the President, the Secretary of State, or any other member of the Administration in reference to Henry Lane Wilson, and there is no earthly basis for the statement published beyond the bare suspicion that because Ambassador Wilson and I were graduated from Wabash College, and his brother, John L. Wilson, was a classmate of mine, I would attempt to interfere in his behalf. Personally, the relations between Ambassador Wilson and myself are cordial, but the handling of the Mexican situation is the business of the Administration, and not my private and social business."

BARS CIVIL COURTS TO LABOR LEADERS

Mother Jones and Associates Must Face Trial by Court Martial.

GET FIVE DAYS FOR APPEAL

Court Which Issued Writ of Prohibition Had No Jurisdiction in the Case.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 12.—In the Circuit Court this afternoon Judge Samuel B. Littlepage gave his final decision in the cases of Mother Jones, the aged labor agitator; C. H. Boswell, editor of the Labor Argus, and Charles Batley and Charles Bentley, organizers for the United Mine Workers of America, who sought to be tried by a civil court rather than by court-martial on charges of conspiracy to murder growing out of the coal strike in the Paint Creek district. Judge Littlepage, basing his decision on the recent decision of the State Supreme Court of Appeals, cancelled the writ of prohibition, and the court-martial will now proceed with the trial of the prisoners.

The decision of Judge Littlepage was awaited with great interest. The charge against the leaders grew out of the recent killings in the Paint Creek and Cabin Creek districts. The miners have held before the military court that the strike was a sort of war and that the ethics of killing in war governed. Those killed, they said, were not murdered in the legal sense, but fell in warfare.

In giving his decision, Judge Littlepage expressed sympathy with the miners, but said that it had been settled that the Governor of the State and the Legislature had power to declare any part of the State in a state of siege, and to establish a military commission to try offenders against the law in such territory. The court had no jurisdiction in the case, he said.

At the request of counsel for the petitioners, Judge Littlepage granted a suspension of the order for five days in order to give time to carry an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Judge Littlepage in closing his decision said that he as a Judge was unable to take charge of affairs in the strike zone. Attorney General Lilly had intimated that Gov. Hatfield would turn the strike over to him for settlement. Judge Littlepage said, however, that he would be willing to undertake the settlement of the strike as an individual if the Governor and the coal operators would agree to such action.

Power to Declare Martial Law.

In his decision Judge Littlepage said:

"Upon hearing of the plea in abatement filed in this cause the court at once found itself wrestling with the plain question as to whether the Circuit Court of a State had jurisdiction to issue a writ of prohibition to prevent a duly organized court-martial appointed and created by the Governor of this State from detaining and punishing persons within a district in which martial law has been regularly declared by the Governor and the military of this State.

"The law governing the authority of the Governor of this State to declare martial law to prevent insurrection or riot in any town, city, county or district in a county is probably not well and thoroughly understood, for in West Virginia up to this time we have not had many court-martial sitting, and when this writ was applied for I did with the greatest interest, sympathy and deep-set determination readily consent to grant it under the firm conviction that the court martial court sitting at Cabin Creek nor any other tribunal known to the American law had any authority whatever to deprive a human being of life, liberty or property without a trial by jury of twelve men.

"But upon the final hearing of the cause, with the assistance of probably the ablest lawyers, the strongest arguments, and the most thorough research and examination of the law, I find that in this State, particularly since the decision of our Supreme Court of Appeals, recently rendered in the habeas corpus cases of Nance and Mays, the Circuit Court of a county has absolutely no authority to interfere with a duly organized court-martial acting under and by virtue of the statute of this State and our Supreme Court's decisions construing our State Constitution."

Talk of State-wide Strike.

A local newspaper this afternoon said that between 50,000 and 60,000 non-union miners in the West Virginia coal fields would lay down their tools and walk out in a State-wide strike, fostered by the United Mine Workers of America, on April 1 or soon after.

Labor leaders say that the crisis in the twenty-year effort to unionize West Virginia mines has arrived, and that from now on the entire efforts of the United Mine Workers' organization will concentrate in the effort to win this State to unionism.

Testimony in the case of the forty-nine prisoners under trial by court-martial closed to-night, and arguments were begun at once. The findings of the court must be reviewed by Gov. Hatfield, and it may be Friday before the verdict will be known.

PACKERS HELD TO ACCOUNT.

Housewives Demand the Reason for Rise in Meat Prices Now.

With the price of meats on the rise and the newspaper reports of a prospective rise even in beef, Mrs. Julian Heath, National President of the Housewives' League, sent yesterday afternoon to the executive office at the Chicago stock yards this telegram:

"The National Housewives' League, representing the housewives of the country, requests your explanation of present rise in price of meats. Our investigation brings out fact that retailers state they are unable to account for sudden jump. The league awaits your version of facts before going further."

What she meant by "going further" Mrs. Heath did not care to say last evening, but explained that she and her colleagues were simply trying to pin down the responsibility for the leaps in the market costs. Last year, she said, the packers blamed it on the ranchmen, and the ranchmen blamed it on the short crops, but she said that explanation could not be used this year, and she was interested to know just what the packers would have to say. Retailers had told her privately that the big men in the packing world had forced the rises. She wants to know.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 12.—The big packers here deny the prediction from New York that meat prices are to be advanced. Samuel Tilden, for many years with Armour & Co., and representatives of Sulzberger & Co ridiculed the idea, saying there was no immediate prospect of a rise. They also said they had heard nothing of any letter of protest to the Chicago packers from the Housewives' League of New York.

As a matter of fact the wholesale price of beef has receded materially of late. On Monday there was an unusually heavy run of cattle for this season of the year amounting to 27,000 head, while 69,000 hogs and 26,000 sheep were received. This brought about declines of from 10 to 15 cents a hundredweight in prices of all three commodities, and further declines of about the same amount occurred yesterday and to-day in both beef and pork, notwithstanding enormously reduced receipts.

There has been, however, a marked increase in the price of prime veal, due to an increased demand always noticed around Easter. Best vealers to-day climbed to $12 a hundredweight, thus equaling the high mark of last year.

MAKING SUFFRAGISTS PAY.

Writ for $3,040 Served on Mr. Lawrence—More Meetings Broken Up.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 12.—The Government has caused a writ to be served on Pethick Lawrence for £608, ($3,040,) the balance of the amount claimed by the Director of Public Prosecutions, on account of the expenses of the prosecution of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Pankhurst last May, when they were sentenced for conspiracy in connection with suffragette window-smashing raids.

Bailiffs on behalf of the Government recently seized Mr. Lawrence's household furniture, which realized £285.

Two West End firms are bringing actions to test the liability of Mrs. Pankhurst, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence for damage done to shop-windows.

A warrant for her rearrest has been issued against Miss Lenton, whom the Home Secretary released on parole on the ground of her ill health while she was awaiting trial for alleged conspiracy in the burning of a pavilion at Kew Gardens. Miss Lenton disappeared from the house where she was being nursed.

Two more suffragette meetings were broken up to-night.

COUNT HURRIES TO COURT.

D'Arschot, Secretary of Belgian Cabinet, Testifies in Will Contest.

Count Guillame d'Arschot, Secretary of the Cabinet of the King of Belgium and nephew by marriage of the late Countess d'Arschot, whose will is being contested, took the stand yesterday before Surrogate Cohalan. Four nieces and a nephew accuse Count d'Arschot and Joseph De Tours Lentilhon of 27 West Tenth Street, who are the chief beneficiaries, of using undue influence upon their aunt, who, before her marriage, was Wilhelmina Detwold of New York.

Count d'Arschot arrived yesterday morning in the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. and started immediately for the Surrogates' Court. He was served on his way with a subpoena, and when he arrived was immediately placed on the stand, where he remained until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when he said he was quite fatigued and asked for an adjournment.

As the Count spoke no English, it was necessary to question him through an interpreter. There is no official French interpreter in the Surrogates' Court, so Pierre Mali, the Belgian Consul, a witness in the case, served until the official French interpreter of the Supreme Court could be called over.

After he had asked the usual preliminary questions, Laflin Kellogg, counsel for the contestants, moved for the introduction as evidence of a number of letters written by the Count to his aunt and the aunt's replies. Several of these disclosed the displeasure of the Countess d'Arschot at the marriage of her nephew to the daughter of Nubar Pasha, Prime Minister of Egypt.

At the afternoon session Count d'Arschot was questioned as to his knowledge of the possibility of another will being drawn, subsequent to a testament executed in 1894. The reply was that he had not considered the matter. He denied that it was his purpose in coming to America last year to look into the matter. Count d'Arschot admitted, however, that he had been in New York but twenty-four hours when he caused his aunt's physician to be changed. This was done, he explained, because he thought that she was not getting proper treatment. He was uncertain about matters of detail and in response to one question said rather sharply:

"These are questions of detail which I had not expected. I am not a criminal accused here."

The witness said that he had procured a German doctor who suggested that another physician be employed.

"He was an American doctor with an Italian name," he said.

"Dr. Jacoby." Mr. Kellogg explained.

Count d'Arschot related how he had employed Johnston de Forrest to draw up the will at the recommendation of Consul Mali.

He and his aunt talked over the will on several occasions before the will was drawn. After the first draft was made the Countess corrected several items. The witness said that he was not present when the will was executed, as he did not wish to be mixed up in the matter.

SAYS CLARK INTERFERED.

Supt. Reel Tells of Efforts to Make Him Pay Bills He Disapproved.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 12.—Gov. Sulzer to-day found the letter which was transmitted to his office on Feb. 25 by C. Gordon Reel, who was removed a few days ago from the position of Superintendent of Highways. Mr. Reel complained that the Governor had taken no notice of the communication when he said the Superintendent had not aided the Commission of Inquiry in investigating the Highway Department. It was explained to-day that the letter had been delivered in the Governor's absence from the city, and that it had been mislaid.

In his letter Mr. Reel complained that the commission had failed to charge John A. Bensel, State Engineer, and Duncan W. Peck, Superintendent of Public Works, members of the Highway Commission, with their share of the responsibility for the commission's acts.

"If acts of the commission are to be questioned," Mr. Reel wrote, "it should be borne in mind that the commission is composed of three men and that my judgment did not always prevail, but, on the contrary, I had at times to disregard the acts of the commission to protect the State."

In this connection Mr. Reel told the Governor that by excluding the use of patented paving materials and other materials ordered by the commission he had saved the State more than $500,000.

The former Superintendent also told the Governor he thought it "significant that The Albany Argus has ceased its attacks since I explained to Mr. J. G. Murphy of Troy that the prices paid to some of his friends and associates in several large repair jobs and the quality of work performed will not bear close inspection."

Mr. Murphy, who is the son of the late Edward Murphy, Jr., former United States Senator, is a part owner of The Albany Argus, which had bitterly attacked Mr. Reel. Mr. Murphy is the Democratic leader of Rensselaer County.

"It may be opportune to advise you," Mr. Reel continues, "that, in January, Mr. William F. Clark importuned me several times to pay for some asphalt which was rejected last Summer. After I had repeatedly refused him he told me the Committee of Inquiry wanted it done. I told him to have the Committe of Inquiry tell me so. On Jan. 28 he furnished Mr. Delaney with a memorandum of this matter, and on Feb. 1 I gave Mr. Norton a memorandum explaining the whole situation. Mr. Norton was immediately convinced that the bill should not be paid, and I have heard nothing further from Mr. Clark."

Mr. Clark was relieved from the position of secretary of the Commission of Inquiry after an investigation of the report that he had used the name of the Governor in requesting State officials to release Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan Hospital.

SIR HENRY LOWTHER HERE.

Latin West Coast Republics Expect Boom from Canal, Says Diplomat.

Sir Henry Lowther, British Minister to Chile for the last four years, arrived here yesterday on the Royal Mail Steam Packet Oruba via Panama, on his way to Copenhagen, where he will represent his Government for another four years. He said that Chile was progressing commercially, and that business conditions there were good at the present time. The republics on the west coast of South America, Sir Henry said, were all expecting a boom in trade when the Panama Canal opened in 1915. Asked if Chile was making extensive preparations for the increase in her commerce, he replied that the Chileans were waiting for further development.

Princess Marie of Schleswig-Holstein was a passenger on the Oruba.

SERVANT IS BRIDE OF INVENTOR TURNER

Man Who Improved Oil Refining Apparatus Gets Married in Hoboken.

HE IS 66 YEARS OLD; SHE 21

Falls in Love in Brooklyn, Gets License in Hoboken, and Marries on a Long Island Dispensation.

Through the return yesterday of the marriage license issued in Hoboken on last Thursday to Charles W. Turner of 5 Montague Terrace, Brooklyn, it was ascertained that the inventor had been married in Hoboken last Saturday afternoon by the Rev. Father Leopold Hochschneider of Sts. Peter and Paul's Church, to Miss Anna Fallon, with whom he disappeared from his sister's home on Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, more than a week ago.

Turner is the inventor of an oil refining apparatus and is said to have $250,000. In applying for the marriage license he gave his age as sixty-six years, while his bride said she was twenty-one. The couple met less than three weeks ago when Miss Fallon was employed by Miss Caroline Turner, the sister of the bridegroom, as a servant in her household. Mr. Turner had his home with his sister.

Miss Fallon was discharged by Miss Turner on Monday, March 3 and on the same day Mr. Turner left home. It was rumored in the neighborhood that the couple had gone away together and Mr. Turner's relatives tried to locate him and prevent the marriage. Miss Fallon did not return to her home at 115 Jay Street, Brooklyn, and the first clue to the whereabout of either of them was obtained when it became known that on last Thursday they had been refused a marriage license in Jersey City by the Bureau of Vital Statistics, because a witness who was with them knew little of them. Later, the same day, however, a license was issued by the authorities in Hoboken. When they tried to get a clergyman to marry them, however, they were refused on all sides.

Friday the pair visited the parish house of Sts. Peter and Paul's Church and requested Father Hochschneider to marry them. When the priest learned that Mr. Turner was not a Catholic, he told them they must obtain a dispensation. Saturday afternoon they returned with one signed by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor George Kaupert, Vicar General of the Diocese of Long Island, and issued from All Saints' Church, Throop Avenue, Brooklyn. The witnesses to the marriage were Miss Theresa Gaehringer and Mary B. Kriegman, both teachers employed in the Parochial School attached to Sts. Peter and Paul's parish.

Miss Turner said yesterday that when her brother left home he had informed her he was going to Washington to consult his patent attorneys. It was not until Thursday that she learned of his marriage intentions.

WAIT 29 YEARS FOR LUNCH.

Four Boys Who Came Here in Steerage Reunite at Hotel Astor.

Aboard the steamship Neckar, bound from Bremen to New York, twenty-nine years ago four seventeen-year-old boys found themselves assigned to a single room in the steerage. The combined capital of the four was hardly more than the cost of their trip. The same four boys met at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon for a reunion and luncheon.

This time their combined capital amounted to over $3,000,000, and was represented in the plant of a moving-picture film manufacturing company, of which one of the boys is President; a company which makes candy in which another is a partner; a fur store owned by the third boy, and an importing house partly owned by the fourth.

The idea of having a reunion originated two weeks ago when Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Film Company, with offices at 1,660 Broadway, met Julius Klugman, a furrier, on Broadway. It was the first time they had met since the Neckar landed them in New York in 1884. Klugman began to tell how he carried Laemmle to the deck of the Neckar when he was praying that he might die on the thirteenth day of his sea sickness. That led to a discussion of the other two who had been in the same steerage room, and it was found that all four were living in Manhattan and that all were the fathers of families and were engaged in business here.

Those who tended the luncheon besides Mr. Klugman and Mr. Laemmle were Julius Hilder of 235 West Seventieth Street, a partner in the importing firm of Samstag & Hilder, and Leo Hirshfield, Vice President of the Stern-Saalberg Company.

"Look us over, young man," Mr. Laemmle said to a TIMES reporter at the luncheon, "and see if you think America spells death to opportunity, as some of the muckrakers say. Here we are only 46 years old, and each of us has had plenty of fun and plenty of fight, and while we were dead broke when we came, the Government never had us for public charges. I remember my first job was as errand boy for a drug store, and I took it largely because it offered a chance of a warm place to sit through a cold Winter night."

WISE FLAYS HAWTHORNE.

Calls Him and Associates "Bunko Steerers" and "Green Goods Men."

District Attorney Wise summed up yesterday for the Government in the trial of Julian Hawthorne, Albert Freeman, Dr. William J. Morton, and Josiah Quincy in the Federal District Court before Judge Mayer on the charge of having used the mails to defraud. The case began on Nov. 27 and has continued ever since, except for a delay of about three weeks caused by the illness of Judge Hough, who presided during the first half of the trial. Judge Mayer will sum up this morning, and the jury is likely to begin deliberations at about lunch time.

Mr. Wise was unsparing in his adjectives. "Green goods men," "bunko steerers," and "swindlers" were some of the epithets he applied to them, and he spoke of the men who went to Maine to incorporate the mining companies at the bidding of Mr. Quincy as his company of "trained seals." When Judge Mayer objected to the District Attorney's vehemence, he said:

"We all know that some of these men bear honored names. Theirs is the greater crime, for they have prostituted them. The penitentiaries are full of men with honored names, which they have used to defraud others."

Reading a statement that the promoters had found a "big, steep bluff" on the Diabase Peninsula, where the Hawthorne mines were supposed to be, Mr. Wise exclaimed:

"A big, steep bluff. That's what it's been all the time. They didn't discover any silver or iron mines, but they did find one of the finest and largest holes in the entire country."

Mr. Wise referred to the fact that Mr. Hawthorne in a letter to the Post Office Inspectors had spoken of Theodore Roosevelt, William Jennings Bryan, Whitelaw Reid, and Joseph H. Choate as his friends. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., counsel for Dr. Morton, protested, asking whether Mr. Wise was referring to the visit his father paid one day to the court room. "Some of the assays of the defendants," Mr. Wise told the jury, "were as high as 40,000 ounces of silver to the ton. Still it was on such unreasonable statements as these," said he, "that the defendants in 1909 continued to bunko the public though they knew as early as 1909 their properties were worthless."

DR. FRIEDMANN TELLS HOW HE FOUND CURE

Explains to Ottawa Convention That He Sought 23 Years for Harmless Bacillus.

FIRST TRIED IT ON HIMSELF

Refuses to Divulge Secret Until Government Doctors Recognize Improvement in Patients.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, March 12.—Dr. F. F. Friedmann to-day made his first public explanation since his arrival in America of the discovery of the vaccine which he says will cure tuberculosis. He spoke at the Russell Theatre, addressing the convention of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. He read his speech in English.

Dr. Friedmann arrived at the theatre soon after the opening of the convention and received a cordial welcome. The Duke of Connaught, who was on the platform, at once began a conversation with the German visitor. The Mayor of Ottawa and the President of the association, Adam Beck, both referred in their addresses to the visit of Dr. Friedmann as a notable event. Dr. Friedmann began by discussing tests of his vaccine as a preventive of tuberculosis, and expressed the hope that this would be found to be the great use of his discovery in the future.

"I have found this remedy harmless when I used it for patients from earliest childhood to the most advanced age in all forms of application—subcutaneously, intramuscular, and intravenous—even in big doses," said Dr. Friedmann, "and equally efficient in all forms of tuberculosis, pulmonary, bone, joint, glandular, and skin. Aside from absolutely hopeless cases, whose fates were already sealed, the remedy has proved its efficiency in most instances.

"To obtain the ideal, to eradicate tuberculosis as an endemic disease, it is necessary not only to cure the tubercular individuals now living, but also to protect the future generations from this infection by a method following in principle Jenner's vaccination. So far I have vaccinated 350 children, varying in age from one hour to three years. Most of these children were living in tubercular environments and much exposed to infection from this source. The earliest immunizations were made seventeen months ago; all the children are well to-day and are free from all symptoms of scrofula or tuberculosis.

"There is a well-founded hope, therefore, that this will prove the right way, and the one to which our future efforts will have to be directed."

Dr. Friedmann said he had spent twenty-three years in research work to find a tuberculin that was not toxic and virulent, and having found it, tried it first of all on himself.

He discarded human tubercle bacilli, he said, after many experiments, because he feared the results were too dangerous. The end of his research came, he asserted, when he found a bacillus which originatd in a cold-blooded animal—the turtle—which bacillus became avirulent and atoxic after frequent transplantation.

"When that condition was reached," he said, "I injected it into myself, then into patients infected with tuberculosis, then into healthy children in tubercular surroundings. I have found the remedy invariably harmless."

Leaving the theatre Dr. Friedmann went to the Water Street Hospital, where nearly forty patients had gathered for treatment. He refused to treat the more advanced cases, but selected some incipient cases and administered the vaccine to about a dozen persons.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Government tests of Dr. F. Friedmann's tuberculosis vaccine may be delayed indefinitely by the refusal of the Berlin physician to impart to the Public Health Service the method of making vaccine from his cultures or the size of the dose. Dr. Friedmann has notified Surgeon General Blue that he will not divulge his secret until the Government physicians have recognized improvement in patients treated by him.

Governor Is Asked to Aid German Doctor in Getting License.

ALBANY, March 13.—Gov. Sulzer was asked to-day to aid Dr. F. F. Friedmann, the German tuberculosis specialist, in obtaining a license to practice medicine in New York. Dr. William Sirovitch of New York City asked the Governor to use his influence with the State Board of Regents, which issues such licenses.

"The Governor told me," said Dr. Sirovitch, "that he hoped every opportunity would be extended to Dr. Friedmann to demonstrate his discovery."

BLACKHAND VISITS DANIELS.

But Navy Secretary Sees in $10,000 Demand a Joke of His Young Sons.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—When Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, got back to his department from the Cabinet meeting to-day his aid, Lieut. Commander Leigh Palmer, saluted him and said: "Mr. Secretary, I have the honor to report, sir, that you have been threatened by the black hand."

There on the Secretary's big desk was a sheet of paper on which the sign of the black handers had been drawn, and scrawled beneath it were the words: "Put $10,000 on the Ole Stump or Beware of the Black Hand."

Mr. Daniels smiled. "Have Worth and Frank been here?" he asked.

They had. Worth and Frank are the young sons of the Secretary. Worth was named for his uncle, Ensign Worth Bagley, Jr., the only line officer of the navy killed in action in the war with Spain.

FEARS THE RIOT ACT MORE THAN PISTOLS

Kearny Mob Stands Under Fire of the Police, but Reading of the Law Drives It in All Directions.

AND ALL DISTURBANCE ENDS

Mayor Brock Does the Business Impressively, Aided by Justice of the Peace Amann.

The Riot Act, which first came into being in the reign of George I. of England and which was taken over, almost verbatim, as the common law of the early Colonial and later Statehood days, was utilized to quell a disturbance of strikers in the City of Kearny on the Passic River, opposite Newark, late yesterday afternoon. A single reading of the act was effective in accomplishing what the Kearny Police Department—numbering twenty men—could not do.

There had been disturbances in the manufacturing town for a month, ever since the employes of the Arlington Company, makers of celluloid ware, took the ground that a number of union men had been discharged unjustly to give way to non-union men. Recently, when the manufacturers refused to reinstate the discharged union employes, all of the 500 to 600 men and women workers walked out. Since then excitement has been running high, and almost each day some one found himself in the hospital because of trouble with the police.

About 5 P. M. yesterday Policemen James Collins and Edward Dazey of the Kearny force were walking along Forest Street in the neighborhood of the Arlington Company's plant. A man hurled a brick at them from the rear and felled Collins, who, only temporarily stunned, joined Dazey in pursuing his assailant, an Italian, and dragging him to the ground put chain handcuffs on his wrists.

Collins and Dazey were surrounded by a hundred or more strikers as they proceeded to the village lockup with their prisoner. He forced the policemen to pull him along by the short chain binding them to him, and all the time the crowd grew. Before the police station was reached the mob had grown to 500, and attemps were made repeatedly to rescue the prisoner.

When fourteen policemen and detectives came to the support of Collins and Dazey on the dead run, with night sticks and revolvers drawn, the mob still held its ground and awaited the attack.

Shot after shot rang out, the bullets going well over the heads of the strikers. The reserves struck right and left, and finally succeeded in scattering the stubborn crowd, but only step by step. Twelve men were arrested, charged with inciting a riot.

The news of the arrests spread through out the manufacturing district, and within half an hour after the struggle fully a thousand persons were assembled in Arlington Square, near the Erie Railway Station in Kearny. All kinds of threats were made, and it was feared that a general riot would ensue.

Excitement was high and passions were becoming inflamed as Lewis M. Brock, Mayor of the city, came forward and made his way through the mob. With him, carrying a large book, was Adolph Amann, Justice of the Peace. Both mounted the platform in Arlington Square.

"Listen, listen," shouted Mayor Brock. "The Justice of the Peace has something to say to you."

The angry crowd of workmen drew nearer the speaker and then Justice of the Peace Amann read from the leather bound volume:

"I am directed to charge and demand all," he began.

"Listen, listen," interrupted the Mayor. "He's reading the Riot Act."

"I am directed to charge and demand all persons being here assembled," started the Justice of Peace once more, "immediately to disperse themselves, peaceably depart to their places of habitation or to their lawful business upon the pains and penalties of the law. God save the State."

Perhaps none there had ever before heard the Riot Act read. Perhaps none knew what the Riot Act was. Nothwithstanding, there was silence when Mayor Brock explained the penalties of the provision.

"You must clear from this neighborhood within one hour," he cried. "That is the law. He who violates it is guilty of a felony. The fine is $100 to $1,000, or from one to three years in prison. Every person who refuses to abide by the law will be prosecuted."

SAYS AMERICAN MEN DON'T SHINE IN LOVE

Miss Van Vorst Tells Why Girls from the United States Marry Europeans.

OUR MEN LACK AUDACITY

Female Superiority Demonstrated to Them in Childhood — Europeans More Cultured and Refined.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, March 12.—Miss Marie Van Vorst, in a volume just published entitled "The Pursuit of Happiness in the United States," asks the question, "Why do American girls prefer European husbands?" and answers that the fault lies with the American man.

"As a lover," she says, "the American appears to the least advantage. He lacks audacity. As a child he is under the domination of his mother and sisters. A schoolmistress demonstrates to him female superiority, and later in life, no matter to what class of society he belongs, his education is directed by women. He has learned how to shape and control his destiny, but has not yet learned how to dominate the heart of a woman."

A wealthy girl from the United States, Miss Van Vorst says, is quick to discover that the men she meets in European society are more cultured and refined than the business men at home, and their titles fascinate her. She knows her father will not be enthusiastic over her marriage to a European and anticipates his objection thus: "Darling papa, you brought me up like a princess, but in America there are no princes, so what was I to do?"

At a dinner in Washington in honor of a member of one of the oldest houses in Europe, who was about to wed a wealthy daughter of Virginia, the hostess, says Miss Van Vorst, met a distinguished guest with an expression of regret at the absence of the male members of the family. "I am extremely sorry," she said, "that my husband is too busy to be with us to-night. My son cannot come either. He writes me from his mine: 'My dear mother: I am the boss of a gang of 300 Italians all the week. Surely, then, you cannot expect me to travel on Saturday evening to Washington to dine with one more Italian."

At another dinner, in Chicago, given by the ambitious wife of a multi-millionaire tanner, she remarked that her husband did not open his mouth to his guests. "Why don't you try?" she said. "What's the good?" he grumbled. "There's not one of them knows a thing about leather."

"In the United States," says the authoress, "man possesses only what he has gained and woman what she has bought. It is consequently only natural that he works to excess and that she 'spends to fury.'"

Miss Van Vorst says men on this side of the Atlantic inspire no confidence in the American woman. She does not believe them to be sincere, but they know how to charm her by their conversation. She does not suppose for a moment that a European admirer really loves her, but he tells her he does so delightfully, and if she disconcerts the amorous Frenchman by replying to him in the same tone it is because she does not feel herself to be in danger.

APPEALS CLARK ART CASE.

Sir George Donaldson Contests Verdict for Commission on Sales.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 12.—The story of ex-United States Senator Clark's purchases of old masters is to be retold in the English courts. Sir George Donaldson, against whom a verdict for £6,900 ($34,500) was given last November in an action by Alfred George Temple, art adviser to the London City Corporation, is taking the case to the High Court of Appeal.

Mr. Temple said he introduced Mr. Clark to Sir George Donaldson, and the commission claimed related to sales of old masters to Mr. Clark resulting from that introduction.

AMERICAN SUICIDES ABROAD.

Mrs. Jeffryes Drowned Herself in English Pond with Her Daughter.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 12.—Dr. Wyman Jeffryes, formerly of the United States Army, to-day identified the bodies of the two women who drowned themselves in a lake near Godalming as his wife and daughter.

Dr. Jeffryes, who is over 70, retired from practice some years ago, and has been living in Kensington. His wife and daughter lived in the country. The doctor said that his wife had a severe nervous breakdown some years ago, and he took a house at Godalming for her, so that she might be away from the distractions of town life. The daughter, who was 31, elected to live with her mother rather than allow her to be sent to a sanitarium. He believed his daughter had latterly suffered from hallucinations.

The double suicide was extraordinary. Miss Jeffryes stole away from the house early in the morning, tied a weight to her body and jumped into the pond. Mrs. Jeffryes, on awaking found a letter from her daughter saying that she was going to drown herself, and inviting her mother to follow her example, which the latter did, throwing herself into the pond.

BROADHURST PLAY PLEASES.

London Audience Cordial to Author of "Bought and Paid For."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 12.—No American author has had a finer reception in London than George C. Broadhurst tonight when "Bought and Paid For" was presented at the New Theatre. The audience called him before the curtain three times. The instant of silence when the author responded in a speech contrasted with the booing sometimes accorded to authors.

Frank Craven, the only American in the cast, made a hit in the rôle of Jimmy, as he did in New York. Allan Aynesworth played Robert Stafford, Alexandra Carlyle was the wife.

No Alcohol in Rigsdag Restaurant After January, 1914.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

STOCKHOLM, March 12.—The temperance movement is making strides in Sweden. Both houses of the Rigsdag passed the bill forbidding the sale of wine, beer, or liquors at the Rigsdag restaurant after January, 1914.

In spite of the fact that the majority of the Rigsdag has not yet declared in favor of prohibition, this decision is considered significant of the great progress of the temperance movement and to forecast the introduction of full prohibition in the near future.

The Crown Prince and Princess are temperance advocates.

His Holiness this morning expressed his desire to resume the celebration of the mass on Palm Sunday, March 16.

GERMANY DECLARES THAT PEACE IS SURE

OPPOSE FRENCH ARMY BILL

Anatole France and Other Well-Known Men Urge the People Not to Yield to Military Panic.

BERLIN, March 12.—The German Government to-day publishes a sharp rebuke to those newspapers which have, according to the declaration, been fomenting international trouble by provocative articles. It also disavows the attack made by The Cologne Gazette on France as the "European mischiefmaker," to which attack a section of the foreign press attributed an official character.

The declaration says that the situation has improved so much that there is no doubt that the efforts of the powers toward peace will be successful.

The Government's statement was made public on the Boerse three hours before the close to-day. This and the reported demobilization of Russian and Austro-Hungarian troops had an immediate effect on the market, some stocks gaining as much as 5 points, while increases of 2 or 3 points were general.

Day-to-day loans were slightly easier, but this was offset by the rising of the private discount on long bills to 8 per cent., thus reaching the official rate of discount. The banks, which are preparing to meet dividend payments, are holding back as much cash as possible, and the proposed great military expenditures have acted unfavorably on the money market.

A study of Prussia's railroad plans, which call for a large outlay of money, shows that a considerable portion of this expenditure is to be reckoned to military account. The majority of the new lines to be laid down will connect strategic points, and serve for purely military purposes. Comparatively few important central traffic points will be reached by the new lines.

PARIS, March 12.—Some opposition to the immense and hurried increase of the peace footing of the French Army has made its appearance. Some thirty-five professors of the Sorbonne, many of them among the finest scholars in France, have issued a united address to the people of France appealing to them not to allow themselves to yield thoughtlessly to the military panic and to "forces of reaction which tend toward desperate adventures hostile to the republican Government."

The professors do not declare themselves opposed to the suggested three years' period of service in the active army, but ask for the fullest and most thoughtful consideration of the situation, without haste and without excess of emotion.

Another declaration, signed by Anatole France and several other members of the French Institute, literary men, scientists and professors of provincial universities and colleges, was published to-day, urging calm consideration of the proposed military measures, which, if adopted, will, it says, profoundly affect the life of France, both intellectually and economically.

Premier Briand, it is said, has informed a number of members of Parliament that it will not be necessary to rush through the military bills before Easter.

Scholars and Students Fearful of Consequences of Army Bill.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, March 12.—Two weighty protests against the French Army bill are published to-day. One, representative of the most authoritative university opinion, includes among its thirty-six signatories Anatole France, Louis Havet, Charles Seignobos, Charles Andler, and Gabriel Seailles. They say:

"The undersigned, being greatly perturbed by the outbreak of madness which has made it likely that there will be effected with totally unprecedented haste such a grave measure as a change in the military law of the country, and considering that such a project will have a profound effect on the intellectual and economic life of the country, and may even produce a retrograde movement in French civilization, express the hope that the measure will be submitted to most careful discussion."

The other protest is signed by 300 students of all Faculties in the University of Paris and the Ecole des Beaux Arts, who declare themselves systematically hostile to three years' military service, and urge public opinion not to let itself be intimidated by the powers of reaction.

"Remember," says the protest, "that in such circumstaces as the present, peaceful submission and blind confidence will deliver the country up to the worst kind of adventures and will ruin, in its very principle, the Republican régime."

TURNED INTO HOWITZERS.

Field Guns Can Be Transformed by a French Officer's Invention.

PARIS, March 12.—The Minister of War, who has been studying the tests of a mechanism invented by Major Mandrin, by which an ordinary 7.5-inch field gun may be transformed into a howitzer, announces that the results have been so favorable that it will be possible at an early date to discontinue the manufacture of field howitzers.

By this means an economy of $16,000,000 will be effected.

MISS MacCORMACK ILL.

Taken from A. G. Vanderbilt's Country House to a London Hotel.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 12.—Miss Isabel MacCormack of New York, who was an intimate friend of Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt when the latter was Mrs. McKim and who was recently a visitor at the Vanderbilts' country home, The Stream, Bletchworth, was taken suddenly ill there and was removed this week to the Berkeley Hotel in this city in order that she might receive better medical attention. She is now there in the care of a nurse. The nature of her illness has not been made known.

The hotel manager says he knows nothing beyond the fact that Miss MacCormack was received at Mr. Vanderbilt's request. She is still unable to leave her room.

Two Kisses Too Much for Them.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 12.—Two well-known members of the Irish musical festival choir have resigned because they objected to the word "kiss" occurring twice in a madrigal selected by the Executive Committee.

FALL OF ADRIANOPLE EXPECTED AT ONCE

Sofia Believes Allies Are About to Enter City—Shukri Admits Desperate Situation.

SEVERE BATTLE AT BULAIR

Turkish Cruiser Bombards Durazzo and San Giovanni di Medua—Servians Fear for Men on Transports.

LONDON, Thursday, March 13.—It is expected in Sofia that the Turkish fortress of Adrianople will be entered to-day by the Bulgarian and Servian besiegers.

A private message from the Bulgarian capital states that after a severe engagement the Bulgarian troops yesterday captured Hertantarla, one of the forts surrounding the City of Adrianople, and took prisoners 400 Turkish soldiers and 20 of their officers. The Turks resisted stubbornly, and several times repulsed Bulgarian assaults before the fort was finally captured.

Dispatches from Constantinople say it is believed there that the end of the present week will see either the capitulation of Adrianople or a desperate attempt by Shukri Pasha to break through the lines of the enemy.

The allies' reply to the powers regarding mediation is again delayed, and will not be delivered before to-morrow, and there is little doubt that before European diplomacy can get to work on the problem Adrianople will be in the possession of the allies.

The Turks, while seemingly preparing for another revolution, are utilizing their fleet in an attempt to prevent the Servian Army from assisting the Montenegrins in their attack on Scutari. It is reported that the entire Turkish fleet of eighteen units has been repaired and is concentrated at Naghara, on the Dardanelles.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 12.—A despairing cry of "I can hold out only for another week!" is alleged to have been uttered by Shukri Pasha, the commander of the fortress of Adrianople, which has held out for so many months against the terrible bombardment by hundreds of siege guns brought to bear by the Bulgarian and Servian troops surrounding the city.

Shukri Pasha at the same time informed the Porte that Adrianople was nearing the end of its supplies of food and ammunition, while there was much sickness, especially scurvy and diarrhoea, which were ravaging the ranks of the defenders.

The commander who has offered such a long and gallant defense urges that either the peace negotiations be hastened in order to save the fortress from the humiliation of capitulation or that an immediate attempt to relieve the city should be undertaken from the Tchatalja lines, thus enabling the besieged Turkish garrison to effect a sortie, which, even if it were unsuccessful, would obviate unconditional surrender.

The Turkish Ministry is divided in opinion on the matter, and has failed, so far, to reach a solution of the problem raised by the commander of the besieged fortress.

Serious fighting has been in progress along the Bulair front since yesterday. The Turkish fleet is co-operating with the troops.

The ferment aroused by the murder of Nazim Pasha continues to threaten internal trouble in Turkey. At a service held here in memory of the popular Commander in Chief of the Turkish Army the officiating Mussulman priest pronounced a malediction on his assassins, as well as on those who, he said, had deceived the Sultan, the head of the Mussulman faith.

PRINCE MUST SUE HERE.

French Court Refuses to Consider de Bearn's Claim to Wife's Fortune.

PARIS, March 12.—Prince Henri de Bearn et Chalais failed to get the support of the French Court of Appeals, to which he applied to-day, to assist him in obtaining $240,000 in securities deposited in a bank in Baltimore as part of the fortune, left to him by his late wife, who was Beatrice Winans, daughter of the late Ross Winanas.

The Prince, through his lawyers, represented that the brothers of his dead wife opposed the carrying out of the bequest.

Judge Gaston Bennet, who presided, declined to consider the case, saying that the Prince must lodge his claims in the American courts.

Princess de Bearn died in St. Petersburg in 1907, leaving two small children.

TO WATCH CASTELLANE CASE.

Duchess of Talleyrand to be Represented by Lawyers at Hearing.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, March 12.—When asked to-day about a Rome report that the Duchess of Talleyrand, formerly Miss Anna Gould, had instructed counsel to oppose the declaration of the nullity of her marriage to Count Boni de Castellane before the Court of Third Instance, the Duke of Talleyrand informed THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the Duchess intended to be represented by lawyers when the suit again came before the Rota, and that the Duchess would refute any misstatements on the part of the applicant.

It was unnecessary, he explained, for the Duchess to defend the suit, as this was done by the Church as a matter of course.

The Duke said he did not expect that the case would again come up before three or four months. He declined to express an opinion regarding the previous proceedings.

ITALIAN ADMIRALS FIGHT.

Gozo, Retired, Attacks Minister of Marine in Revenge.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ROME, March 12.—Rear Admiral Gozo, retired, met the Minister of Marine, Admiral Cattolica, this morning in one of the busiest streets in Rome, and, without saying a word, struck him violently in the face. The two Admirals engaged in a short bout of fisticuffs before they were separated.

Gozo, who was retired two years ago, attributes his retirement to Cattolica. In making the attack he hoped to provoke a duel. When the combatants were parted he continued to insult and abuse the Minister until he was arrested. He will be tried for committing an unprovoked assault.

At the afternoon sitting of the Chamber of Deputies there was an organized demonstration of sympathy with Cattolica, who was loudly applauded and cheered.

TEST OF MOTOR TANK SHIP.

Prince Henry of Prussia on Standard Oil Boat's Successful Trip.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 12.—The motor tank ship Hagen had a successful trial trip at Kiel to-day. It was built at Krupp's Germania dockyard for the German branch of the Standard Oil Company.

Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia and other high officers of the navy took the trip on the Hagen, the carrying capacity of which is 8,350 tons. It is the first ocean-going motor ship equipped with oil motors of German manufacture. Representatives of all the leading navigation companies and shipbuilding concerns were also passengers. Dr. Paul Schwarz of Berlin was aboard as representative of the German oil trade, which looks for enormous developments in oil motor navigation. Prince Henry and his staff spent two hours in the hold, examining the details of the machinery and studying its possibilities for naval purposes.

CALL OLYMPIC UNSINKABLE.

Builders Have Placed Inner Hull in White Star Liner.

LONDON, March 12.—A Belfast dispatch to The Evening News says:

"One of the most wonderful shipbuilding feats ever known has nearly been finished on the White Star liner Olympic. The nature of the work has thus far been kept secret, but I am now able to say that Harland & Wolff are constructing an enormous steel shell inside her hull. It extends nearly the full length of the ship, from No. 3 bulkhead forward to the rear turbine room aft.

"If she collided with an iceberg, as her sister the Titanic did, and her hull were ripped off by a slanting blow she would not sink. The inner shell would keep her afloat almost as if nothing had happened. It would be the same if she ran into a submerged rock.

"Harland & Wolff's naval architects believe that they have realized the quest of an unsinkable ship."

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

HAMBURG, March 12.—The sinking of the British sailing vessel Glenalvon off the mouth of the Elbe was reported by the lightship there last night. The vessel left Mejillenes, Chile, on Nov. 11 with a cargo of nitrate. She carried a crew of thirty-six men, who were rescued. The Glenalvon was a full-rigged iron vessel of 1,980 tons net, built at Greenock in 1888, and owned in Liverpool.

BERNE, March 12.—The Swiss Government has established new Consulates at Seattle, Vancouver, and Winnipeg, appointing, respectively, Samuel Wettrick, Samuel Ginzburger, and John Erzinger to the posts.

30,000 A YEAR SLAIN BY DEADLY ECONOMY

E. E. Rittenhouse Brands City's Neglect of Health Department as Communal Slaughter.

URGENT APPEALS IGNORED

Pinch of Poverty in City Hospitals and Spread of Tuberculosis Due to Public's Niggardliness.

E. E. Rittenhouse, Conservation Commissioner of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, in an address before the Finance Forum of the West Side Y. M. C. A. last night, arraigned New York City as a community for its neglect of public health and inadequate expenditure to save its citizens from preventable deaths. Mr. Rittenhouse praised the Health Department, but termed the appropriations for its work ridiculous, and characterized our lack of attention to tuberculosis as "communal manslaughter."

"Let us suppose," said Mr. Rittenhouse, "that it suddenly became known that 30,000 people in this city were to be destroyed and 150,000 injured by preventable cause on Monday next. What would happen? The whole civilized world would be shocked beyond measure. A great wave of human sympathy would come to us from the farthest corners of the earth. Millions of money would be forthcoming, if needed, especially from the people of this city, to prevent such a disaster. Men would fight for the privilege of risking their lives to assist in preventing it. And yet the people of this city suffer a calamity of this kind every year without even commenting upon it.

"The 30,000 lives destroyed here annually by preventable or postponable disease, and the scores of thousands who suffer from such diseases, are scattered throughout the homes of the city and throughout the 365 days of the year. But is it any less a calamity because these people are not all needlessly destroyed on the same day? Should we not answer the call of this annual calamity as promptly and generously as we answer the call of a sudden calamity? It does not excuse us to say that other cities are equally guilty.

Calls This Deadly Economy.

"New York City has undertaken, through its health laws and officials, to save these lives, but it has failed. It declines to build up and maintain a public health service large enough to cope with this life-saving problem. This is deadly economy. New York says in effect:

"'Let them die. We prefer this annual calamity to a slight increase in the tax rate. We need our money for more important purposes. We will give you all the health laws you want, but we cannot spare the money necessary to enforce them.'

"The city spends about $26 per capita to run its government. Of this amount but 65 cents is allowed for the public health service.

"Think of the magnitude of the undertaking of our health authorities! They are charged with the important duty of guarding 5,000,000 people from the ravages of avoidable disease. Owing to immigration and the congestion of population, New York has the most difficult problem of any of the great cities of the civilized world. And yet we spend but 10 cents per capita more than is used by the healthful city of Seattle and the small city of Syracuse, each of which allows 55 cents per capita.

"If it is worth while to save 65 cents' worth of these endangered lives, why not a dollar's worth or a dollar and a half's worth, or whatever is necessary to fully apply our knowledge of the science of disease prevention?

"When we consider the weak support the city health service has received from the public and how urgent appeals of the Health Commissioner and board for help in this great life-saving work have been steadily ignored for years, their achievements in reducing morbidity and mortality are indeed remarkable. Their efficiency depends upon themselves, but their effectiveness depends almost entirely upon the taxpayers, who provide the funds.

Pinch Felt in the Hospital Service.

"We have heralded our health conservation achievements so loudly and so continuously that we have lulled the average citizen into an attitude of calm satisfaction and content with things as they are. If his attention is called to the excessive waste of life that is still going on, he invariably bristles up and makes the usual comparison with the death rates and the appropriations of other cities. It does not occur to him to compare our life-saving efforts with our present loss of life. He prefers to compare it with our loss in former years. The steady march to the grave of the luckless 30,000 does not come within his vision.

"Have you any idea how we are neglecting the public health? Do you know that hundreds of cases of contagious disease which should be segregated in the city hospitals are left to spread infection in homes because the city will not provide the hospital facilities to care for them? We not only decline to furnish adequate hospital and quarantine facilities to prevent the spread of contagious disease, but we refuse to provide the hospitals we have with a sufficient number of doctors and attendants to conduct them properly.

"And now listen to this:

> In 1911 126 maids tried to keep clean 171,764 square feet of floor space in hospitals with 1,350 beds and the necessary furniture and equipment. Every year request has been made for sufficient maids to keep the wards clean, but every year this has been denied.

"That is an official statement by our Health Commissioner.

"Think of this great wealthy metropolis, too penurious to even provide enough doctors and nurses to properly care for the unfortunate people sent to these hospitals with contagious disease, and too stingy even to provide sufficient domestics to care for the beds and furniture and to keep these hospitals clean! How can we expect our ignorant citizens to heed our advice to guard against death by keeping their homes clean when we will not spend the money to properly care for our contagious hospitals?

"Have you any idea of the size of the job of preventing the manufacture and sale of impure food in this city, and of the number of food inspectors which New York allows its health department? At the close of 1911 they had only thirty Inspectors to enforce the pure food laws in 21,698 establishments selling meat, groceries, &c. Could anything possibly be more absurd than to expect these thirty men to properly perform such a task? An increase in this force has been urgently requested for years. In the 1912 budget an increase of 182 was asked, which was far short of the number actually needed, but the request was ignored as usual. In the 1913 budget 125 Inspectors were requested. How many do you suppose were granted? Ten!

"So we now have the vast array of forty Inspectors to inspect the eatables coming in at all the wharves and terminals of the city and those sold in all the retail and wholesale establishments. This means that the violators of these laws, with possibly a few exceptions, will continue to sell impure food as heretofore.

"Much progress has been made in the improvement of the milk supply of the spection is as ridiculously inadequate as our food inspection. From the estimates of Health Commissioner Lederle for 1912 and 1913, the following astonishing facts are gathered:

"We receive 1,500,000 quarts of milk daily from 44,000 farms situated in seven States.

"How many Inspectors do you think we should have to see that these dairies are kept clean and free from infection? The average citizen would guess anywhere from 200 to 500. The fact is that we have but thirty such Inspectors for the country, and the best they can do is to try and reach each of these 44,000 farms once a year. Each dairyman has therefore 264 days in which to fall from grace and violate the laws of health and of the city.

"Our milk is received through 1,100 creameries, and sold from 5,500 wagons and 12,500 stores.

"We are a rich, progressive, and prosperous people, presumably anxious to protect human life from harm, and yet I am informed that we have only twenty-seven milk Inspectors to enforce the law among this army of milk dealers in the city. How many of the good people of this city are conscious of our criminal neglect in this matter of milk inspection?

Spread of the White Plague.

"We have more than 10,000 deaths annually in this city from tuberculosis of all forms. We have at least 60,000 people afflicted with tuberculosis of the lungs, and it is estimated that 44,000 of these unfortunates are spreading it throughout the city without official restraint or supervision of any character. When we consider that we know how to check the spread of this disease which causes so much suffering, poverty, immorality, and loss of life, we are surely justified in characterizing as communal manslaughter the failure of our cities to vigorously proceed against this enemy.

"If those victims, who are consciously or unconsciously causing the deaths of nearly 9,000 people annually, were carelessly distributing strychnine or arsenic throughout the city, the people of New York would not leave this problem almost wholly to charity as they do now. It is a community problem. We have no more right to depend upon charity to protect us against this plague than we have to expect our philanthropic citizens to contribute to the support of our schools, our Police Department, or any other proper function of government.

"We are very grateful for the city tuberculosis sanitarium at Otisville, but its capacity is only 690 beds. This is a start; but when we note that 44,000 afflicted are daily communicating this scourge to others throughout the city it seems like a very small start indeed for the wealthiest community on the Western Hemisphere."

GLAD OF 'YANKEE MEDDLING.'

It Only Happens When Cuba Misbehaves, Says Havana Newspaper.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, March 12.—La Prensa, a strictly Cuban newspaper and independent, though supporting Señor Menocal, prints a strong editorial to-night, praising the United States for its action regarding the Amnesty bill, and pointing out that such interference never happens when Cuba does good things, but only when she does things endangering her sovereignty. Therefore, it says, "Yankee meddling" should be blessed instead of being condemned.

The Secretary of State has asked the Secretary to the Government to stop the Isle of Pines meetings and to compel Americans there to fly the Cuban flag when they display the Stars and Stripes.

Lady Scott Sails for England.

SMALL MISTAKES—BIG TROUBLES

It does not take much to make a title bad. If an engrosser writing the dimensions in a deed writes 35 feet where he meant 53 feet, what the seller said in his deed and not what he intended to say governs.

Years after, when the mistake is discovered, new deeds must be secured. If the original owner is dead or unaccommodating or dishonest, you have a bad title that is very hard to cure.

Tea that IS Tea!

Macy's Teas are so protected at every stage, and placed in the box with such gentle care, that the Tea leaves never crumble into Tea dust.

Once the Teas have left the plantation, they are never again touched by human hands, but are cleaned, blended, sifted of dust, and packed by the most thoroughly perfected machinery.

The blending of Macy's Teas is under the direction of experts who have studied the water supply of New York and vicinity, and who have evolved delicate blends that suit it to perfection. This is why Macy's Teas are free from the metallic "bite" and tannic discoloration of cup that mark so many Teas that cost more elsewhere.

Price per pound is not so important as cost per number of cups.

As an example:

Macy's "Red Star" Tea (lb.) $1.49.

This seems a good price for Tea! But the same quality sells elsewhere for $4.00 the lb. And by actual weighing and measuring we know that 2c worth of Macy's "Red Star" Tea at $1.49 makes five cups of the richest and most delicious Tea that money can buy.

Macy's "Red Star" Tea (lb.) $1.49. Half-pound can, 76c. Quarter-pound can, 39c.

GRAFTERS IN HARLEM GOT $250,000 A YEAR

Inspectors, by Visits, Added Prestige to His Houses, Gambler Michaels Tells Whitman.

TRACING DIVISION OF LOOT

Old Woman, Reputed Wealthy, Says She Paid $350,000 to Police In Thirty-five Years.

Herman Michaels, known in Harlem as "the King of the Gamblers," told District Attorney Whitman a curiously interesting story yesterday of paying about $15,000 to the police for protection during the last eight years, of friendly visits paid him by Inspectors Sweeney, Hussey, and Thompson while his gambling games were running full blast, and how he was eventually driven out of business by the increased demands of the police. One peculiar phase of his story was to the effect that the police demanded more money after the murder of Rosenthal last July than ever before. Michaels said that this was one time the gamblers felt that it was a good time to go into hiding, and that those who had nerve enough to stay in business would probably be relieved of police exactions. Therefore he was surprised when he discovered that protection would cost more. He said it was explained to him that the police ran a greater risk, and that only more money would make them feel that the risk was worth taking.

Michaels was an unwilling witness at first. Mr. Whitman had been after him for three weeks, but Michaels kept away. He was wanted in an amiable mood, for Mr. Whitman thought this was the best way to induce him to tell all he knew about police graft. He was mistaken. The ethics that ruled the gambler compelled him to take all reasonable precautions to avoid becoming an informer. It was only when his own safety was threatened that he agreed to talk.

"I paid the police for protection, and I got what I paid for," he told Mr. Whitman. "That left the score even. It wasn't up to me to squeal, except when I had to squeal or go to prison. I stayed away until that time came, and now I am willing to tell you everything you want to know."

Net Tight Around Ex-Inspectors.

Michaels left out the fact that Mr. Whitman was in possession of facts of other than gambling evils in his life and that the power this placed in Mr. Whitman's hands would be evoked against him if he proved unwilling to confess. Having agreed to talk, Michaels told all he knew and so tightened the net around ex-Inspectors Thompson and Hussey that their indictments were assured, Mr. Whitman said. He had nothing to tell against ex-Inspector Murtha except that there was no change in the collection of money during the time that Murtha was in command of the Sixth Inspection District.

He said that while Sweeney, Hussey, and Thompson were in command of the district they used to come into his gambling places and walk around and nod pleasantly to him and watch with interest the playing of craps, klondike, the selling of pools, or whatever the gambling chances were going on at the time. Michaels explained that this was great use to him and considerably fattened his business, for the word spread around Harlem and the neighboring territory that it was safe to lay any kind of a wager in his place because of his friendship with the police.

"I took that kindly of the Inspectors," said Michaels naïvely.

The story told by Michaels to Mr. Whitman first and afterward to the Grand Jury covered a period of eight years, though for the first two years his facts were dim and uncertain. But his memory was clear for the others when he paid protection money to Patrolman Wren and Sergt. Duffy. There was no change in the situation, so for the purpose of clinching the evidence against Thompson and Hussey and making it bear as strongly as possible against Murtha Michael's story was taken for the six-year term. After his story was told Mr. Whitman and his assistants went over the figures of graft collections in the Sixth District gathered from the confessions of Capt. Walsh, Patrolman Fox, and Ashley Shea and concluded that at least $250,000 a year was taken away from the gamblers, keepers of disorderly resorts and crooked saloon men. They were convinced that these figures were under the mark rather than above it.

In six years the total would reach the tidy sum of $1,500,000. So far as reckoned with the data in hand, only four Inspectors shared in the graft. Mr. Whitman intends to learn if he can just how much each of these Inspectors is worth, what his annual expenses for living were, and then discover where the surplus, if any, went to. This is one way he hopes to trace the graft into Headquarters. He knows of one police official who was stationed at Headquarters in a very responsible place who was on terms of the greatest familiarity with Sweeney. So great was the friendship between the men that Sweeney had the right of going unannounced into his office at any time of day, of meeting him by appointment in other places and of having police orders changed, men assigned to specified posts, and transferred from one precinct to another.

Mr. Whitman knows of occasions where Sweeney journeyed to Headquarters in a towering rage and plunged into the office of the bigger officials and directed that certain police things be done in short order, and they were done. He also knows that at least one of these things was the keeping of two of the biggest grafters in Harlem where Sweeney could use them after orders had been issued for their transfers.

Michaels told many things to Mr. Whitman that were not spoken of when the news of the day was given out. His story as it came to the reporters ran like this:

"I ran three places in Harlem at different times. One was at 148th Street and Eighth Avenue, another at 135th Street and Eighth Avenue, and the other was at 136th Street and Eighth Avenue. I began paying Sergt. Duffy when Sweeney first took command of the district prior to 1907. Then I was trying to run a handbook only and had no fixed place. I thought I could do this without paying for protection, but Duffy got wise and told me I would have to come across with $50 a month. Well, I paid it."

Indictment Peril Makes Him Talk.

Michaels wanted to let his story stop at this point. He was still inclined to let his code of ethics rule. He glanced at Mr. Whitman and saw a hard, immovable face. Still he waited, and then Mr. Whitman told him that if he refused to talk he would either be indicted for bribery or taken before the Grand Jury, where if he told other than the precise truth he would be indicted for perjury, just as Patrolman Hartigan was. Michaels remembered the Hartigan incident. He grinned and said:

"There is no reason why I should go to prison for the cops, so here goes. When the police found out that I was running a handbook they made me pay, and when they could not find me because I kept away from them they watched me and arrested me. It was a hard game. The case was framed up against me, and the only way I could be turned out was by paying all arrears even for the time I did nothing. Well, I paid up, and then I started in business again. I only wanted to pay for protection while I was actually making a book. Sometimes I would lay off for several weeks, but the police wouldn't let up. I refused to meet their demands and again I was arrested and warned that the next time I would be sent away, but that I could fix then if I paid $75 a month and made no trouble for the cops. I agreed and was turned out and I paid up according to agreement.

"But even then the cops weren't satisfied. A little while later they demanded $100 a month. Well, I had to pay it, not for the privilege of running the book so much as for the privilege of not being framed-up and sent to prison."

Inspectors at His Houses.

Michaels stopped here and indulged in a few reflections about the methods of the police when they first found out that a man wanted to make a living contrary to law. After that it made no difference, he said, whether the man stayed in the business or not. He might even go in the butcher or baker business, still he would have to pay or get in trouble because of his old record. He told about paying Wren and Duffy. Asked if he understood that the money went to the Inspectors he replied that he was told so. He said he was quite sure that Thompson, Hussey and Sweeney got it because they displayed their satisfaction with him by visiting his gambling houses. He was not so sure about Murtha. Then Michaels said:

"When I saw that I would have to pay the police no matter what I did I resolved to go into the business in a regular way. So I opened a gambling house and fitted it up and then the police came down on me for $60 a week. Sometimes the payments were reduced to $200 a month, but as a rule they amounted to about $250 a month. Last October the business got so bad that I said I could not pay the price for the privilege of operating. I was then paying $150 a month, but the police weren't satisfied and I got out. I don't believe I would have been allowed to quit if there was not a good deal of scandal being kicked up about police graft."

Michaels said that after he opened his gambling houses he never pretended to be anything else than a plain gambler, and that he ran with all the publicity necessary to produce the largest income. He said his place was well known, and that the ordinary patrolman on the beat knew about it just as well as he knew himself.

Michaels said he and Wren had a long talk on Tuesday night in the Hotel Braddock, of which Wren was part owner. Mr. Whitman learned what the talk was about, but he would not tell.

New Women Witnesses.

There were three new women witnesses before the Grand Jury yesterday who testified about police graft. They did not talk with Mr. Whitman before they were ushered into the Grand Jury room, and so the matter they were questioned about was not learned. It was said, however, that they furnished some additional information against Manny Maas and Sol Wolf, accused by Mrs. Mary Goode of taking protection money from her for the police and indicted for bribery on Dec. 23. Two other witnesses were Margery Wilson and Laura Smith, who were employes in the notorious disorderly resort kept by Annie Grey, in West Forty-sixth Street.

Robert E. Ullner, the husband of Mrs. Grey, promised Mr. Whitman that his wife would be at the District Attorney's office on Tuesday, but she did not appear. Mr. Whitman waited all day yesterday for her, but she again failed to appear. Then Mr. Whitman announced that he would present the case he had against her and ask for her indictment for a misdemeanor. She lives in West New York, N. J., but she can be extradited if the Governors of both States consent. Mr. Whitman said he thought there would be no trouble about getting her into this State because of her character.

Another notorious character in the underworld is Mary, or "Mother," Stakem. She came to the District Attorney's office yesterday and told Mr. Whitman that she was about 72 years old and that during thirty-five years in which she had been the keeper of disorderly resorts she paid about $350,000 for police protection. She told Mr. Whitman that in one year she paid $180,000 to the police "and to others." Every effort was made to induce her to tell who these others were, but she said she would not say anything further at present. Like a good many other witnesses who had talked to Mr. Whitman or to his assistants, she did not realize that a confession of paying money was a confession of guilt and that she was liable to indictment and to imprisonment for a long term as a bribe giver. She will learn this to-day or to-morrow, when some sensational revelations are expected from her full story. Mrs. Stakem said that she now had only a small flat. Asked if it was a disorderly apartment within the meaning of the law, she replied that it was. Asked if she was paying protection for it, she replied:

"I am. I am paying $50 a month. But that is nothing to what I paid when I ran a whole big house."

Mrs. Stakem is rich. It was said that she was worth at least $250,000. Her present address is in West Forty-seventh Street, which is in the Fourth Inspection District, which is under the command of Inspector Dwyer.

The trial of Patrolman Hartigan will begin to-morrow before Justice Seabury. Hartigan denied a rumor to the effect that he intended to confess.

FACES WHITE SLAVE CHARGE.

Charles S. Martin, Caught in Cleveland, Under Indictment Here.

Word reached the District Attorney's office yesterday of the arrest in Cleveland, Ohio, of Charles S. Martin, under indictment in this county and charged with being a procurer. According to a representative of the District Attorney's office, who caused Martin's arrest some weeks ago, the case is one of the worst white slave cases ever unearthed here.

Martin, it was said, inserted advertisements in newspapers offering employment to girls in factories. It was said that he received many applicants. He lived for many years in this city and had an office here. When an indictment was found against him he left the State, and a call for his arrest as a fugitive from justice was sent broadcast. It was said yesterday that Martin would be brought to this city immediately to plead to the indictment.

WAKEFIELD MADE INSPECTOR.

Waldo Also Orders Shift to Fill the Murtha Vacancy.

Commissioner Waldo dismissed from the department yesterday Ernest E. Buckland, formerly attached to the staff of Inspector Dwyer, on the charge of having advised Annie Miller, a disorderly resort keeper, to employ a certain lawyer. Buckland and a fellow-policeman, named Edward F. Wiederkehr, charged Miss Miller with keeping a disorderly resort, and set the time of their visit on a night when Miss Miller proved that she was not at home.

It was after her arrest that she swore Wiederkehr gave her the lawyer's card. Wiederkehr was cleared of the charge.

Commissioner Waldo promoted Capt. George R. Wakefield to Inspector and assigned him to the Seventh Inspection District, Brooklyn, in place of Inspector Farrell, who was sent to the Ninth District in place of Inspector Formoso, who fills the place in the Tenth District made vacant by the suspension on Tuesday of Inspector Murtha.

FIREMEN TESTIFY WORK IS HARDER

22 TO 26 TONS A TRIP

Erie Employe's Estimate of Coal He Shovels—Witness Says Roads Gain by Using Two Firemen.

Fifteen more firemen employed on the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Lackawanna, Lake Shore, Big Four and Erie railroads were called as witnesses yesterday at the hearing at the Waldorf in the arbitration of the wage dispute between the fifty-four Eastern roads and their firemen. W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood, said he had fifty witnesses in all, but would make the examinations brief and confine them to showing that on the various roads the work was harder and the wages of no more purchasing power than years ago.

The testimony yesterday developed little new, relating chiefly to the introduction of larger engines, with corresponding increase in the tonnage hauled and the amount of firing to be done, the failure of mechanical stokers in lightening the firemen's labors, the increase of trainloads where "superheater" engines were used, the joint responsibility of the firemen with the engineers for the safe operation of trains and the long day's work, often extending to the legal limit of sixteen hours.

Some of the men said their wages averaged $65 or $70 a month, with considerable expenses away from home. One man earned $69 a month the first year, $67 the second, and $64 the third. This was explained as due to increased work and longer hours, preventing him from getting in as many days' work in a month.

The proposed scale provides for two firemen on each of the larger engines, and one of the witnesses said that where two were employed on some of the roads there was an actual saving of expense, because with two firemen there was less delay and less overtime to pay to the entire crew on engine and train.

David Leinhardt, employed on the Pennsylvania, said he was tied up under the sixteen-hour law so often that it was usual to take rations for two days when starting on his 117-mile run. The law requires that when a man has worked sixteen hours he must have eight hours' rest before being put to work again.

William Mengerink said the tonnage had been almost doubled on the Erie since the big engines were put on. Asked what kind of men were employed about the roundhouse, he said:

"Well, there is one Irishman there, but the rest are all foreigners."

Guy Turk, another Erie fireman, said he shoveled from twenty-two to twenty-six tons of coal on his run of 140 miles. Judge Chambers, Chairman of the Arbitration Board, figured out that this was an average of 148 shovelfuls an hour, or between two and three a minute, but the witness stuck to his statement. He earns about $60 a month.

Joseph Flegal, employed on the New York Central, said his run usually took fourteen hours, and on one trip he counted the shovelfuls of coal he handled. The number was 2,192, which would be about twenty-two tons.

One of the witnesses, who had been a fireman ten or eleven years without being promoted to an engineer, although he had passed the examination, was asked what was his expectation of getting an engine.

"Well, it's beyond my expectation," he replied, dubiously.

At one point Elisha Lee, Chairman of the Conference Committee of managers, undertook to explain a certain change of routes, and said politely to the fireman on the stand:

"If I am mistaken I will ask you to correct me."

After describing the change, Mr. Lee asked:

"Am I correct?"

"So far," said the fireman, cautiously.

"That's as far as I am going," said Mr. Lee, with a smile.

The hearings will continue to-day.

STATE SENATOR SUSPENDED.

McDevitt Accused Massachusetts Lawmakers of Bribe Attempt.

BOSTON, March 12.—The Senate suspended Senator John J. McDevitt to-day because of his charges that a member of the Legislature had attempted to bribe him. He was to have been reprimanded also, but, after making a privileged speech to the effect that his conscience was clear, the Senator left the chamber.

The Sergeant at Arms was instructed to notify McDevitt to be present to-morrow.

MAY CALL MORGAN TO STAND.

Names of Financier and ex-Secretary Callinger Figure in Land Cases.

CHICAGO, March 12.—It is just possible that J. Pierpont Morgan may be called as a witness in the Alaska coal land fraud cases which are on trial here before Judge Landis in the United States District Court.

The possibility of the issuance of a subpoena for the financier arose in court to-day when John E. Ballaine of Seattle, former President of the Alaska Central Railway, was questioned by Attorney Albert Fink, of counsel for Albert C. Frost, one of the five defendants, regarding Mr. Morgan's relation to a bank which figured in the promotion of the Alaska Central, and his alleged control of a railroad which competed with the Alaska Central.

It is said that the defendants, Albert C. Frost, Pierre G. Beach, Frank Watson, George A. Ball, and George M. Seward, will base a portion of their defense on the allegation that Frost's railroad failures were due to the crushing power of the Morgan interests, particularly as shown in the competition of the Morgan road in Alaska. If this line of defense develops, it is not unlikely that the Government may desire Mr. Morgan's testimony.

Ballaine's testimony to-day showed that he sold the Alaska Central Railway to Frost in 1904. He said that Frost was aided financially by the Sovereign Bank of Canada, now defunct, in which, he said, J. P. Morgan owned a third interest.

The Government alleges that the defendants attempted to defraud it out of coal lands valued at $10,000,000, and that it was desired to open up these mines to obtain traffic for the Frost road.

O. G. Laberee of Spokane, Wash., the second witness of the day, was interested with Frost in the early stages of the latter's Alaska operations, but said he became afraid that the company's method of getting coal lands was illegal. He consulted Mr. Reynolds, of the Seattle law firm of Ballinger, Battle, Ronalds & Tennant, and was advised, he said, that the law would permit the company to go ahead, but that the land office rules were against the proposition.

"I was afraid we'd all go to jail, so I gave up my land grants to the Government and got out of it," said the witness.

FINDS ALLEGED BONAPARTES.

Society Thinks It Has Discovered Five of Emperor's Grandchildren.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—While the Crittenden Memorial Society of San Francisco was running down a reputed grandson of Napoleon Bonaparte in Los Angeles yesterday other descendants of the great Corsican came to light around San Francisco Bay. All are children of the late John Gordon, a San Francisco jeweler, who, the Crittenden Society affirms, was the son of Napoleon, born at St. Helena. Agitation against the removal of bodies from an old cemetery here resulted in the discovery of Gordon's neglected grave. It was established that five children of Gordon were living in the United States, William Gordon of Los Angeles, Mrs. Susan De Lancey of Oakland, Mrs. Annie Nickerson and Mrs. Kate Bode of San Francisco, and Mrs. Martha Champion of New London, Conn.

Regarding the identity of Gordon's mother there is a difference of opinion between his grandchildren and the historians.

FOURTEEN MEN INDICTED.

Accused of Frauds in Connection with the Barr & Widen Agency.

CHICAGO, March 12.—A Federal Grand Jury has indicted fourteen men charged with participating in the alleged frauds of the Barr & Widen Mercantile Agency. Many large corporations in Chicago and other cities are said to have been defrauded.

Those indicted are Abram H. Freeman, Frederick L. Wendler, Charles F. Day, Joseph B. Finkelman, alias J. B. Fink; James T. Minehart, Robert B. Pender, Joseph C. Stevens, Arthur W. Parks, William Fellers, John D. Kaiser, Frederick V. Gordon, J. H. Worman, A. P. Cook, and W. B. Sugg.

The Government charges that the company represented itself as being able to discover concealed assets and silent partners of bankrupt companies.

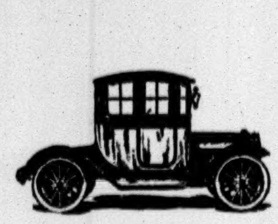
Oakland
"THE CAR WITH A CONSCIENCE"



Marie Antoinette had no such luxury as the OAKLAND coupe affords her more fortunate sisters of the present generation.

"Terribly attractive" is the modern superlative for the dainty but staunch creation that is being taken up so strongly by New York's fashionable yet practical world.

"The lap of luxury" is exemplified in its every feature—its riding qualities, its chic appointments, its sheer comfort.

For shopping—for the theatre—for road trips with the dust and elements avoided—for strict utility as well as fashionable demands, the OAKLAND coupe has no peer.

Plenty of head room—seats four "comfy"—spark and throttle levers on your steering wheel—clutch and brake pedals at your feet—gear shift at your right—self-starting valve and oil-sight feed on dash—electric lighting—not a detail has been overlooked where ease of operation and real comfort are concerned.

You must see this Coupe to realize the art of the manufacturers in catering to an exacting and critical demand.

Call or write TO-DAY. The price—$2500—will assure you the last word in fashionable and useful equipages.

CITY DEATH WARRANT SLAYS WRONG HORSE

Served by Mistake on Faithful Old Brownie, Pet of Blackwells Island Charities.

HE WAS NO. 5 IN ONE STABLE

And No. 5 in the Other, for Whom He Suffered the Death Penalty, Died in His Stall of Lockjaw.

He was only a horse in the stables of the Charities Department on Blackwells Island. Aside from the fact that he served the city just as faithfully as he knew how for thirteen years there was little about him worth mentioning, unless one took into consideration his great gentleness and the unconcealed affection cherished for him by every driver and employ in the Charities stables. Yet every man of them was downcast on Tuesday night when word went around that Brownie had been shot, and yesterday every man of them was black with anger when they learned that he had been shot by mistake.

It was just a little slip in the machinery of the Municipal Government, a little error in routine. "It was clearly a mix-up in departments" was the brief explanation made yesterday at the office of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

That was all it was, but it killed one of the best loved horses that ever strained in municipal harness.

The story of the error began on Tuesday afternoon, when Foreman Patrick Murray of the Correction Department stables on Blackwells Island telephoned over to the S. P. C. A. that Horse No. 5 was suffering from lockjaw and that it would be well to put him out of the way. So an agent of the society put a bright, shiny revolver in a little satchel and took the ferry over to the island. It is already clear that there were two departmental stables on the island, which, of course, was confusing.

The industrious agent, with his little written order in his pocket, went to the wrong stables, and, as for the rest, it was just fate that in those other stables—the horse quarters of the Charity Department—"Horse No. 5" was old Brownie. The men called him Brownie, but that was just their unofficial affection. Officially he was Horse No. 5, and had been ever since he as a two-year-old became a city employe thirteen years ago.

The agent showed his written order to Foreman Williams, who just stood and looked at the man, incredulous. Then he laughed.

"Why, you can't mean No. 5," he protested. "That's Brownie. There's nothing the matter with him. Of course, there's a little sore on his shoulder, but what does that amount to?"

There isn't much use in arguing with a written order, but Williams couldn't give in.

"I don't know what the men would say," Williams said, half to the agent and half to the stalls. "You see, he's the pet around here, Brownie is. You ought to see him do his tricks. He'll take off a man's hat by holding the brim between his teeth, and he won't hurt the hat. If you stand in front of him and cross your legs, he'll cross his forelegs. Would you like to see him do some of his stunts now?"

The agent was opening his little satchel and Williams saw the shiny revolver. After that he just stood and swallowed hard while one of the boys led Brownie out on to the grass plot in front. The agent was examining his cartridges when Williams found his tongue again.

"It's not a bad sore. It doesn't look fatal to me," he said, pleadingly.

The agent seemed inclined to share the same opinion. "But," he said, in the manner of officialdom, "orders are orders."

Then Williams turned and went into the stable and shut the door behind him. Even so, he did not entirely shut out the sound of the pistol shot. The stable boy who came in to report said later he had never seen the boss looking so miserable.

Meanwhile the agent had started back to Manhattan and the office of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. As he entered one of the office men was protesting over the telephone to the foreman of the Correction Department stables.

"But we sent a man over there to shoot the horse. Horse No. 5, wasn't it? Surely, he ought to be there by this time."

Yesterday horse No. 5 of the stables of the Correction Department died in his stall of lockjaw.

GOLD SWORD TO CONSTANTINE

Greeks in America Have Offering for the Crown Prince.

When the commander of the Turkish Army surrendered Salonika to Crown Prince Constantine of Greece, the generalissimo of the Greek Army, the thought came to the editors of the local Greek newspaper Atlantis to open a public subscription, suggesting that with the money collected a beautiful sword should be bought for the liberator of Macedonia.

The Greeks in America immediately accepted this suggestion with great enthusiasm and in less than a month's time $3,000 was collected.

A number of prominent firms in New York submitted designs. The sword is now ready. The hilt, of solid gold, is artistically decorated with enameled blue and white Byzantine designs and Byzantine crosses, suggestive of the Byzantine country which has been conquered by Prince Constantine. On one side the hilt bears the original Byzantine double-eagle crest, and on the end, set in diamonds and sapphires, is the royal coat of arms of Greece. At the top of the hilt a magnificent star sapphire is set. This sapphire, being emblematic of good luck, fitly depicts the Greek national colors, white and blue. The scabbard, which is also of gold, is decorated with sapphires, and on one side is the Greek cross, in blue and white, and on the reverse side, set in a medallion, is an ancient and valued coin of Alexander the Great. On the blade the inscription reads: "To Constantine, the liberator, from the Greeks in America, 1912."

The sword will be taken to the Greek Church of the Annunciation, 308 and 310 West Fifty-fourth Street, New York, on Sunday and the Greek colony in this city will have a celebration. The church will be decorated with Greek and American flags and plants, and the ceremony will consist of speeches and blessings for the victorious Greek Army.

It is intended to send the sword to the Crown Prince as early as possible, so that it may be delivered to him on his return to Athens.

MRS. DUCAS LOSES SUIT.

Her Action for a Separation Dismissed by Justice Davis.

Supreme Court Justice Davis dismissed yesterday the suit of Mrs. Rachel H. Ducas for a separation from Benjamin P. Ducas, President of the Ducas Chemical Manufacturing Company. It was shown that a separation agreement was in existence, made by the husband on Dec. 1, 1908, by which he was to pay $4,000 a year to his wife for her sustenance, and $2,000 for the sustenance and education of their ten-year-old son, Robert.

The plaintiff asked that the agreement be set aside on the ground that it was made under duress. Justice Davis ruled that the agreement could not be vacated without the presence in the action of the Trustee appointed to carry out its terms, and that until it was declared void there could be no action taken along the same line.

ACTRESS ASKS ANNULMENT.

Mona Morgan Says She Was Only 17 When She Married.

Counsel for Mrs. Mona Mundell Coster, the actress playing in "The Whip" under the name of Mona Morgan, who is suing for an annulment of her marriage to Norman B. Coster, an official of the Mercantile Safe Deposit Company, contended yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Cohalan that a girl marrying under 18 years of age in New York State was entitled to an annulment if she brought action before she reached her majority. It was stated that Mrs. Coster had but just reached the age of 17 years when she was married at the City Hall on Oct. 12 last.

Dr. Milton K. Kneifer of Philadelphia testified that he was present at the plaintiff's birth and that the day was Oct. 4, 1895. That would make her 17 years old on Oct. 4, 1912, ten days before her marriage. Justice Cohalan asked if there was any objection to the annulment.

Counsel for the husband said that he did not oppose the annulment, but that he wished to be sure that Mrs. Coster was only 17 years old when she was married. He also assented when the Justice asked him if he agreed with the other counsel "that the laws of New York State allow a girl to rush into the marriage state and then out again at will."

"You will have to show me very strong authority on such a case before I will grant an annulment," Justice Cohalan said. "Furthermore, I want to be certain that there is no collusion in this case. I will reserve decision till more testimony is given."

FIGHTS McCALL DECISION.

His Appointment to Service Commission Makes Trouble for Courts.

A legal snarl caused by the resignation of Edward E. McCall from the Supreme Court bench to accept the Chairmanship of the Public Service Commission was brought before Supreme Court Justice Davis yesterday. Justus P. Sheffield, attorney for the Autographic Register Company, asked to have an order made by Justice McCall set aside. Mr. Sheffield had moved before Justice McCall for a new trial of a suit brought against his client by Elijah W. Sells and others. This motion Justice McCall decided against him.

Mr. Sheffield urged two grounds for overruling Justice McCall's order. The first was that the order had been signed after Justice McCall resigned, although the decision had been posted before he took office as Chairman of the Public Service Commission. The second was that while Justice McCall had allowed him thirty days in which to file a memorandum in support of his motion, the decision had been rendered in twenty days, ten less than the time allotted, without warning to him.

Justice Davis reserved decision.

ARTHUR KELLER ON PAUL HELLEU'S ART

Portraits of Eight New York Women for Next Sunday's Times Discussed.

HELPS DRY POINT ETCHING

"M. Helleu Has Caught the Spirit of American Woman," Says Mr. Keller—"Stunning Reproductions."

"What do I think of them? They are corking, especially because you give us some white paper, which is so rare. Reproductions usually are all cramped up into a very small space, so small that you don't get the effect; but these—they are fine."

So says Arthur I. Keller, leading artist and illustrator, about the eight reproductions of Paul Helleu's portraits of typical American women which are to be published in THE TIMES of March 16.

"M. Helleu's technique is extremely fascinating and very well adapted to his subject. He has a rare charm, which, I think, he seems to grasp at once from his subject. While his style is very lovely, yet in each individual head he has retained the characteristics that seem to have prompted him unconsciously. Each head, though treated in a different style, is positively his own. His style is very lovely and winning. He shows the charm, the grace, and the kind of loveliness that you feel you would like in women. Besides that, he is intensely artistic.

"I am sure M. Helleu has caught the spirit of the American woman, but the first portrait in the series of your reproductions is French. It is one of the most interesting. A man who is so unusually French as he is, I think, has done remarkably well to allow himself to play on the subject. I can truthfully say that the reproductions are quite an innovation.

"I think M. Helleu is sensitive, and that means ever so much. He has something that nobody can give to anybody—that sensitiveness, that temperament, the delightful charm, and the loveliness. His pictures show strength, yet are refined. A picture of a woman may be beautiful, but have a horribly common expression. But these women—you would like to know every one of them.

"I think THE TIMES is to be very much complimented. They not only give you a reproduction, but reproductions, I think, M. Helleu himself ought to like, because they are just exactly as he would wish them.

"M. Helleu's visit to the United States and THE TIMES's reproductions of his portraitures ought to help greatly toward furthering the cause of dry-point etching in this country. There are a great many Americans doing it, but, of course, not in this way. I wish more men had the time to take it up. I am very partial to that sort of treatment. Most men are too busy. They cannot take the time. It would be nice to have the public recognize this sort of thing. Our public is very kind. As much as you hear people say they are not artistic, I think we always come to the front when something is really well worth while. We always find it. We have a natural feeling and sense for the lovely and the beautiful. Our taste is very sane and healthy. We have distinct ability. Americans have made reproductions of good healthy stuff. They are doing good work. I do not think that America can be put down as a Nation having anything to do with the morbid or the unhealthy.

"I hope the public will be quick to realize the possibilities of the dry-point etching—the spirit, the character, and the dash the etching can bring forth. The dry-point etching lends itself particularly to this sort of subject, and especially to M. Helleu's sort of temperament. M. Helleu could not have done them in any other way. The reproductions are perfectly stunning—a real pleasure."

FALLS UNDER SUBWAY TRAIN.

Son of Dead Man Says Death Was Due to Dizziness.

A dozen persons standing on the platform in the 157th Street Subway station at 9:05 yesterday morning saw a man at the edge of the tracks suddenly pitch forward in front of a southbound express train. All the right wheels of the first car had passed over his body before Motorman Valentine Priest was able to bring the train to a stop.

The body was taken to the West 152d Street Station, where it was identified as that of E. W. Moister, an auditor of the New York Telephone Company, living at 605 West 156th Street. A frank book of the telephone company which was found in a pocket established his identity.

Dr. Roger D. Moister of Summit, N. J., a son of the dead man, said yesterday that his father had been under treatment two years for attacks of dizziness, and that his death was due to such a spell. Besides his son, Mr. Moister leaves a wife and three daughters.

The rush-hour Subway traffic was tied up half an hour on account of the accident.

A. C. BECKWITH WILL.

Legacies Ranging from $25,000 to $2,500 Left to Relatives.

The will of Anna C. Beckwith, widow of Samuel C. Beckwith, who died on March 1 at her home in the Langham Apartment, was filed yesterday in the Surrogates' Court for probate. The value of the estate is given as more than $10,000 personalty.

Mrs. Robert W. Beckwith receives $25,000 and various articles of jewelry. There are other bequests of personal effects to Samuel C. Beckwith, a nephew; Robert W. Beckwith, a brother-in-law; Mrs. C. F. Newbill and Mary B. Evans. Legacies ranging in amount from $10,000 to $2,500 are made to various relatives. The residue is divided in equal shares among Robert W. Beckwith, James T. Beckwith, Mary B. Evans, Henrietta C. Newbill, and Harriett W. Adams.

SEEKS IDEAL HOUSEKEEPER.

Millerton Man Advertises He Wants Some One to be Boss.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, March 12.—The village of Millerton is deeply interested in the quest of Charles H. Hill for a housekeeper who shall possess most of the virtues and few of the weaknesses of womanhood. An advertisement published by Mr. Hill in which he told what he would require has attracted widespread attention. In respose Mr. Hill is receiving many letters, and has had many callers in person. Those of his friends who asked Mr. Hill whether or not he had discovered a paragon received no reply. Mr. Hill lives some distance from the village on the borders of the Berkshires on a little farm which he owns and tills. He has a horse and chickens.

Mr. Hoag of the grocery firm of Hoag & Keefer, of Millerton, said to-night:

"Mr. Hill has traded with us for twenty years and I can highly recommend him as a man of his word. He is temperate, kind and considerate of others. I should not regard him as wealthy, but he has sufficient means for his needs. He stands high in the community."

Here is the advertisement in which Mr. Hill sets forth his requirements:

HOUSEKEEPER.—If this should meet the eye of a neat, tidy, economical, middle-aged woman of good appearance, with no encumbrance, who can fill below mentioned requirements, who would appreciate a good home rather than a lucrative position, can be engaged at once to act in the capacity of a plain housekeeper to take full charge of a gentleman's home, not a millionaire, and handle it as if it was her own, be boss, and rule supremely, and use the gad or the club on the advertiser if need be.

One who loves horses, chickens, and flowers; not too tired to keep the home neat and tidy, and always too busy to talk her neighbors to death; a party raised on the farm preferred; one that can cook a few plain meals a day, pigs' feet, or lobster salad, not particular which, and nail on a button now and then; a real old-fashioned motherly woman; don't care what her age is; with some business ability; also must have some gray matter, commonly called brains, in her head.

One who is willing to help his royal highness to earn and save a dollar where many are now going to waste; not particular as to religious belief; a mighty good home for the right party; no young girls, institution matrons, professional nurses, triflers, curiosity seekers, adventuresses, massage parlor beauties, Countesses, Princesses, or people with a long family pedigree, whose ancestors came over on the Mayflower, need apply.

Mr. Hill has been married once. His wife died many years ago and after her death his mother-in-law kept house for him until her death, which occurred a short time ago. He has two sons, one a fireman on the Harlem Railroad and the other, assistant agent on the Central New England Railroad at Millerton.

SAME AUTO STRIKES TWO

While Chauffeur Is Taking One He Hits Another—Runaway Horse Fells Two Women and Baby.

Edward Schlesinger, 11 years old, of 1,408 Fifth Avenue, was run over and killed yesterday afternoon at Fifth Avenue and 115th Street by an automobile fire engine. John Daly, 61 years old, of 253 Tenth Avenue, was so seriously injured in another street accident that he died in the New York Hospital shortly afterward. A Broadway car at Dey Street killed an unidentified man late last evening and an automobile ran down and seriously injured two children on the upper east side. When the chauffeur was speeding toward the hospital with the first victim, a boy, he struck a little girl. Together the two children were hurried on to a doctor's care. A runaway horse at Third Avenue and 156th Street injured two women and came near causing the death of a baby at about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. These were the serious street accidents of a day.

When the Schlesinger twins, Edward and Rudolph, came from school yesterday afternoon to their home at 1,408 Fifth Avenue they threw their books aside, and then, as Edward turned back for the fun of the after-school hours on the street, he bade his twin bring him an apple from the pantry. Rudolph did as he was told and found his reward in an apple which he carefully selected and polished for himself. He had one in each hand when he trotted out to the street and down to the 115th Street corner, below their house, to find his brother.

Just as he got there fire engines were trailing back from an easy blaze on 100th Street, and Rudolph slowed up to let them pass. One was an automobile engine, just turning the corner, when there was a shout from the men on the different machines and a yell of fear from all the boys of the neighborhood, who scattered to the curbs.

The next thing Rudolph knew was that some boy had been run over, and then they told him it was his brother. He had run directly in the path of the big machine, it seemed. There was a rush to get him to Mt. Sinai Hospital, but the surgeons there said that he had been killed instantly.

The hundreds of persons at Tenth Avenue and Twenty-third Street saw John Daly, 61 years old, of 253 Tenth Avenue hit by a large automobile truck, knocked several feet, and then run over by the heavy machine. Both of his legs were broken and his skull fractured. He died two hours later in New York Hospital.

The accident caused great excitement among the crowd in Tenth Avenue at that time. Women's screams first attracted the attention of Policeman O'Connell of the West Seventeenth Street Station, who was standing a short distance away. Dr. Miller of New York Hospital was summoned and he removed Daly there, where all attempts to save him were futile.

According to several eyewitnesses, the old man saw the automobile before it hit him, but too late to get out of its way. The chauffeur, James Jennessen, 23 years old, of 423 West Twenty-sixth Street, was not arrested. Daly was identified by his son, Dennis Daly, of 234 West Nineteenth Street.

The sidewalks at 156th Street and Third Avenue were crowded yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock with the people who had just come from the matinée at Miner's, when warning shouts and a rattle and clatter spread the news of a runaway horse coming that way from Park Avenue to the west. That and the sight of the unharnessed animal plunging forward despite all the efforts to stop him, sent the crowd flying in every direction, but every one got in every one's way and the sidewalk on the northeast corner was dense with men and women when the horse headed straight into the thick of the crowd.

Right in its path Mrs. Josephine Levy of 820 Dawson Street, the Bronx, was pushing her 2-year-old baby Rosalie in a go-cart as she walked with her friend and neighbor, Mrs. Rose Radin. At the sight of the horse her first thought was for the baby, and she clutched her out of the cart. It wasn't a question of her pushing her way to some shelter. There did not seem to be any time, for the next thing she and Mrs. Radin knew the horse was on the pavement and had knocked them down. But the animal sunk to its haunches, and this was the chance for Benjamin Bartino of 514 Van Nest Avenue, who had made several ineffectual efforts to halt the runaway. This time he was able to hold the horse quiet until the path could be cleared and the horse itself more thoroughly subdued. Mrs. Levy and Mrs. Radin were carried injured and hysterical to a drug store, but the baby was only scared. The mother had probably saved the child's life, for the go-cart was trampled to fragments by the frightened horse.

Both women were badly bruised and Mrs. Radin suffered a brain concussion, but they will both recover. A few moments after the accident the horse was claimed by Dominic Fantori of 152 East 138th Street, who had been driving peaceably up Park Avenue, when his cart was struck and tipped over by a huge automobile coal truck.

Broadway traffic was held up for over half an hour last night and three ambulances were called out as well as policemen from three stations, when an unidentified man was knocked down and killed by a northbound Broadway surface car at Dey Street shortly after 9:30 o'clock.

The man, according to Frank Reed, the motorman, stepped from the east side of Broadway and staggered directly in front of the car.

There were but two passengers in the car at the time. One of these, a man, pulled a police whistle from his pocket and blew it. Policeman Cohen of the Oak Street Station, and Policeman Wilson of the Old Slip Station, came up on the run and found the man's body tightly wedged under the forward truck.

Passers-by attracted by the whistle hurried up and in a short time several hundred people were gathered about the car. Three ambulances, brought by as many calls, arrived, two from the Hudson Street Hospital and one from the Volunteer Hospital. Dr. McPheters, the first ambulance surgeon to arrive, pronounced the man dead.

After his automobile had knocked down and had broken the leg of a nine-year-old boy, Joseph J. Peterson, a chauffeur of 152 East Eighty-seventh Street, was taking the boy in the machine to the Reception Hospital last night, when a four-year-old girl stepped into the road and was struck by the car. The girl was picked up and put alongside the boy and both were taken to the hospital.

Peterson is chauffeur for Morris Asinof, a clothing manufacturer, who lives at 73 East Ninetieth Street. He was on his way to the Asinof home in the car when he struck the boy, Philip Manturie of 400 East Eighty-ninth Street, at Park Avenue and Eighty-ninth Street. The little girl, Liddy Sakolicze, was playing in front of her home, 504 East Seventieth Street, and ran in the path of the machine.

Drs. Russell and Beck examined the children and found that the boy had received many contusions of the body besides the fractured leg. He was detained. The little girl had received contusions on the face and head and bruises of the body. She was treated and later taken home.

The chauffeur was not detained, as the police say both accidents were unavoidable.

Memorial to Central Park Designers.

The City Club is forming a committee to provide a memorial of Frederick Law Olmstead and Calvert Vaux, the originators of the "greensward" plan for Central Park, which was adopted in 1858.

The designers of New York's great park have no memorial of any kind and those who feel an interest in the construction of such a memorial may communicate with the Secretary of the Committee, 55 West F[illegible] Street, New York.

CUMMINS PROPERTIES SOLD.

Financier's Nashville Interests Bought for $221,000 by New Yorkers.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 12.—The W. J. Cummins properties here, including the plant of the Tennessee Packing & Stock Yards Company, the Cassetty Oil Company, the Union Stock Yards, the Enterprise Soap Works, and the Merchants' Wire Bound Box Company, were sold here to-day for $221,100 at a trustee's sale.

The successful bid was made by an attorney, John Bell Keeble, representing a New York syndicate. Mr. Keeble stated that the New York Superintendent of Banking had been fully advised of the sale and that the bid was made with his approval. He refused to give the names of the New York purchasers.

The auction of the property was well attended and the bidding was spirited at times. The property was first offered in separate items and later bid for as a whole. The successful bid is subject to the approval of the court. Mr. Keeble has represented the New York Superintendent of Banking in suits from here in connection with the Carnegie Trust Company litigation.

It is understood that in the event of the court approving the bid the syndicate will operate the several properties, which are worth considerably more than they brought at the sale. For the past year or more the properties have been operated by the trustee, C. C. Slaughter.

LOOKS UP HIS CHILDREN.

Consults Notebook to Answer How Many in Court.

Edward A. Davis, proprietor of an automobile machine shop in East Eighty-fifth Street, Manhattan, who was the defendant in the separation suit of Mrs. Maria L. Davis before Justice Kelly in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, had to consult a memorandum book when the attorney for the plaintiff asked him how many children he had. Before he answered the question put to him by the attorney, he turned to Justice Kelly and asked:

"Your Honor, may I consult a little memorandum I have here?"

There was a murmur of suppressed laughter in the courtroom when the witness appeared uncertain as to the number of his offspring. Justice Kelly had to smile as he nodded assent to the request.

Davis then pulled a small memorandum book out of his pocket, in which he had written the names and ages of his children. After carefully examining his record he answered:

"I have nine."

The Attorney for Davis tried to have the action thrown out of court on the ground that his client and the plaintiff made and agreement on July 12 last whereby Mrs. Davis agreed to live apart and not bother him in any way if he paid her the flat sum of $25. Davis said that in this agreement his wife released him from all further obligations to her. Justice Kelly disagreed with the attorney for Davis that the alleged agreement constituted a bar to the action before the court. The Justice said that in his court no man could cast his wife aside on the payment of $25.

The attorney for Davis said that the Court of Appeals had held that such an agreement was valid.

"I don't care about that," said Justice Kelly. "I am going to hold the other way. That man is getting off too cheap."

Justice Kelly at the conclusion of the testimony took all the papers in the case and reserved decision.

CITY GOING AHEAD WITH SUBWAY DEAL

Confidence Grows That Gould Objections to Elevated Third-Tracking Will Fail.

ALL PARTIES IN CONFERENCE

City Officials, Interborough, and B. R. T. Men and Morgan Banking Interest Go Over the Final Details.

With the city authorities and the Interborough management gaining confidence that George J. Gould's objections to the third tracking of the elevated were likely to fail, steps were taken yesterday to press forward the subway settlement next week. A meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the office of Borough President McAneny, at which the forms of resolutions to be adopted by the Board of Estimate on Monday for the approval of the contracts and certificates were gone over carefully.

Those present beside Mr. McAneny were Controller Prendergast, J. P. Morgan, Jr., Francis Lynde Stetson, counsel for the Morgan firm; Theodore P. Shonts, President, and Richard Reid Rogers, counsel of the Interborough; George D. Yeomans, counsel for the B. R. T., and George S. Coleman and Leroy T. Harkness, counsel for the Public Service Commission. They approved the draft of the resolutions and seemed quite satisfied that nothing remained to be done about the subway settlement except pass the resolutions.

Meanwhile Col. Timothy S. Williams, President of the B. R. T., made an inspection of the loop subway, which has been lying unused for two or three years, but which he hopes by next Tuesday at any rate to have leased to his company for operation. It is all completed but the southern end, which has been held up by the work of constructing the Municipal Building, and even this is now far advanced. It is hoped that in a few months trains will be running into it from the Williamsburg Bridge.

The Manhattan Railway Company's Directors held a meeting yesterday to consider the third tracking situation, but made no statement of their conclusions. Their committee will see Mr. Shonts again to-day, and the Directors will meet again after that conference. Though no official statement has been made by either party to the negotiations, it was learned yesterday that one suggestion which has been put forward was that the Interborough should increase to $50,000 the $10,000 which it pays to the Manhattan Company as administration expenses. This has been proposed as a means by which the Interborough could pass on to the Manhattan Company a share of the extra profits it is likely to get from the third tracking of the elevated lines in Manhattan and the Bronx.

It is, however, by no means certain that Mr. Shonts will accept even such a compromise as this. The $10,000 which is now paid never has been considered by the Interborough Board to be actually earned by the Manhattan, as its administrative work in connection with the elevated lines is at present practically nothing. But it is accepted as part of the bargain between the two companies and no question is ever likely to be raised about it.

But even if the Interborough were sufficiently complaisant to give an extra $40,000 to the Manhattan under this guise of expenses, it is not certain that the city would agree to it. Under the agreement between the Commission and the Interborough with reference to the elevated lines, the city is to receive in return for its permission to extend the system 50 per cent. of the increase of net earnings of both the new and old lines. Consequently as the payment of the additional $40,000 would reduce the net earnings by that sum, the city would find its return from the elevated decreased by half that amount.

Before the operating contracts between the city and the Interborough are signed next Monday or Tuesday, the Interborough will have to execute a bond of $1,000,000 for the faithful performance of its part. This money will have to be deposited with the commission, either in cash or securities, but with J. P. Morgan & Co. as the company's bankers it is not thought that there will be any difficulty in fulfilling that condition.

THIS COW'S NAME IS MAUDE.

Mrs. Anderson Is Suing Dr. Cocke for $10,000.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., March 12.—Mrs. Irene S. Anderson of Port Washington, L. I., has begun suit against Dr. William I. Cocke of that village before Justice of the Supreme Court Van Siclen here to recover $10,000 for damage done to her person and to her lawn by a cow which she alleges is owned by Dr. Cocke.

The cow's name is Maude. One day in July, 1912, Mrs. Anderson says in her bill of complaint, Maude, after usurping a caller's privileges and eating off the lawn, resented Mrs. Anderson's attempt to lead her beyond the gates, and with her horns inflicted upon Mrs. Anderson injuries from the effects of which she may never fully recover.

Dr. Cocke defends the case on the ground that the cow in question did not belong to him or the thing never would have occurred, as his cow has a lovely, gentle character.

EBERHART IN TOMBS; ONCE A RICH MAN

Letters to Prominent Men Reveal Him as Former President of Lumber Company.

ONCE ARRESTED BY FATHER

For Trying to Cause His Death—Recently Adjudged Insane in San Francisco.

It became known at the Tombs yesterday that Edward C. Eberhart, President of the Dowd Lumber Company and at one time reputed to be worth a million dollars, was in the Tombs on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and that a commission would be asked for to determine his sanity.

The discovery that the Eberhart in the Tombs was the son of Dr. J. F. Eberhart, for whom a museum in Scranton, Penn., is named, grew out of numerous letters written by the prisoner to J. P. Morgan, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, and other prominent men. In all of these letters the prisoner said that he was being defrauded out of his money and was innocent of any crime. He was arrested in the Hotel Preston at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street, by Policeman William H. Hughes on March 4. Policeman Hughes was passing the hotel when he heard angry voices, and going inside he found the defendant arguing with a group of people. He cautioned him to be quiet, and when Eberhart refused, placed him under arrest. A revolver was found in his hip pocket and he was arraigned in the Essex Market Court and held for the Grand Jury.

Eberhart first broke into public notice in 1900 when he was arrested for attempting to hire a man to murder his father. This man was Frank Lewis, and he signed an affidavit saying that the defendant offered him $5,000 to kill his father, and said he wanted him killed because he was worth over $1,000,000 and he needed the money. Lewis told Dr. Eberhart of this, and the doctor caused his son's arrest. After spending six months in jail young Eberhart was released.

On the death of Dr. Eberhart the defendant received a trust fund of $100,000, while the bulk of his father's fortune was given to the Scranton Museum, provided that the name be changed to the Eberhart Museum. The museum authorities agreed to do this. The son then came to this city, where he joined the Dowd Lumber Company.

Eberhart again attracted public notice on Feb. 16 last, when his wife, Sarah R. Eberhart, appeared before the Supreme Court and asked for $75 a week alimony and counsel fees of $1,000 in a suit for separation brought by Mrs. Eberhart.

Last January Eberhart went to Reno, followed by process servers who had papers in his wife's suit. He returned to this city and later returned to Reno, and then went to San Francisco, where he was adjudged insane and sent to an institution. He remained there a short time and was released when his friends in this city said that they would place him in some institution for treatment. He was then taken to the Rivercrest Sanitarium, but only remained there two days, getting out on March 1. The next heard of him was when he was arrested in the Hotel Preston.

FIAT

A Marvel of Simplicity

The Fiat "Six" is a marvel of Simplicity. Fiat Designing Genius has eliminated more than 300 chassis parts found in other automobiles. It has made one camshaft do the work of two; two timing-gears do the work of from 5 to 7; one universal driving-shaft joint do the work of from 2 to 3, and so on—all during three years of Fiat monobloc motor success.

Less Weight—Fewer Parts
Lower Tire and Upkeep Costs

This Simplicity Means Everything to the Car Owner. It means less weight and a consequent saving in tire costs. (The Fiat "Six" is from 300 to 700 pounds lighter than other 6-cylinder cars of equal horsepower.) It means fewer parts to get out of order, a great saving in upkeep expense, simpler work and smaller charges when repairs are necessary.

5 or 55 Miles an Hour on High Gear or Greater Speed if Desired. A Perfectly Balanced Spring Suspension Preventing Jolting or Skidding on Roughest Roads.

RAINSTORM CHECKS YANKEES' PRACTICE

Midkiff Being Drilled for Third Base—Lillivelt May Be Regular Right Fielder.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, March 12.—The Yankees had their first vie wof a regular Bermuda storm to-day after a spell of ideal training weather, but luckily they did not have to forego practice on account of the rain. Storm clouds were in evidence early this morning, so Manager Chanec gave orders for an early start to the cricket field, instead of waiting until 10 o'clock, the usual time for beginning practice. The move proved a wise one, as the storm broke about noon, and when the Yankees left the field they had enjoyed almost s much practice as on previous days. The downpour was very heavy.

Manager Chance spent considerable time this morning with Ray Fisher, the big pitcher who gave such great promise in 1911 and made a miserable failure last season. Fisher has relied considerably on his moist tosses, and he developed a fairly good specimen of this puzzling delivery. He was one of the first of the Yankees to into round pitching form, and to-day he showed his new manager all he had. Chance was greatly impressed with Fisher's speed and curves, and advised him to give up the saliva ball. Chance said that Fisher had enough speed and curves to develop into a wonderful pitcher, and the schoolmaster has decided to take his manager's tip.

Paddy Green was another of the pitching staff to come under Chance's close attention during to-day's training period, and the recruit was ordered to do no more running, which is part of the daily exercise named for the pitchers by Manager Chance Green is already down to his proper weight, and Chance has decided that a let-up is necessary to keep him from becoming stale.

Midkiff again performed brilliantly during to-day's workout, and he is beginning to loom up as the strongest possibility for the third base position. The place, from present indications, will rest between Midkiff and Roy Hartzell, and the latter is being groomed for the post of all-around substitute. Chance is impressed with Hartzell's ability for both infield and outfield duty, but is confronted with the question as to whether Hartzell is not too valuable to the team to be doing substitute work.

Hal Chase's injured ankle continues to show improvement, and it is expected that he will be able to get out in uniform again next Monday. He goes to the cricket field daily but limps as a result of the accident last week. He will have to go easy for some time after resuming work, and undoubtedly will be excused from taking part in any of the three games between the Yankees and the Jersey City team next week.

Th second game of the series with the Skeeters is scheduled for to-morrow if the weather permits. Manager Chance will not decided upon pitchers until time for the game, and he will probably send in three, each to work three innings. All of the boxmen are in fairly good condition and anxious to be sent out for real work.

Lelivelt looks like the right field choice. Wolter has shown wonderful ground-covering ability, and with his strong throwing arm will be invaluable at centre field. The short right field wall makes Lelivelt, who is the slowest outfielder on the team, more likely than he would be otherwise. He knows the position well, but will have to learn the caroms off the concrete wall. Lelivelt is not the fielder or base runner that Daniels is, but he is a terrific hitter, and that covers a multitude of other faults. He is also a better thrower than Daniels. In his limited sphere at the Polo Grounds his weaknes in ground covering will be partly eliminated.

Chicago Fans to Honor Chance.

CHICAGO, March 12.—Friends of Frank Chance here already have begun plans for honoring the former manager of the Chicago National League team on May 15, the date on which the New York Americans, of which he is now the head, open their first Western engagement with the Chicago Americans.

The day is to be known as "Frank Chance Day," and the patrons who favored the games at the National League Park while he was there will have the honor place in the parade. A committee composed of both west and south side enthusiasts will make arrangements for the affair.

Two thousands seats have been reserved for that day on the first base side of the grandstand in the hope that the new manager of the New York Club will play the initial bag. An automobile parade, headed by a police escort and brass band, will start from the Board of Trade Building and move through south side boulevards to the park.

RUBE MARQUARD MARRIED.

Giants' Pitcher Takes Blossom Seeley as His Bride in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—"Rube" Marquard signed one contract for life to-day and agreed to sign another one for a season. Just after he had married "Blossom Seeley," an actress, who has been his partner on the stage, he gave his word to Dick Kinsella, scout for the New York Nationals, that he would sign as pitcher for the coming season.

The marriage ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the parsonage of the German Evangelical Lutheran Church, with only theatrical friends in attendance, but with a host of newspaper men and photographers waiting outside.

In the marriage license the big southpaw gave his name as Richard De Marquis, twenty-three years of age and his bride as Katherine Kane, twenty-two.

"Rube" was very nervous.

"He was so anxious to get her," said the Rev. H. S. Felix, who performed the ceremony, "that he answered all my questions before I finished them."

The dispatch indicates that Marquard has declined heretofore to sign a contract to play with the Giants this year. As a matter of fact the "Rube" signed last Spring for three years and his absence from the Giants' training camp is due only to his theatrical engagements.

TOO MUCH MUD FOR GIANTS.

They Can Only Toss Ball Around on Wet and Soggy Field.

Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN, Texas, March 12.—This was the first really unsuitable baseball day the Giants have had this Spring, and even then the whole day did not go to waste. It rained last night and this morning, and nothing could be done in the forenoon. Scarcely anybody went out of doors.

In the afternoon, however, the rain stopped and all hands went out to the ball field in uniform. The field was soft and muddy, but careful inspection revealed enough spots for the men to separate into pairs and hurl the ball back and forth for half an hour. As the weather was warm and sultry it was not a bad workout at all for the pitchers, who could let loose as freely with their arms as they felt inclined.

Not a player had a bat in his hand all day, but after the throwing session there came a siege with the medicine ball and then a long run which brought the squad back to the hotel dripping with perspiration.

Next Wednesday the Giants will go over to Waco and play the Texas League team of that thriving municipality. Manager McGraw arranged this additional battle to-day.

Randolph M. A. Wins Its Last Game.

The Randolph Military Academy of Morristown, N. J., closed its successful basketball season yesterday by defeating the Morristown High School team in the Academy gymnasium by a score of 37 to 33.

Cornell Lacrosse Team's Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, March 12.—The schedule for the Southern trip of the Cornell lacrosse team was announced by the management to-day as follows: April 3, Lehigh at South Bethlehem, Penn.; April 4, Swarthmore at Swarthmore, Penn.; April 5, Johns Hopkins at Baltimore, Md.; April 7, Carlisle at Carlisle, Penn.

TO INCREASE NEW LEAGUE.

Asbury Park and Port Chester May Be Admitted to Inter-State Body.

The Long Branch, N. J., baseball club was admitted to membership in the New York and New Jersey Inter-State League at a meeting of the club owners at the Hotel Cadillac yesterday. Long Branch takes the place of Long Island City, which was unable to join the league on account of the objection of the Brooklyn baseball club of the National League, which has jurisdiction over that district. Long Branch is considered a valuable addition to the league because of the large Summer colony there and the popularity of Sunday baseball.

The Long Branch club is owned by Henry Henriquez, a Cuban, who has several Cuban players on his team. The team had a fine record last season playing Sunday games agaist major league teams. Gondolaz, who caught for the club last season, has been signed by the Boston Nationals.

Billy Lush, the former Yale baseball coach, and Montreal manager, made application at the meeting for a franchise for Port Chester, N. Y. He pointed out that the place would support a club, especially as Sunday games could be played there. The league looked upon the application favorably, but no action will be taken until the league ascertains if it will be able to form an eight-club circuit.

Port Chester would make the seventh club, and an eighth member would have to be admitted to balance the circuit. An effort will be made to interest Asbury Park promoters in a scheme to place a team at that resort. It is believed that with the large Summer colony a team would find ample support. The outlook for a club there is encouraging, and it is very likely that the league will now have an eight-club circuit. The sanction of the National Association, which has been withheld because of the objection of the Brooklyn club, will be given in a few days by Secretary John H. Farrell of Auburn.

The club owners adopted many of the rules of other Class D leagues. Each visiting club will be guaranteed $40 a game, and $60 for double-headers. In case of a postponement, the visiting club will be guaranteed $20. The league also voted to pool the holiday receipts, each club to receive an equal share, which will be a big protection to the weaker clubs.

The umpires will be paid $6 a game, or $9 for a double-header, which is to be paid immediately after each game. The club has already received enough applications from umpires to furnish a dozen leagues.

President Rosslyn M. Cox of Middletown, N. Y., presided at the meeting, and the only club not represented was Kingston. Those present were Jack Lawlor, Middletown; C. Freeman Weed, Poughkeepsie; William Dobbins, Paterson; W. H. Pfau, Newburg; H. Hendiques, Long Branch, and Secretary Fred Leib.

The owners spent much time in drawing up the constitution and by-laws, and a schedule committee was appointed which will report at the next meeting of the league, which will be called by the President.

COBB PLAYS WITH SUPERBAS.

Dahlen's Nine Wins Easily with Aid of Famous Detroit Player.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 12.—The Brooklyn ballplayers were favored with another perfect day for practice to-day. Manager Dahlen changed his programme of the last two days by reducing the scrub game to seven innings. This practically gave the players three practice sessions and a short game, as they practice after the game also.

After to-day's game had gone a couple of innings Manager Dahlen asked Ty Cobb to play right field in place of Pitcher Allen as a compliment to the many natives who had gathered in the grand stand. Cobb's hitting counted in the scoring for his side, as he hammered out two singles and a double in four times at bat. Score: Dahlens, 9; Dauberts, 7.

Manager Dahlen worked six pitchers during the seven innings. Of the sextet Curtis fared the worst. It was during Cliff's stay on the mound that the Dahlens came from behind and piled up six runs on six consecutive hits, among them being a double by Ty Cobb.

Kirkpatrick, who has been hitting the ball hard, if not harder than any of the other players, came to the front again to-day with four singles out of four times up. Shortstop Fisher cleaned up two doubles, and Zach Wheat and Stengel made triples.

Short Stop Fisher will be forced to take things easy for a couple of days on account of being hit by a pitched ball in the seventh inning, which slightly injured the index finger of his right hand. This is the first accident of any kind to happen in the camp.

GLENWOOD TRAP SHOOTING.

J. H. Henrickson Wins First Honors in Invitation Tournament.

GLEN COVE, L. I., March 12.—John H. Hendrickson, Bergen Beach Gun Club, a member of the American Olympic trapshooting team, won the invitation handicap shoot, held under the auspices of the Glenwood Country Club here to-day. Shooting with a handicap of 2, the winner returned a total of 92 out of a possible 100 targets. His individual scores were 23, 23, 21 and 23. Considering the conditions, the score made by Mr. Hendrickson was excellent. Summary:

Invitation Shoot, 100 Targets, Handicap.—John H. Hendrickson, Bergen Beach, 2, 92; H. H. Shannon, Bergen Beach, 5, 89; D. E. Smith, Glenwood C. C., 20, 88; C. W. Berner, Glenwood C. C., 10, 88; W. S. Crack Hockey Teams to Play Here.

The first game in the professional hockey series between the Quebecs of Quebec and the Wanderers of Montreal, for the title of champion and a purse of $2,500, will be played to-night at the St. Nicholas Rink. The Quebecs are the recognized champions of Canada and the Wanderers won the right to play them in a post-season battle by defeating the Ottawas of Ottawa last week in two nights' exhibition of the most brilliant hockey ever seen anywhere. It is difficult to believe that any team could show skill superior to that displayed by the Wanderer players, but the Quebecs come here with the reputation of excelling the Montreals in every department of the game. They have won the Stanley Cup, emblematic of the professional championship of Canada, for two consecutive years, beating teams made up of the most expert professional players that the game has ever known. On the Wanderer team will be Odie and Sprague Cleghorn, who formerly played here as amateurs, but who are to-day two of the most expert stick handlers in Canada, and Art Ross, a veteran but still a great defense player.

SPORTS CARNIVAL IN 47TH ARMORY

Track Athletics, Fencing, Gymnastics, and Wrestling Among Features.

The H. Batterman Company Athletic Association sponsored a sports carnival last night in the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, which had more sides to it than any series held in recent years. Track athletics, tug of war, cycling, wrestling, fencing, gymnastics and a drill by a detachment of the United States Army from Fort Hamilton, under command of Lieut. P. G. Blackmore, served to engage the attention of probably 5,000 spectators.

The armory floor took on all the appearances of a three-ringed circus, so varied were the stunts, with something doing most of the time in every section of the arena.

The eight-mile relay was the stellar track event on the programme, and engaged eleven teams, among the runners being record holders and champions in distance-running events, including Willie Kramer and Louis Scott, Harry Smith and Eddie Jordan, John J. Gallagher of Georgetown and J. J. Williams, and many others well known to local fame.

From the outset the race resolved itself into a duel between the Kramer-Scott and Smith-Jordan factions. After the first relay, in which the men ran a quarter-mile, the teams wisely changed at the end of each lap, so that the event became as fast as possible for the style of race. For the first three miles the teams named seesawed in the matter of leadership, each of the runners making valiant tries to "lose" his opponent in the dozen brushes each had had for an eighth of a mile apiece up to that time.

From that stage on to four miles, however, Kramer and Scott made every succeeding lap their best, with the result that by four miles they had made such gains on Smith and Jordan that they got a lap to the good just over four and one-half miles, and by the time of the finish had made the gap a lap and a half, a bit over 300 yards, with what was said to have been a new record, 34:45 3-5, and which would, if accepted, displace 34:51, made by Ryan and Huysman in Madison Square Garden two years ago.

Smith and Jordan finished second and Springsteen and Holden, the Yonkers team, third.

The first of the events to stir up real enthusiasm was the medley relay, a scratch affair, in which a dozen teams took part. The various relays were split up as follows: One mile, half mile, 440 yards, and 220 yards. The men had just passed the quarter-mile mark, with Willie Kramer, Long Island A. C., in the van, with the time 66 seconds, when the three leaders, Kramer, McCabe, Dominican Lyceum, and Meeks of the second Long Island A. C. team drew away from the others. Kramer led at the half in 2:08, with McCabe still second, and Meeks third.

In order to give his next mate a good lead, the two-mile indoor champion and record holder continued to widen the gap between himself and the rest of the field, with the result that at the end of his journey he handed Sid Leslie a fifty-yard advantage, having run the mile in 4:24 2-5. In his share of the race Leslie held his own and managed to stand off Myles McHugh's determined bid at the end, holding his own. Bausch then took up the running for the Long Island first team and added a few yards to the great lead, which left it comparatively easy for Jukes, the "220" man, to win in the most comfortable of styles in 7:46 2-5, with the Pastime team second, fifty yards back, and Dominican Lyceum third.

The walk developed into the usual joke, and, according to the time returned, the winner, R. B. Gifford, McCadden Lyceum, the champion did the exceptional performance of 6:40, this being announced as a new armory record. In view of the fact that a whitewashed line marked the elipse, which is clearly against the rules, the purpose of the announcement could not be learned. It was the opinion of nearly every one but the judges that every man in the race at the end should have been disqualified. According to the time returned, Frank B. Plant, off the six-second mark, was beaten but five yards and must have done as good as 6:48 all the way.

Among the foilsmen with competitors from a half-dozen organizations the winner turned up in George Reimherr, Jr., of the New York Turn Verein, who won four bouts and lost nine. A. N. Clough of Columbia finished second, and H. Mouquin, Columbia, third. The summaries:

Medley Relay; One Mile and Seven-eighths, Scratch.—Won by Long Island A. C. first team, made up of W. J. Kramer, (1 mile;) Sid Leslie, (½ mile;) J. Bannah, (440 yards;) and A. Jurkes, (220 yards;) Pastime A. C. team, made up of Slieper, McHugh, Shea and Glutsch, second; Dominican Lyceum team, made up of McCabe, Hand, Manley, and Cahill, third. Time—7:46 2-5.

100-Yard Dash, Catholic Athletic League Handicap, Final Heat.—Won by A. M. Jones, McCadden Lyceum, (3 yards;) C. M. Goetz, St. Ann's A. A., (3½ yards,) second; E. J. Ward, Paulist A. C., (3 yards,) third. Time—0:10 3-5.

One-Mile Walk, Handicap.—Won by R. B. Gifford, McCadden Lyceum, (scratch;) F. R. Plant, Long Island A. C., (6 sec.) second; J. Morrison, Long Island A. C., third. Time—6:40.

Bicycle Race, Miss and Out, Three Miles.—Won by E. H. Goodwin, Irish-American A. C.; Jack Townsend, Dominican Lyceum, second; A. O. Lake, Empire City Wheelmen, third. Time—7:43.

One-Mile Relay, Military, Handicap.—Won by Thirteenth Regiment team, made up of H. Balcom, W. J. Fischer, H. Hirsher, and Drew Valentine, (34 yards;) Second Battalion team, made up of E. D. Shaw, E. D. Maurer, P. P. Houser, and H. A. Oltman, (48 yards,) second; Seventy-first Regiment team, made up of A. F. O'Connor, D. Shea, D. Kuhn, and H. Baker, (29 yards,) third. Time—3:25.

Foil Fencing.—Won by George Reinherr, Jr., New York Turn Verein, with four bouts and none lost; A. N. Clough, Columbia, second; H. Mouquin, Columbia, third.

75-Yard Novelty Race, Sack Racer Against Sprinter.—Won by T. P. Slattery, (sack,) Twenty-second Regiment A. A., (25 yards.) Time—0:07 3-5.

120-Pound Wrestling.—Final Bout—Won by Carl Carlson, Swedish-American A. C., from W. Droge, East Side Y. M. C. A., on work. Time—15:00.

DURLAND'S HORSE SHOW.

Three Classes Judged Following Weekly Music Ride.

An unusually large entry list in all the events, except the jump, featured the weekly music ride and Horse Show last night at Durland's Riding Academy. Fifty-six couples took part in the music ride, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. John Gerken. Six pairs of harness horses competed for ribbons in the class for pairs, twelve figured in the single harness class, and nineteen saddlers took part in the other class. The summaries:

Harness Horses in Pairs, 15 hands and over.—Won by L. M. Neugass's br. g. Cambridge King and b. g. Swan King; Emil Seelig's ch. m. Barger and gr. g. Gray Bird, second; M. G. Byers's b. g. Starlight and b. g. Brightlight, third; M. G. Byers's b. g. Harris S. and b. g. George, fourth.

Saddle Horses, 15 hands and over.—Won by L. M. Neugass's b. m. Morning Glory; E. Griffith's ch. g. Hoffield, second; Mrs. G. L. Begener's b. m. Emma Lou, third; Lehman Strauss's ch. g. Major, fourth.

Single Harness Horses, 15 hands and over.—Won by Emil Seelig's gr. g. Gray Bird; L. M. Neugass's br. g. Cambridge King, second; Emil Seelig's b. g. Royal Victoria, third; M. G. Byers's ch. g. Ixion, fourth.

Jumping Class.—Won by Martin Aylward's b. g. Shamrock.

Central Park Academy Music Ride.

About thirty couples took part in the music ride held last night at the Central Park Riding Academy. The remainder of the programme consisted of a polo game and an exhibition of jeu de barre, the latter being won by Mrs. F. W. Rowlands, with Miss G. Nichols second. In the polo game the team known as the Red and Whites defeated the Reds by the score of 1 to 0. The winning team was composed of O. W. Coleman, W. Gillman and J. F. Myers. The Reds' line-up included J. E. Maher, R. Morgan and M. Wilder. The only goal was scored by Coleman in the second period.

Winged Foot Sweep Men Prepare for Many Regattas.

The rowing committee of the New York Athletic Club, consisting of James A. Miller, Jr., Chairman; Hugh H. Baxter, James Cremins, Paul H. Pilgrim, and Charles F. Quinn, have outlined an active season for Coach Graninini's protégés, and plan to enter crews in all the principal regattas of the year, including those of the American Rowing Association, at Philadelphia, May 24; Harlem Regatta Association, New York, May 30; People's Regatta, Philadelphia, July 4, and at the Nationals and Middle States, the place of the holding of each of which has not been decided upon.

It is also intended, contingent upon the list of events and the availability of material, to also make entries in the series to be held under the auspices of the Hudson River Association, New York Bay Rowing Association, and the Long Island Rowing Association.

Giannini has a likely looking lot of candidates out for the junior crew, resulting from his call for prospective members of that squad, and from the early season showing in the gymnasium in Central Park South, where the men work out on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights, the prospects are said to be exceptionally bright for a winning crew in this division, in view of "Gene's" great results with "green" crews.

It is expected that the various candidates will shortly be taken to Travers Island, where a "training table" will be put into operation about April 1, in anticipation of the season's first competition on the Harlem River on Decoration Day.

Among the most promising of the junior candidates are said to be Harry Babcock, the world's champion pole vaulter, who is stated to have retired from track sport, and who is said to give great promise as an oarsman; Arthur Eisenbast, who, before going to Cornell as a track athlete, rowed on the Stuyvesant High School eight, and Gregory Mason, formerly a Williams College athlete, who was placed several times in New England intercollegiate contests.

Among the senior oarsmen who are getting into shape, "Jack" Boyle of the international champion four has declared himself a candidate for senior single scull honors, with the possibility that his first start will be made at the Harlem River series, May 30. Giannini states that Boyle has great promise in the "singles," and will be a hard man to beat. It is expected that Waldo Smith will shortly take up training and get into shape to repeat his successes as a senior single sculler.

COLUMBIA IN REGATTA.

May Row with Harvard, Princeton, and Penn on Charles River.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 12.—The Columbia University eight-oared crew very likely will be invited by Harvard, Princeton, and the University of Pennsylvania to row in a four-cornered race with these three college crews at Cambridge on May 10. Last Fall the Harvard, Philadelphia, and Princeton crews arranged for a triangular race for this Spring, but recently the Columbia management asked to be allowed to enter a crew, and it looks as if its request would bear fruit.

The Columbia management consulted with the Harvard men recently, and was informed that Harvard would agree to allow Columbia to row in the race, providing Princeton and Pennsylvania were willing to extend the invitation. Ellis Ward of the Quakers was as willing as was Capt. Abeles of Harvard to have the Columbia crew in the race at Cambridge, and now it is up to the Columbia management to obtain the consent of Dr. Spaeth, who is in charge of rowing affairs at Princeton. The Tigers, however, are expected to welcome Columbia as eagerly as have Harvard and Pennsylvania.

Harvard's course on the Charles River is sufficiently wide to accommodate four eight-oared crews, and all will be able to row under the best of conditions over the one and seven-eighths mile stretch in the Charles River basin.

CAMBRIDGE CREW IMPROVES.

Oxford, However, Still Prevails as Favorite for To-day's Race.

LONDON, March 12.—The training of the rival Oxford and Cambridge University eight-oared crews who are to meet to-morrow for their annual boat race from Putney to Mortlake, on the Thames, was finished this evening, when both indulged in brief starting sprints.

The result of to-morrow's race is much more open than at one time seemed possible. Oxford is still the favorite, but Cambridge despite the changes made in the crew has made such rapid progress that favorable weather conditions and a choice of stations might give its representatives the victory.

Cornell Crews Row on Inlet.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, March 12.—For the first time this season the Cornell 'Varsity crew enjoyed a spin on the inlet to-day. Coach Courtney sent out his 'Varsity and junior 'Varsity this afternoon, keeping the other crews on the rowing machines in the gymnasium, but he hopes to get his entire squad out before the end of the week. The ice in the upper inlet moved out last night, and by to-morrow it is expected that the stream will be clear about the island. The oarsmen were compelled to be cautious to avoid floating debris and loose ice, but they managed to get in an hour's good practice. Coach Courtney has been at the boathouse at 7 o'clock for the last three mornings, getting the building in shape for the use of the crews. The 'Varsity eight rowed as follows: Eddy, bow; Bates, 2; Munn, 3; Butts, 4; Lum, 5; Spransy, 6; Chapman, 7; Dole, stroke.

Cavalrymen Beat Camden at Polo.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 12.—Lack of team work caused the Camden polo team to lose to the Eleventh Cavalry team from Fort Oglethorpe at Camden, when the tournament for the Godfrey Preece Cups was opened. The score was 8¼ to 1¼. The best work was done by Lieut. Swift and Lieut. Mills of the army, and E. Y. Claussen and Newton Boykin for Camden. Claussen's riding of his blue ribbon ponies was a feature. To-morrow the Long Island Fishcatchers will play the Camden team in the second round of the second tournament.

Dankelman Beats McCourt.

John Dankelman, who represents New York in the National Intercity Billiard League, won his third consecutive victory from James McCourt of Pittsburgh in the final game of the three-game series match, which was decided at Doyle's Billiard Academy last night, by the score of 50 to 47 in 90 innings.

Detroit Girl Wins Tennis Final.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 12.—Miss Dorothy Ballantyne of Detroit to-day defeated Miss Helen Barnett of New Haven in the final play of the annual club championship tennis tournament for women. The sets were won 6-3, 7-5.

Hoppe Defeats Coleman at Billiards.

Willie Hoppe, who is practicing for his championship match with Ora Morningstar, which takes place in Pittsburgh next week, defeated H. Coleman, the winner of the recent amateur 18.2 balkline championship billiard tournament, in an exhibition match last night at the Morningside Billiard Acdamey, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, by the score of 400 to 154. The match was a handicap affair, as Hoppe was playing 18.1 balkline while his opponent played 18.2.

AMATEUR BOXERS IN CRESCENT A. C. RING

Preliminaries in Four Classes Decided—Champion Rex a Winner.

Amateur boxers representing many clubs performed in the ring at the Crescent Athletic Club in Brooklyn last night before a crowd which filled the gymnasium. The aspiring pugilists competed in four classes, the 115, 125, 135, and 150 pound classes. All the preliminaries were boxed last night, and the tournament will be completed on Saturday night.

There was a variety of boxing to suit all tastes, with some reversals. The 135-pound champion, H. O. Rex, held his own, but H. G. Pauli of the Trinity A. C., a 150-pound favorite, was outpunched and outpointed by G. Gross, a newcomer from the Pennant A. C. W. J. Jackson of the Grace A. C., who has won several bouts lately with a substantial punch, was outpointed by A. Schlesinger of the Central Y. M. C. A.

H. O. Rex of the Hollywood Inn A. C., the metropolitan title holder in the 135-pound class, defeated C. Ricciardi of the Sacred Heart A. C. by outpointing him in all of the three rounds. Rex chopped his opponent's face continually with a straight left jab and landed hard rights to the body. In the second preliminary in this class A. Schlesinger of the Central Y. M. C. A. defeated W. J. Jackson of the Grace A. C. Jackson boxed well in the opening round, but in the two succeeding rounds Schlesinger did most of the leading and forced Jackson to the ropes several times with hard blows to the face.

I. Garsh of the Sheridan A. C. and W. Lee of the Xavier A. C. furnished one of the best bouts of the show. Lee was the aggressor at the start and put Garsh down in the first round with a hard right to the jaw. Garsh showed much recuperative power, however, and came back strong enough in the third round to win the honors. In this session he sent Lee to the floor twice.

Leo Kalm, the 105-pound Metropolitan champion, was over weight and boxed in the 115-pound class against T. Healy of the Trinity A. C. Kalm won easily in a bout which was a burlesque on Healy's part. Healy did little more than give a dancing exhibition.

The two bouts in the 150-pound class furnished plenty of action. J. Rosenberg won from W. F. Sorenson of the Trinity A. C. on the judges' decision. The honors were almost even throughout the bout. H. S. Pauli of the Trinity A. C. got a big surprise from G. Gross of the Pennant A. C., who had a defense which Pauli's heavy punches were unable to batter down. The summaries:

115-POUND CLASS.

Leo Kalm, Pennant A. C., defeated T. Healy, Trinity A. C., three rounds.

Tim Kelly, Trinity A. C., defeated R. Wilson, unattached, one round.

Thomas Smith, Trinity A. C., defeated J. Russell, Boys' Club, one round.

125-POUND CLASS.

William J. Stanton, St. Bartholomew's A. C., defeated G. J. Fischer, unattached, three rounds.

I. Garsch, Sheridan A. C., defeated W. Lee, Xavier A. C., three rounds.

J. Nugent, Paulist A. C., defeated E. B. Garrigan, unattached, one round.

135-POUND CLASS.

H. O. Rex, Hollywood Inn A. C., defeated C. Ricciardi, Sacred Heart A. C., three rounds.

A. Schlesinger, Central Y. M. C. A., defeated W. J. Jackson, Grace A. C., three rounds.

150-POUND CLASS.

J. Rosenberg, Pennant A. C., defeated W. F. Sorenson, Trinity A. C., three rounds.

G. Gross, Pennant A. C., defeated H. G. Pauli, Trinity A. C., three rounds.

GUNBOAT SMITH READY.

Californian Finishes His Training for Wells at Sharkey A. C.

Gunboat Smith, the California heavyweight who is to box Bombardier Wells, the English champion, at Madison Square Garden to-morrow night, completed his hard training yesterday afternoon at the Sharkey Athletic Club. He will take some light exercise to-day, but will do no boxing. Manager Jim Buckley said yesterday that Smith was in condition to put up the battle of his career.

The Californian boxed six hard rounds at the gymnasium yesterday, three with Billy Leitch of the west side and three with Bob Armstrong, the negro heavyweight. At the conclusion of the workout Smith got on the scales, and he weighed a few ounces under 180 pounds. By taking things easy until he enters the ring to-morrow night, Smith figures that he will take on about four pounds. If he is successful, the weights of the two men will not differ as much as was first supposed, as Wells figures on weighing about 195 pounds ringside. Both men expect to be heavier than they were in any of their previous bouts in this city.

At Hawkins's roadhouse, in Westchester, Wells also finished the more strenuous part of his training. He will do only light exercising to-day, including a short jaunt over the country roads and some light sparring at the gymnasium. The Englishman feels that he is in almost perfect condition for the bout, and does not want to become too "fine."

Another heavyweight bout has been arranged to precede the Wells-Smith contest to-morrow night. It will bring together George Rodel, the South African who defeated Arthur Pelkey at the Fairmont Athletic Club two weeks ago, and Tim Logan, the sailor heavyweight.

Sporting Club's Boxing Card.

Thirty-four rounds of boxing have been arranged for the programme to-night at the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club. There will be three star bouts of ten rounds each and a preliminary of four rounds. What is probably the best match on the card will be between Joe Thomas, the California middleweight, and George Ashe of Philadelphia. In the second ten-rounder Harry Donohue of Pekin, Ill., and Johnny Marto, the local "warhorse," will be the principals. This contest should furnish some real action, as Marto usually gives a good account of himself, and as he has not had a bout in some time will be in good condition. The other ten-round bout will bring together Louisiana, a negro boxer of the Quaker City, and Jimmy Murray of Brooklyn.

Columbia Spring Soccer.

Columbia's soccer schedule is now complete for the Spring season, including three intercollegiate games on South Field and two out of town. The season opens with the game with Haverford on March 22. A game with Harvard at Cambridge on May 3 will wind up the games for the Blue and White. A preliminary game will be played with the Central Y. M. C. A. eleven either on South Field or in Brooklyn next Saturday afternoon. The schedule:

March 22, Haverford, at South Field; April 5, University of Pennsylvania, at South Field; April 19, Cornell, at Ithaca; April 26, Yale, at South Field; May 3, Harvard, at Cambridge.

Berkeley School Defeated.

The Berkeley School basket ball team lost to the Collegiate School five on the latter's course yesterday by the score of 20 to 11.

TWO NEW BOXING CLUBS.

Both Located on East Side—Commission Hears Few Cases.

Two new boxing clubs, both of which will operate in the lower East Side, were granted licenses by the State Athletic Commission at its regular weekly meeting yesterday afternoon. The new clubs are the Paddock A. C., 66-68 East Fourth Street, and the Atlantic Gardens A. C., Canal Street and the Bowery. The same clubs applied for licenses several weeks ago, and the commission refused to grant them. New applications were made by the promoters with some minor changes so as to meet the approval of the Commissioners.

The Commissioners devoted considerable time to an investigation of Fred McKay's appearance at the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club on Feb. 27 last, when he boxed Arthur Pelkey with his right arm heavily bandaged. McKay had been out of the ring for some time, supposedly with a broken arm, and it was charged that he was in no physical condition to box on the night in question. He used his left arm throughout the bout, indicating that his right arm was not in the best condition. John Reisler, manager of the club, and Dr. Benjamin Wolf, the club physician, were examined yesterday, and the physician said that the bandage was not needed, but simply put on as a precaution. He was warned that useless bandaging should be dispensed with in the future, and the referees will be ordered to remove any that come to their attention.

The National A. C. of Brooklyn entered a complaint against Tim Logan, a heavyweight boxer, who had signed to box Dummy Maxson at the club on Feb. 22, but had failed to put in an appearance for the bout. The commission will endeavor to locate Logan and hear his side of the case at next Wednesday's meeting.

Maxson figured in another complaint which came before the Commissioners yesterday, this being lodged by the boxer against the Irving A. C. for canceling an engagement for which he had signed up at the club. Officials of the club showed a copy of the contract under which Maxson agreed not to box elsewhere before his bout at the Irving A. C. He was knocked out four days before the Irving date, and the club called off his match. The commission sustained the action of the club and dismissed the case.

The question of assigning referees to the various boxing clubs, which was passed several weeks ago, did not come up for discussion yesterday, and nothing definite was given out as to when the plan will go into operation.

Applications from the Yonkers Athletic Club and the Prospect Corporation Company of Niagara Falls for continuation of previous licenses under new managements were acted upon favorably.

Luehring's Basket Ball Teams.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 12.—Frederick W. Luehring, Princeton's basket ball coach, who put Princeton on the collegiate map in this sport after ten unsuccessful seasons, to-day announced two all-star teams chosen from the players of the Eastern College Basket Ball League. His choices are made as much on the ability of the players to prevent goals as on their actual scoring, and are decidedly different from all the other selections that have been made.

Visconte to Race Longboat To-night.

An effort will be made at Madison Square Garden to-night to revive professional long-distance racing, when the young Italian runner, Mauro Visconte, will endeavor to lower Tom Longboat's colors in a fifteen-mile race. It will be the first professional race to be held this Winter at Madison Square Garden, and considerable interest is attached to it. Longboat has not been seen in indoor races since the Marathon craze of a few years ago, but his work during that time has shown the wonderful Indian runner still possesses a world of speed. Visconte has defeated a number of good runners in Europe and Canada, and this will be his first introduction to the New York followers of foot racing. The young Italian is credited with a record of 30:25, while Longboat's time for the distance is 30:04 2-5. Visconte feels that Longboat is not as speedy as formerly, and expects to win the race.

Crosby Wins Bronx House Race.

E. Crosby, starting with a handicap of two minutes, finished first in the weekly cross-country run for members of the Bronx Church House, held last night over a course of about four and one-third miles, in the time of 27:05. C. Travis, starting from the 2:15 mark, was second, his actual time being 27:25, and H. Connarsa, with an allotment of forty-five seconds, was third, in 25:45. This event closes the cross-country running season of the Bronx Church House. The aggregate total of miles covered in the nineteen races is eighty-two. The winner of first place for the season's races is J. E. Woods, who earned a total of thirty-six points. H. Gunther is second, with twenty-two; C. Travis third, with twenty-one, and N. J. Beundine fourth, with twenty points. Woods, who started with a handicap of thirty seconds in last night's event, ran a poor race and finished in sixth position.

Golf Results at Bellaire, Fla.

Special to The New York Times.

BELLAIRE, Fla., March 12.—The second round of match play for the Belleview championship took place to-day. In the first sixteenth Clarence Hobart, Asheville Country Club, beat J. B. Eisaman, by default; D. W. Balch, Jr., Cincinnati Country Club, beat Thomas Morrison, Oakmont, 4 and 2; Douglas Smith, Skokie, won from W. R. Stenger, Philadelphia Country Club, by 5 and 4, and W. A. Alexander, Onwentsia, beat G. R. Balch, Sr., Cincinnati, 6 and 5. In the consolation of the first sixteen E. P. S. Wright, Clearwater, beat E. Tyner, Exmoor, 7 and 6; C. A. Munger, Merchantville Field Club, beat W. L. Allen, Huntington Valley Country Club, 6 and 4; E. B. Humphreys, Huntington Valley Country Club, beat W. J. Kingsland, Essex Country Club, N. J., 6 and 4, and S. P. Davidge, Baltusrol, beat J. C. Head, Oakmont, 2 and 1.

Columbia Handicap Run.

Fifteen men finished in the first Spring run for the Van Amringe Cross-Country Cup, held by Columbia University yesterday afternoon. M. Gertz, a freshman, led the pack home over the three-and-a-half-mile course on Morningside Avenue and Riverside Drive. He had the limit handicap of two and a half minutes, and covered the ground in the actual time of 26:47. M. M. Lorentz, a junior, also running with the limit handicap, was close behind, finishing second in 26:57. The finish:

Runner.	H'p.	Actual Time.
M. Gertz, '16	2:30	26:47
M. M. Lorentz, '14	2:30	26:57
F. G. von Kommer, '16	2:30	27:39

NEW YORK A. C. BANQUET.

500 Members and Three Distinguished Guests Attend Function.

The forty-fifth aniversary banquet of the New York Athletic Club was held last night at the clubhouse, Fifty-ninth Street and Sixth Avenue. The affair was one of the best in the history of the club, upward of 500 members being in attendance. The guests sat down to the dinner at 7:30 o'clock and it was nearly midnight when the programme was completed. Besides the regular speakers several of the prominent members of the club were called upon for impromptu talks.

Like the annual banquets of the past, this affair was for members of the club only, but an exception was made to the extent of three guests. These were Major-General Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., Commander of the Department of the East; James E. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, and Professor George Goldie. The speakers were the Hon. Edward E. McCall, Patrick Francis Murphy and Hon. Martin W. Littleton.

William H. Page, President of the club, acted as toastmaster; General Barry occupying the place of honor at his right and the Hon. Edward E. McCall at his left. Others at the guests and speakers' table were Vice-President Dr. James N. West, Colonel William E. Van Wyck, Hon. Martin W. Littleton, Hon. Henry S. Thompson, Bartow S. Weeks, James E. Sullivan, Colonel Daniel Appleton, General Thomas L. Watson, R. H. Goffe, George Goldie, George W. Kuhlke and Donald Nicoll.

Tie in College Shooting.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Harvard University and Massachusetts Agricultural College, tied with nine victories each in the Intercollegiate Rifle Shooting League matches, will meet this week to determine the championship of the East. West Virginia University, which still leads with nine straight victories, will shoot off this week for the championship of the West with Iowa City University and the University of Minnesota, tied for second place. The results of the ninth week's match follow:

Cornell, 931, vs. Norwich, 928; Massachusetts Tech., 945, vs. Columbia, 883; Princeton, 938, vs. Maine, 878; Massachusetts Agricultural, 955, vs. Dartmouth, 903; Vermont, 894, vs. Rhode Island State College, 767; Harvard, 944, vs. Lehigh, defaulted; North Georgia Agricultural, 927, vs. Clemson, defaulted.

Western League—Iowa, 952, vs. Nebraska, 861; West Virginia, 933, vs. U. S. College of Veterinary Surgeons, defaulted; California, 920, vs. Oklahoma A. and M., 883; Wisconsin, 907, vs. Washington State, 900; Minnesota, 945, vs. Kansas, 854; Michigan Agricultural, 925, vs. Louisiana, 876; Purdue, 933, vs. Missouri, defaulted.

Princeton Shooters Defeated.

By a margin of two targets, the Smith Gun Club of Newark defeated the Princeton University Gun Club in a seven-man team match yesterday afternoon at Newark, the total score being 316 to 314. Each gunner shot at fifty targets in two strings of twenty-five each. Besides the victory scored in the team match the Newarkers also beat the Princeton men in the totals for the five best scores, the figures being 239 to 231, for which another cup was offered. The scores:

British Rifle Team Not Coming.

LONDON, March 12.—The council of the National Rifle Association announced to-night that it was reluctantly compelled, owing to lack of funds, to decline the American invitation to send a team to take part in the international matches in Ohio in September. It is thought, however, that some of the British shots may accept the invitation to participate in the individual competitions.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1913.

THE PRESIDENT'S WARNING.

President WILSON addresses words of wisest counsel to the public men, the political chiefs, and the people of the republics of Latin America. The principles he commends to their attention and adoption are held by all the people of the United States to be foundation truths. They are the maxims, the commonplaces of our political theory, averments that would never be called in question here save by the fanatical and the lawless. We respect and uphold "the orderly "processes of just government based "upon law and not upon arbitrary or "irregular force." We know that "there can be no freedom without "order based upon law and upon the "public conscience and approval"; we know that "disorder, personal in-"trigue, and defiance of constitutional "rights weaken and discredit govern-"ment and injure none so much as the "people who are unfortunate enough "to have their common life and their "common affairs so tainted and dis-"turbed." Were the people of the republics to the south of us trained as we have been for more than a century in the daily observance of these principles, if they had that instinctive respect for law and constituted authority that prevails among our people, if they had our National habit of peace and good order, they would never for a moment dissent from any of President WILSON's admonitions, and, in fact, the words he addressed to them would not have been necessary.

The trouble is that these peoples are fundamentally unlike the people of this country or the people of England, of Germany, or of France. The counsel President WILSON gives is what they need, but what they do not heed. We doubt whether many of them will at all understand what the President says when he speaks of the "public conscience." We know what it is, we know what public opinion is, and we understand its power. A very great part of the population of these republics, in some cases a majority part, is hopelessly ignorant, it has no opinions upon public questions, no conception of conscience as applied to political action. Another part of these populations holds itself aloof from public affairs in scorn and contempt of the people, the politicians, and the agitators. There are in all these republics men of high intelligence, often of pure Spanish blood, free from that racial admixture which has been so prolific of evil in Latin America, who distrust and detest the class from which come the men who, chiefly, are concerned with the direction of public affairs, and to which the agitators, conspirators, and revolutionists almost invariably belong. Thus it happens that the political fortunes of these republics are in the hands of a class constituting perhaps not more than 10 per cent. of the population—the estimate is that of native writers of intelligence.

Nothing could so promote the prosperity of these republics and the happiness of their people as the acceptance in good faith of such counsel as President WILSON gives. It is to be feared that few of them will pay any attention whatever to his words, and many, if not most of them, will be incapable of understanding his meaning. Their point of view, the operation of their minds, their attitude toward national affairs, their patriotism, their sense of duty, their conception of individual right regardless or law, differ radically from our own. In such conditions the outlook is naturally dark. It is not altogether hopeless. In part through industrial development and the expansion of business, in part, and we must recognize the fact, through restraining influences we may legitimately exert, the gradual growth of these nations to the higher state pointed out by President WILSON may be expected.

It is because this growth must be gradual, very gradual, it is because of some present and ominous signs of disturbance that President WILSON's public statement takes the form not merely of an exhortation, but of a warning. "We shall prefer those who "act in the interests of peace and "honor, who protect private rights "and respect the restraints of con-"stitutional provision," says the President; we seek no advantage in Central and South America save that flowing from personal and trade relationships, but for this and for that friendship which should prevail between nations, mutual respect is "the indispensable foundation," and for conspirators, intriguers, and habitual revolutionists we can have no respect. More than that, should unprincipled adventurers from two or three or more of these republics put their heads together and make a common cause of their revolutionary conspiracies, threatening the peace and prosperity of these peoples whose friendship we desire, it would become necessary for us to consider what measures beyond the giving of counsel it would be our duty to take. The President says that from the principles he sets forth "may be read "so much of the future policy of this "Government as it is necessary now "to forecast." We do not think his meaning will be misunderstood.

A TASK FOR SECRETARY REDFIELD.

In the Department of Commerce, to the head of which WILLIAM REDFIELD has been wisely appointed, is the Bureau of Immigration, which contains the Division of Information. Hitherto a thrifty immigrant alien, anxious to invest the money he has saved, has had little chance of knowing that the Bureau's Division of Information exists for the purpose of telling him that he can buy in this country better farm lands at $25 to $100 an acre than those in his native country, in which land speculators are anxious to have him invest from $250 to $450 an acre. It has been estimated that in a single year outgoing aliens, mostly peasant farmers, have taken away with them upward of $275,000,000 in American cash. But the chief saving to this country should be in the retention here of the thrifty savers. The last annual report of the Commissioner General of Immigration says:

> Immigration reports indicate that each year hundreds of thousands of aliens return to their native lands, taking with them what they have saved from their earnings here. It has been estimated that the outgoing aliens take with them, on the average, $600 each. The avowed purpose of these departing workmen is to purchase a few acres in their native lands. Good authority vouches for the fact that they have to pay from $250 to $450 an acre for land abroad that has been worked for ages. They have done this heretofore in ignorance of the fact that land, as good as can be found in any country, may be had in the United States at prices ranging from $25 to $100 an acre. The men who save $600 to $1,000 as these men do are not idlers, drunkards, or improvidents; they form the part of an alien population that we should endeavor to retain and enlighten as to the agricultural opportunities of the United States.

The report adds:

> Under a systematic campaign of education that flow of men and dollars toward Europe may be turned toward the fertile acres of this land. The Division of Information can point the way to a profitable investment of the millions of dollars now going abroad in the pockets of homeseekers.

Here is a task for Secretary REDFIELD and his Commissioner General of Immigration, the successful accomplishment of which would help reduce the cost of living for the entire Nation. The hundreds of thousands of peasant aliens returning yearly to their native lands, if well and painstakingly informed, would find out the cheap, tillable lands near the congested cities in which they live, and become producers of foodstuffs. They are better farmers than those born here, and the children of American farmers migrate to the cities. A systematic campaign of education such as that recommended in the immigration report should be carried on in the foreign languages of the peasant immigrants. Remaining here, they would become American citizens, and they would perpetuate in the New World the yeoman virtues of our early immigrants.

SECRETARY WILSON.

"A stitch in time saves nine" is evidently one of the President's maxims. By giving timely notice that he will not sign appropriation bills with "riders" embodying general legislation he will save himself the trouble of vetoing more than one bill. President TAFT had to veto several of them. Even while the President was Governor he took action to save himself trouble as President. As Governor he was not willing to sign the amendment to one of his "seven sister" trust bills, exempting trades unions and farmers' organizations from prosecution as conspiracies in unreasonable restraint of trade. This is the more fortunate since there now sits opposite him, at the further end of his Cabinet table, the Secretary of Labor, who, as Representative in Congress, has been associated with many projects of class legislation of the same character, including this specific proposal.

Personally, Secretary WILSON is an estimable gentleman, a good Presbyterian, and the head of an interesting family. Officially, his record is all to make, and his beginning is good. He has said that as Secretary he represents the Government and not the unions. Nothing could be more correct, and he will receive full commendation for action accordingly. But as Representative and as unionist his record is otherwise. As unionist he has handled millions without being bonded, and without a breath of scandal. As an individual he has defied injunctions of court because they did not commend themselves to his approval as just or humane. As Representative he won the praise of Mr. GOMPERS, and has associated himself with a long list of laws of mixed character. He promoted the creation of the Bureau of Mines, and is Secretary of Labor because, as Chairman of the House Committee on Labor, he is responsible for the creation of the Department which he heads. Many will approve his efforts in this respect who cannot approve the projects of law which earned him the thanks of the American Federation of Labor because they are in favor of labor as a class, and not dictated by the interests of all citizens.

The proposal to forbid the prosecution of trades unions with the funds provided for the prosecution of conspiracies in restraint of trade has already been mentioned. On this the position of the Representative was opposed to the positions of both President WILSON and President TAFT. The bill forbidding courts to punish contempts of their injunctions, and the bill making distinctions between injunctions of courts in labor cases and other cases, are examples of discriminatory legislation. The bill imposing illiteracy as a test for the exclusion of immigrants is based on labor's desire for exemption from competition against which it further protects itself by its union combinations. It ought not to have further exemption by privilege of law. There were other bills of a similar character, all of which were inspired by unionists, and were not asked for by the general citizenship. On these bills the record of Secretary WILSON is that of a consistent unionist, and he himself has said that as Secretary he is not representative of the unionists. It is an embarrassing situation. There is no sentiment of hostility to the Secretary because he is a unionist. On the contrary, his ability and integrity are recognized. But Americans are jealous that their Government should be impartial between citizens of all characters, and the Secretary is looked to for the redemption of his professions in this respect.

INDUSTRIAL COMPENSATION.

There is a good deal of danger that no measure for industrial compensation can pass at the present session of the Legislature. The chief point of difference between the amended bill proposed by the Insurance Department and that advocated by the Federation of Labor is in the provision for insurance, i. e., for securing the prompt and certain payment of compensation provided for.

This is a vital feature. So far, for reasons which it is not easy to understand, the leaders of the Federation of Labor seem to be determined to insist on a system of State insurance, and in a form that does not really protect the interests of the workingmen. Their plan is essentially crude and defective. It does not sufficiently guarantee the payments of compensation, while at the same time it imposes needless burdens on employers.

It is obvious, we think, that security for payment of compensation, on the one hand, should be complete and certain, and on the other should cost the employers as little as may be. The State insurance plan of the Federation fulfills neither of these conditions.

It has a still graver defect. It does not offer any proper inducement to the employers to take all practicable measures to prevent accidents. Undoubtedly this could best be done by a system of mutual insurance, or a properly guarded plan for self-insurance. Of these two, the former is the better, for it makes each member of a mutual company vigilant as to the safety methods of all the others.

It has been shown in fire insurance that these truly mutual companies, with members engaged in cognate business, exposed to common risks, can formulate and even force conditions of safety which are very effective. It ought to be plain to the workingmen that prevention of accidents is worth very much more than compensation, which at best is necessarily only in part compensatory.

INFORMATION PRINTS.

If there were "jokers" in this year's Post Office Appropriation bill, they must have come under the eye of the Federal Senate before its items were passed. Chairman JONATHAN BOURNE, Jr., of the Senate Committee of Post Offices and Post Roads, in announcing the committee's favorable report upon the Post Office bill, accompanied it with an "information print," with this preface:

> I have dictated and submit herewith an information print, endeavoring to set forth after each item in the Post Office Appropriation bill an explanatory note concisely stating the salient reasons, as I understand them, which determined the committee's action. Each paragraph in the bill is numbered for better reference, and sub-headed by given pages and lines, as contained in the bill reported to the Senate and to be read by the Clerk.

President WILSON's Administration is pledged to economy in all the departments. What better means of assuring economy in appropriations than this?

"AN ENTERING WEDGE."

We are in receipt of a letter from Chairman WILLIAM C. GLOECKNER of the Capital District Hydro-Electric Power Committee of Albany, calling attention to THE TIMES's recent comment upon the scheme of State development of electrical energy for light and power from the [illegible] Dams, as proposed by the State Conservation Commission. Mr. GLOECKNER says:

> A person who did not understand this project would from reading this article be led to believe that the bill is for the benefit of Albany and vicinity only, and as Chairman of the Capital District Power Committee I desire to call your attention to the fact that the bill is State-wide and only calls for a beginning in this district, where the project can be tried out with the least expense and right under the eyes of the Legislature.

We spoke of this plan as an "entering wedge," quoting, we believe, the Conservation Commission's own statement. When the bill was introduced by Senator MURTAUGH, our comment was upon the plan "for the establishment "of power centres in every populous "district in New York State," and for a scheme "that, if the bill passes, will be "first applied in the Capital district, "which includes Albany."

Mr. GLOECKNER makes no reply to the criticism leveled at this "entering wedge," to wit, that the 12,000 horse power advertised by the Commission is available only 175 days in the year, and that the dry season and "backing up" of waters during freshets, and the waste in converting water power into electrical energy and distributing it to consumers would reduce the horse power to but 4,000. As the Commission would spend $625,000 on the project, with an annual fixed charge of 12.5 per cent., or $78,125, merely to deliver the energy at the end of the transmission line—not to consumers—it is difficult to see how the consumers will get the current at $7.50 a horse power, as advertised, or at twice that sum. Yet Mr. GLOECKNER says that the State-wide project "can be tried out with the least expense" in the Capital district. What would be the expense in the rest of the State?

THE PROGRESS OF COLOR PRINTING

Mr. A. G. LEARNED's surprise on seeing the quality of THE TIMES's reproductions for next Sunday's issue of PAUL HELLEU's etchings of eight typical American women shows that he is not as familiar with recent advances in color printing as he is with dry-point etching itself, of which he is one of the foremost of American exponents. "I did not think," he says, in the interview with him in THE TIMES, "that "newspaper art was far enough ad-"vanced to make such a successful re-"production possible."

Next Sunday's reproductions of the eight Helleu etchings, each a full page in size, possess, indeed, a quality which would not have been possible to produce a very short time ago. And still a greater surprise will await the SUNDAY TIMES reader on the Sunday following the appearance of the Helleu etchings, when, as a part of the Easter TIMES of March 23, eight full-page reproductions of the masterpieces of the celebrated Morgan collection will display a quality of platemaking and color presswork which, for its scale, is not short of astonishing.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Seeking Unearned Privilege. Both the friends and the antagonists of the Seeley bill to regulate the nurses of the State are writing to us, the one asking support for the measure and the others pleading for help to kill it. Careful consideration of the arguments of both have led to something between a firm conviction and a strong suspicion that the bill is a bad one—that its passage and enforcement, while possibly and temporarily, but not certainly or permanently, advantageous to a relatively small number of persons, would injuriously affect public interests.

The essential feature of the bill, and the only one that anybody really cares about, is a section that would restrict the right to seek employment as "nurses" to the registered graduates of hospital training schools approved by the Board of Regents. Now, there is no doubt that such nurses, as a class, are superior to those without their experience and teaching, and there would be no imaginable objection to forbidding others to claim or profess to be what they are. That is, the registered nurse has the best of rights to monopolize the title he or she has earned by several years of the hardest kind of work, just as anybody needing the services of such a nurse—and able to pay for them—is entitled to protection from those who would falsely pretend to have the registered nurse's qualifications.

If the Seeley bill went no further than this it would receive general commendation, and ours. But it does go further, and too far, in that it would interfere with getting the kind of nursing, not the best, but still of value, which is all that a great number of people can afford to have—that of nurses who have given less time to preparation and yet have acquired in one way or another a certain degree of competency. These are the nurses who are willing to work for less than the $25 a week which is the least that the registered nurses, by agreement among themselves, will accept from any patient. Their assistance is better than none, it does not involve as much of the financial strain which makes illness a tragedy for those of small resources, and in many cases no more aid than they can give is needed.

Moreover, the fully trained nurses have not, like doctors, as basis for claims to exclusive recognition, the argument that they are ready to answer every call for service, regardless of the prospect or possibility of compensation. This makes their work a trade or occupation, not a profession, and, though they have the ordinary right to set what value they choose upon their time, they must endure the consequences in exposure to competition.

A Critic in Need of Instruction. Before attempting the reformation of newspapers it would be well to get a clear and accurate knowledge of the way they are conducted—"are," not "were." Had the Rev. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES done this, he could have talked to the members of the Robert Collyer Club as wisely about the secular as he did about the religious press, and have been saved from betraying a large unfamiliarity with one branch of his subject.

The daily papers, he said, would take a long step in the right direction when their editors and reporters refused to work for a proprietor who demanded that they write against their own convictions. As a matter of fact, there is no such proprietor, and the "long step" was taken long ago by all newspapers of any importance. It was taken as soon as such papers ceased to be the thick-and-thin organs of political parties.

At present the only "policy" known to those who gather a paper's news and prepare it for publication—and this means by far the largest part of every decent paper's staff—is to get and print the facts, the uncolored truth, concerning the day's events. All that part of the staff, therefore, can work for one man as well as for another, so far as personal morality and convictions go. As for the editors, the difference is not as great as Mr. HOLMES thinks, and he drew a wholly wrong deduction from the fact that change in the ownership and general policy of a paper is rarely followed, nowadays, by an immediate installation of a new set of men to express its opinions.

That does not mean that the old men write against their own convictions or that they are asked or expected to do so. It simply means that the man or men who happen to agree with the new proprietor express the opinions he holds, and the other members of the editorial staff let those topics alone. There is always enough of other things for them to write about. The editor who would work for a paper only when he agreed with all the opinions of its proprietor and his associates would get a job about as soon as a man and wife equally harmonious could be found, and that would be never.

One can be in the newspaper business for a large fraction of a century, and many of us have been, without once writing what he knows or thinks to be untrue, knowing all the time, too, that if he does so write he violates a rule of his office which, whether explicit or not, is thoroughly well understood. If there is any other business of which that can be said—well, that other business is a mighty fine business and deserves the respect and honor that are owed to journalism.

Getting Facts at Last. Of the various reports made by the experts employed to investigate the conduct of our public schools, none deserves more respectful and careful attention than do those made by STUART A. COURTIS. That is because the particular branch of the work which he performed is one wherein strictly scientific tests, exactly like those of the chemist or the engineer, could be applied, and its results are demonstrated facts, not opinions.

The other investigators include men as wise and honest and well-intentioned as Mr. COURTIS, but all of their conclusions are wide open to further argument, while his, the products of laboratory methods, are nearly or quite beyond it. He knows, and, on the easy assumption that he has correctly described his experiments, we know, that our educational system is producing in a given number of children certain measurable effects, and in other groups, also numbered, other effects, also measurable. Other students of schools have charged the schools with the same fault that he does—the grave fault of applying to widely variable material an invariable force or influence, with lamentable consequences. They believed it; Mr. COURTIS has proved it with the exactness of mathematics. He cannot tell us what to do any better than his colleagues, but he does supply the means of testing his own and their suggestions when applied in actual teaching.

This is a brilliant illustration of what can be done with the help of the new psychology—the psychology that weighs and measures and enumerates—the psychology that is physical instead of metaphysical. It has a thousand utilities as yet ignored, in courts as in commerce, in all the activities of private and public life.

MARRIED WOMEN TEACHERS.

Is Their Employment Prejudicial to School Efficiency?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the main reasons for women's discontent nowadays is that if they engage in gainful occupations they are excluded from wifehood and motherhood, while if they become wives and mothers they are excluded from gainful occupations. No such harsh alternative confronts men. They do not have to give up their positions when they marry. They alone are free to have homes and children and at the same time to engage in activities in the world beyond the home. But they also suffer as a result of exclusion of married women from the trades and professions, for when they marry the entire burden of the family support falls on them, and is not shared by their wives as it should be. Why should we not do what we can, when it is feasible, to ameliorate this state of affairs? And surely it is feasible in Mrs. Edgell's case, for if a teacher may be granted a year's leave of absence for travel and study or to recover health, why should not her services be temporarily dispensed with in order that she may bear a child?

But, says THE TIMES, efficiency of instruction is the only thing to be considered, and "teaching demands more continuous work and concentrated attention than a wife and mother can give it." Efficiency must indeed be considered. But does it make for efficiency in teaching to exclude from the profession all women who are not willing to give up motherhood in order to teach, no matter how able they may be? And it may be asked (somewhat irrelevantly, it is true,) Does it make for efficiency in motherhood to deny the possibility of being a mother to all women who are unwilling to abandon, for the sake of being mothers, whatever trade or profession they have engaged in, no matter how fit they are to bear children?

If we want proficiency in teaching, we cannot get it by making the life of a teacher more unattractive and circumscribed than it need be. If a married teacher proves inefficient, she should be treated as an inefficient unmarried teacher would be treated. But her case should not be prejudged. Surely an efficient teacher, like Mrs. Edgell, should not be dismissed because she is the mother of a child. And when it comes to efficiency in motherhood, it must be admitted that, other things being equal, those most fit for parenthood—men and women alike—are those who are fit for something else besides parenthood. And it will not make for efficiency in motherhood to close to mothers every other field of activity.

A READER.

New York, March 8, 1913.

Poetical Absurdity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under the caption "Now They're Doing It in Words!" you note and comment upon a recent effusion by one Gertrude Stein. It occurred to me that this town had twelve years ago produced an interesting specimen of this "art" while yet in its early stages. I quote from the facile pen of Danton:

Often, in my dreams, I see a long red grief
Trailing its dusky robes far out into the night
With hands and feet and neck all bare,
Mute and changelessly crushed, looking unto God.

My personal impression, merely personal, however, is that the progress in this branch of the art has been pari passu with that in the allied branches of music, painting, sculpture, as exemplified by Strauss in the Don Quixote, the later works of Henri Matisse, and the contemporaneous sculpture now upon exhibition.

Night Lights in Apartment Halls.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer wishes to urgently demand that landlords be obliged to keep an all-night light on every floor, not simply on every alternate floor, in tenements, flats, and apartment buildings. All of the tenants on every floor are equally entitled to the safeguard of a light, and to share equally in the comfort and security of the building in which they pay rent. The peril to life, security, and property, from fire and other risks, now existing under the present absurd law regarding lighting of hallways, is an outrage that should be promptly righted.

YOUNG PEOPLE MARRYING

More Than When Living Was Cheaper, Census Report Says.

Another charge against the high cost of living makes it impossible for our young people to get married any more, or at least while they are still young. A young man puts off marriage nowadays until his salary will cover necessary luxuries; he is perhaps 30 before the weekly envelope seems adequate; by that time, the theorists cry, he is wound up in his work and finds that he can get along very well after all without domestic felicity. With the increase in the number of these necessary luxuries, and the relative decrease in the wherewithal, the marrying age is being shoved further and further along in life, according to our lightning calculators, whom the prospect sets to cutting all sorts of capers in hypothetical arithmetic on the business of race suicide.

The argument sounds plausible. The solemn assurances of some of our sober-minded young acquaintances bolster it up. The only trouble is, it isnt true. Not only has there been a marked absolute increase in our married population during the last three decades, but a relatively larger number of young people are marrying than in 1890. The percentage of married, widowed, or divorced males rose from 58.1 per cent., in 1890, to 59.4 in 1900 and 60.8 in 1910, while the corresponding percentages for females were 68.1, 68.6, and 70.

We at once jump to the annihilation of these percentages with the guess that the increase is due to a recent change in race, nativity, and parentage composition. But the Thirteenth Census report settles that point. The percentages of males and females in each of the principle race, nativity, and parentage groups show a steady increase. Influx of foreign-born has nothing to do with this increase; in fact, the percentage among white foreign-born males drops to 67.8 in 1910, from 70.3 in 1900.

Not only is the marriage rate higher since living began to be so confoundedly expensive, but more of the youngest of our young people are marrying now than in the good old days when coal was five dollars a ton. The percentage of young married men between the ages of fifteen and thirty-four years was greater at the time of the last census than in the two previous decades, showing an increase from 53.9 to 55.8 per cent. of the total number in this age group. In 1890 only a half of one per cent. of our young men between the ages of fifteen and nineteen were getting married; in 1910 the number brings the percentage to 1.2. A similar increase was shown in the age groups of twenty to twenty-four years. The percentages since 1890 being 19.2, 22.1, and 24.6. This increase in the number of young married people is found in all classes of the population, and is not confined to any one class. On the other hand, each of the age groups over thirty-five for both males and females shows a marked decrease. The number of married, widowed or divorced males between the ages of thirty-five and forty-four amounted to 84.5 per cent. in 1890, but by 1910 had decreased to 83.1 per cent.

Some one is sure to come forward with the gloomy generalization that while more of our young folk may be getting married at an early age, they aren't staying married. But figures fail to bear out this supposition. In 1910 1.1 per cent. of our young men between the ages of fifteen and nineteen were married; the total percentage for those married, widowed, or divorced was but 1.2 per cent. for the same year. Similarly, the married men between the ages of twenty and twenty-four in 1910 represented 24 per cent. and the total number of married, widowed and divorced in this group amounted to 24.6 per cent. So far as our own Middle Atlantic States are concerned, the divorced males represent but one-fifth of one per cent. of their total population, a lower rate than that in any other group of States in the country.

THE NURSE PRACTICE ACT

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to explain to the readers of THE TIMES an erroneous impression that might be conveyed by Caroline Baxter's letter, published recently.

The Nurse Practice act, now before the Legislature at Albany, does not aim to deprive the public of the practical nurse but to enable them to differentiate between the woman with a hospital training and experience and the woman with a smattering of education obtained at a correspondence school, or gleaned by nursing some member of her own family. The practical nurse is needed, but she should not be confused with the woman who has spent three years of study and hard work in a hospital under the best scientific teaching.

Should this bill go through we hope to give a definite position and salary to both the graduate and practical nurse, a scale of prices adjusted to the educational advantages of each. It has been so arranged that the women now in the field will not be materially disturbed. It is for the future welfare of the public as well as for the graduate nurse that we feel this step advisable. Skilled labor has been and should be better paid than unskilled, but for those convalescent patients who do not need the hospital-trained woman, keen to the slightest change of symptoms, a practical nurse, at a lower salary, should be available, and no trained or registered nurse hopes to take this work from her, but to co-operate with her.

A REGISTERED NURSE.

Bronx Park Exits.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to call attention to one of the idiosyncrasies of the powers that be in connection with Bronx Park. At the various entrances, (to the zoological part, at any rate,) are signs to the effect that all baby carriages must be out of the park by a certain hour. The Southern Boulevard entrance sets the time limit at 5:30. Relying on this, I strolled through the park last Sunday afternoon with my family and some friends. Shortly before 5:30 we attempted to leave the park at the exit nearest the West Farms Subway station, but were informed by the attendant that the gate was closed. We then made for the exit near the buffalo yard, and found it likewise closed. Near by was a chalked sign stating that this gate closed at 5:15.

Perhaps there is a well-thought-out reason for such an absurdly early closing hour, but what in the name of common sense do they mean by going it one better with a sliding scale for locking-up time? There should be some one exit from which carriages could be taken out of the park as long as any city attendant is on the grounds.

Country Unfortunates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We hear a great deal about suffering among the poor of New York, and the advantages the poor would have in the country, but this item from a mountain paper in Kentucky would indicate that the country hasn't much on the city in the way of advantages:

> The family of Cannoy Walter is in bad shape. Three of the family are sick, and all in one bed. Mr. Walter has measles and his wife is a sufferer from tuberculosis.

Certainly a condition of this sort would not be permitted to continue in the city long enough to get into the newspapers.

TEST FOR ALL DRIVERS

In Herrick Motor Car Bill Supported by Mr. Coudert.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The study of the automobile traffic conditions, especially in the City of New York, and the appalling number of accidents, weekly increasing, have convinced me that very decided measures must be taken for the protection of the public. These measures must be of two kinds: First, to secure such changes in the present law as will make it more workable and efficient, and in the second place to insist upon a rigorous enforcement of such law. I am convinced that a great number of accidents occur from the lack of enforcement of the present law, which contains some excellent features, and that if we had throughout the greater city a traffic squad such as that which handles the traffic on Broadway and Fifth Avenue accidents would be reduced to a minimum.

At the present time the Legislature should make several important changes in the law, and then, aside from possible modifications of detail, indicated as a result of experience, leave the statute unaltered, so that the public may become thoroughly familiar with it and the police authorities of the city and State may be held to strictest responsibility for its rigid and uniform enforcement.

Every highway law must contain two dominant features, to wit.: some provision for preventing, so far as humanly possible, danger of accident owing to lack of proper capacity, and some expeditious method of eliminating from the highway those persons who have evinced a reckless disregard of life and an incapacity to drive with reasonable prudence. In order to effect such result there should, in the first place, be a fair test or examination for all operators of motor vehicles.

At present such a test is required for chauffeurs only, it being urged that owners will, on the ground of self-interest, exercise a prudence and be guided by a sense of responsibility that mere hired men will not feel.

I am inclined to think that this is an overoptimistic view to take, and while the statistics have not been kept with sufficient care and discrimination to indicate the proportion of accidents due to driving by owners, yet that proportion is very substantial. Under these circumstances it would seem evidently just that every person, whether owner or hired chauffeur, who desires to drive a car should, under the rules and regulations made by the office of the Secretary of State, demonstrate his capacity to handle such vehicle. If all the cars in this State were driven by people of reasonable prudence and having necessary technical capacity the accidents due to negligence of operators would be reduced by perhaps 90 per cent. The argument against so seemingly just a rule is that such an examination would be conducted in so perfunctory a fashion as not to furnish an adequate test. There is as much force in this as there is in all the arguments to show the inefficiency of many laws in this community due to the failure to enforce them, but this is merely an argument directed against our system of popular government.

A law that is efficient and would be enforceable in the hands of honest and energetic officials should be passed and then existing officials must be held responsible for its non-enforcement. It is probable that at the present time the examinations for chauffeurs are wholly inadequate, but this furnishes no sufficient ground why owners applying for a license should not be made to demonstrate both the fact that they are reputable citizens and that they possess a sufficient knowledge of the mechanism of the automobile, to the end that in their hands it may at all times be under control. A provision to this effect such as is found in the Herrick bill would, it seems to me, be a valuable addition to the law.

The automobile has long since ceased to be a mere thing for sport and has become one of the necessary business utilities and conveniences of life and is used largely by reputable citizens. The automobile associations should lend their concurrence to those who desire fair and practically enforceable legislation and should, moreever, combine with them to focus public opinion upon the enforcement of the law by the local authorities. A much larger traffic squad and an assurance to automobilists that after fair warning the provisions of the law will be rigorously enforced will alone prevent the appalling slaughter in the streets.

Which Is Further East?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Just by way of general information, and not with any intent to draw the fire of Col. Lampton—I awakened his military and Kentucky wrath once by using his title in quotations—I rise to remark that New Yorkers are not the only ones who don't know where places are situated.

Some years ago, while employed in St. Louis, in the office of a corporation doing an international business, one of the part-way-up fellows—several points my superior on the payroll—a native of Jeffersonville, Ind., by the way, which is within pebble throw of Louisville, asked me which was the further East, Pittsburgh or New York. Fortunately I was able to dispose of his query without looking at the atlas.

All of which leads me to believe that there's no use getting peeved with the public just because it doesn't know as much as we do—we shouldn't expect it to.

IT HAPPENED IN CUBE-LAND.

Hung a lovely cubist lady
In a corner cool and shady, ('Twas the corner, not the lady, which was shady, you must know).
And she smiled a smile seraphic
That delayed and halted traffic
In the land of four dimensions at the modern picture show.

She was subtly pyramidal,
Like a glorious cosmic riddle, (To the vulgar she resembled but a pile of shingles brown);
But to those initiated,
Who with obvious art were sated,
She was quite the "ne plus ultra"
and the choicest thing in town.

Came a youth with soul artistic,
Filled with post-impressionistic
Apperceptions of the beauty in the ugliness of things,
And he stopped and cried, "Eureka!
I have found my soul's swastika,
And with her as inspiration I shall rise on tireless wings!"

"Come!" he said, "and be my mission!"
She replied, "What's your condition?
For it costs a lot of money if you'd bear me from this hall"—
"What!" he cried, "are you, then,
venal?
And is cubic passion penal,
Like the love of vulgar mortals who've not heard the mystic call?"

Then she smiled her smile seraphic,
And it seemed to grow more graphic,
As she said, "A cubic lady costs a cubic foot of gold;
And the man who wins my passion
Must have money—it's the fashion"—
Then she wrapped her shingles round her in a silence proud and cold.

KLAW & ERLANGER ENTER THE 'MOVIES'

Will Make Films from Their Plays and Give Continuous Service to Theatres.

TWO PLAYS EVERY WEEK

Plan Due to Peace Agreement of Syndicate and Shuberts, Who Will Also Supply Their Houses.

Klaw & Erlanger yesterday stated that they would enter the moving picture field on a large scale, producing films made from their successful plays. A. H. Woods, who has been identified with the exploitation of feature moving picture productions in this country, an instance of which is his part ownership of "The Miracle," now playing at the Park, is to be a member of the company which will be formed to carry on the work, and there will be others, not named.

The move is an outgrowth of the recent peace agreement between the Klaw & Erlanger and the Shubert forces in the theatrical war, and by means of these feature films, as was told in THE TIMES on Feb. 24, when the first news of the intended move appeared in print, attractions will be furnished for the many theatres throughout the circuits of the two interests, which were taken out of active opposition to each other.

The Klaw & Erlanger statement follows:

"A corporation is about to be formed by Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger for the purpose of exploiting, by means of moving pictures, the plays which these managers own and are interested in. The organization will be known as the Protective Amusement Company, and will include Al Woods and others. One of the largest studios in the country will be built for the manufacture of the films, which are to be leased to a limited number of motion picture theatres throughout the United States and Canada. For this purpose contracts will be made in various cities, giving certain theatres the exclusive right to these pictures. In the smaller cities only one franchise will be given.

"It is the purpose to release two plays per week, and service will be ready by the first Monday in September next, as by that time over one hundred plays will have been made up and ready for shipment, thus insuring a change of bill twice a week and a continuous service of one year, or fifty-two weeks. The difficulty with feature plays in the past has been that the owner of a theatre might secure one in one week, and then have an interval of several weeks before he could get another. He has never felt secure that he could have one hundred and four plays a year; or, in other words, to have his time in his theatre booked just as the large theatres of the United States are now represented and booked by the Theatrical Syndicate, whose clients are assured of a certain number of attractions each season.

"T. Hayes Hunter has been secured as the general stage director for the taking of the pictures, and he will be assisted by a corps of the very best men in the picture-making world. It is the intention of the company to expand its operations beyond the United States and Canada to all the large cities of the world; for, in addition to their plays, they are now in negotiation with several well-known people touring different parts of the world taking pictures for special films, for which Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger and their associates will have the exclusive right when they are completed.

"Pat Casey is to be the General Manager of the corporation, with offices at 1,493 Broadway."

THE OLIVE MEAD QUARTET.

Mozart, Dittersdorf, and Brahms Played at Its Second Concert.

The Olive Mead Quartet can afford to play in Rumford Hall, as it did last evening when it gave its second concert. Rumford Hall makes a severe test of the musicianship that is exploited in it, especially when it takes the form of the string quartet; for impurity of tone, inaccuracy of intonation, imperfection of ensemble are immediately shown and even magnified in effect. The fact that this organization of young women meets the test imposed by these acoustics certifies again to its unusual excellences, which have been well known and well recognized for years.

Last evening the programme contained Mozart's C major quartet, Dittersdorf's in E flat and Brahms's piano quintet in F minor, Op. 34; perhaps not an ideal programme, on account of the resemblance of Dittersdorf's quartet in style to Mozart's, of which it seems, indeed, in certain respects, almost like a premonitory symptom. In Brahms's quintet the ladies had the assistance of Mr. Ernesto Consolo in the piano part, an admirable ensemble player.

Hardenbergh-Eagle Engagement.

Formal announcement will be made tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Hardenbergh of 1 West Eighty-first Street of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Hildegarde Hardenbergh, to Henry Eagle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Eagle of 25 East Thirtieth Street. Among the guests were Mrs. Paschael Carter, Mrs. Elmer Black, Mrs. John D. Ryan, Mrs. Robert Parish, Mrs. Benjamin B. Thayer, Mrs. Bergstrom, and Mrs. Brush.

MISS FOWLER ENGAGED.

Surrogate's Daughter to Wed Dawson C. Glover, Son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Glover.

The engagement of Miss Elizabeth B. G. Fowler, a daughter of Surrogate Robert Ludlow Fowler and Mrs. Fowler, and Dawson Coleman Glover, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Glover of this city and The Moorlands, Fairfield, Conn., has been announced to their intimate friends. Mr. Glover is a grandson of the late G. Dawson Glover of Pennsylvania.

Miss Fowler is a sister of Miss Mary Ludlow Fowler, of R. L. Fowler, Jr., and of W. S. Groesbeck Fowler, who married Miss Katharine Hall. She is a niece of Mrs. Robert Goddard of Providence and of the Hon. Mrs. Kenelm Digby of England. Her mother was formerly Miss Julia Groesbeck.

Mr. Glover was graduated from Harvard in 1909 and is a member of the Union Club. He is a brother of the Misses Helen Le Roy Glover and Harriet Coleman Glover and of Mrs. Lewis Roberts.

No date has been mentioned for the wedding.

MISS ROSALIE SMITH WEDS.

Married to J. Roderick Buchanan at Her Home by the Rev. Dr. Vibbert.

The wedding of J. Roderick Buchanan, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William G. Buchanan, and Miss Rosalie Dutilh Smith, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Dutilh Smith, took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, 213 Madison Avenue. The Rev. Dr. William H. Vibbert of Trinity Chapel officiated. Relatives and a few intimate friends were present at the ceremony, which was followed by a reception.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore white satin trimmed with point lace and having a court train from the shoulders. Her tulle veil was arranged in ruche effect to show her coiffure, and was held with orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Herbert Wheeler, who was in pink satin and white lace frock, with a train, topped by black hat with pink roses. She carried pink sweet peas.

Mr. Buchanan's best man was his brother, Charles Lamont Buchanan, who last June married Miss Anita Dominick. There were no ushers.

MISS ESTERBROOK A BRIDE.

Daughter of Mrs. Richard Esterbrook Weds Harvey S. Mudd of St. Louis.

Miss Mildred H. Esterbrook, daughter of Mrs. Richard Esterbrook of 545 West 111th Street, and Harvey S. Mudd of St. Louis, Mo., were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, the Rev. De Lancey Townsend officiating.

The bride wore a white satin gown trimmed with duchess lace, and her veil, also of duchess lace, fell from a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Caryll Esterbrook acted as her sister's maid of honor. She wore orchid-colored charmeuse draped with chiffon. Mrs. Richard Bayard Taylor Kiliana was matron of honor, and wore a gown of pale blue charmeuse. They each carried bouquets of mauve-colored orchids.

Seely Mudd was his brother's best man, and the ushers included Carlton Perkins Browning, Bertram Stalyer, and Ralph Howell.

A small reception was held after the ceremony. Later the couple left on their honeymoon. They will reside at Warren, Ariz.

HESSBERG—NEUBERGER.

The engagement is announced of Miss Corinne Hessberg of 981 Park Avenue to Erwin Neuberger of 62 East Eighty-first Street. No date has been mentioned for the wedding.

The new Princess Theatre in Thirty-ninth Street will be opened for the first time to-night, when a special performance will be given for the newspaper writers. To-morrow night the formal opening of the house will take place.

The announced repertoire of the Irish Players, now in their last week at Wallack's Theatre, will be altered to allow a performance of "The Playboy of the Western World" to-morrow night.

Fifty pupils of the Flushing High School attended last night's performance of "Everyman" at the Children's Theatre.

MYSTERY INCREASES AS EATON IS BURIED

"I Feared They Would Blame Me, and They Probably Will," Says Admiral's Widow.

CHEMIST'S REPORT AWAITED

State Police Investigating Retired Officer's Death—Absence of Naval Honors Marks His Funeral.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 12.—With striking absence of naval honors, the body of Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, U. S. N., retired, whose sudden death in his Norwell home early last Saturday is being investigated, was brought to Boston to-day from Norwell and then taken to Lowell for burial. The widow and Miss Dorothy Ainsworth, her daughter by her first marriage, were the only mourners. Reporters and hack drivers were the body bearers. Not even a flag was shown.

The civil authorities have been busy looking into the Admiral's sudden death. They are awaiting a report from the chemists to whom internal organs of the Admiral have been sent for examination.

State policemen who were questioned about the probability of an arrest in the case declined to utter a word. No arrest on a murder charge is expected. Action of another sort may be taken if the person from whom the hint came that poison was to be suspected is identified definitely. The responsibility of all the persons found by the police, whether they are set down as communicators of the rumor, or as having been accused by the gossip, will be investigated formally. The widow and her mother, Mrs. George Harrison, expressed the opinion to-day that the Admiral had died a natural death.

Mrs. Harrison explained that he had been subject to frequent attacks of indigestion. On the Wednesday before his death, the Admiral, she said, ate rather heartily of roast pork and as a result suffered distress. A physician who had been called to attend him found the Admiral indisposed on Friday and prescribed for him.

That night Admiral Eaton had a chill, but was relieved, and before he fell asleep he chatted for several minutes with his wife. Early the following morning Mrs. Eaton awoke to find her husband dead beside her.

The widow was the Admiral's second wife. She formerly was the wife of D. H. Ainsworth, once a clerk in the United States Senate, and subsequently in business here. Her father was George Harrison. The family home was in Alexandria, Va. Mrs. Eaton is 40 years old. She said to-day:

"For two years I have been afraid that if anything happened to Joe they would blame me for it, and now they probably will.

"The Admiral had been in poor health for two years. The idea of their insinuating anything is wrong. There is absolutely nothing out of the way. It is an outrage.

"Mr. Eaton was taken ill suddenly on Thursday and was attended by Dr. Joseph Frame of Rockland, who was treating another member of the family, and who happened to be in the house. Although confined to his bed, Mr. Eaton did not realize that his condition was serious, nor did the members of his family. We had no idea that the end was so near."

Dr. Frame made this statement:

"The whole story will come out in time. It is rather peculiar to me that the neighbors near the Eaton home, who undoubtedly know or have heard things, didn't let this come out before.

"I did not sign the certificate giving the cause of death. That was up to the Medical Examiner. It is his case. I saw the Admiral last Friday.

"They say he died Saturday, but I've got nothing to say.

"I know a lot about the case, but I'm only going to say what I can reasonably say on a witness stand, if I have to.

"I have been down to the Admiral's house off and on for two yeras. Last Friday, he was in my office on Webster Street, Rockland. He did not show any signs of feebleness or illness at that time. I wouldn't say, he was a man in feeble health. That's all I care to say."

The mystery of the Rear Admiral's death parallels the sensation caused three and a half years ago when his wife, who was twenty-four years his junior, made charges that their baby son was the victim of a poison plot. That was in August 1909. It developed that the couple had adopted the baby.

Charges and counter-charges made at that time caused the Admiral and his wife to separate. Their friends recalled to-day in the talk of this second mystery in the family the examination made in Harvard of the baby's stomach and the subsequent report that no trace of poison had been found. After that came a reconciliation of the retired naval officer and his wife.

Mrs. Shepard's Superintendent Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, March 12.—Archibald Robbie, Superintendent of Mrs. Finley J. Shepard's estate, Lyndhurst, died in the Tarrytown Hospital this afternoon after an operation for appendicitis which was performed Saturday afternoon by Dr. Moffatt of Yonkers. Mr. Robbie had charge of Mrs. Shepard's wedding, and he is said to have overworked himself. He contracted pneumonia, and appendicitis followed. Mrs. Shepard was apprised of his illness before she went abroad, and she left orders that everything be done for him and to spare no expense. She is now sailing up the Nile, and has been notified by cable.

Commander Nelson T. Houston.

Commander Nelson Townsend Houston, United States Navy, retired, died Tuesday in his home, 3750 Broadway, aged 63. He left his wife, who was Mary Bowers of London, England, a son of his former marriage, Nelson T. Houston, Jr., of Boston, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. Braddock of Little Rock, Arkansas. He was born in Newburgh, N. Y., and graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1869. In the Spanish-American War Commander Houston was in command of the gunboat Castine, on blockade duty with Admiral Sampson's fleet. He retired from the navy twelve years ago because of disabilities. His death was due to heart disease. His ancestors settled in the Hudson River Valley and the vicinity of Albany in 1635.

Ex-Justice William C. Spruance.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., March 12.—William Corbit Spruance, former senior Associate Justice of the Delaware Supreme Court and resident Judge of New Castle County from 1897 until 1909, died at his home here this afternoon. Ex-Justice Spruance was one of the most noted men of Delaware. He was born at Smyrna, Del., April 2, 1831. His father, Presley Spruance, was United States Senator from this State from 1847 to 1853. The Justice was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1897, and aided materially in framing the State's present fundamental law. He was United States District Attorney of Delaware from 1876 to 1880.

DR. J. S. BILLINGS'S FUNERAL.

Late Director of New York Public Library to be Buried in Arlington.

Funeral services for Dr. John Shaw Billings, the Director of the New York Public Library, who died on Tuesday night in the New York Hospital, will be held in St. John's Church, Georgetown, D. C., tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. Interment will be in the Arlington Cemetery, Dr. Billings having held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel and Deputy Surgeon of the United States Army. It was said yesterday that no arrangements had yet been made by the Board of Trustees of the New York Public Library to select Dr. Billings's successor.

Dr. Billings was in his seventy-fifth year. He was active in his work until ten days ago and his death was unexpected. The death of his wife on Aug. 19, last, it was said, had hastened his end. His city home was at 32 East Thirty-first Street and he is survived by four daughters and a son. They are Mrs. William Wallis Ord of Salisbury, England; Mrs. William Hanna Wilson of Georgetown, D. C.; Mrs. Bradflied Hartley of Empire, Canal Zone; Miss Margaret Janeway Billings of Georgetown, and Dr. John Sedgwick Billings, chief of the Division of Communicable Diseases of the Department of Health of this city. The Billings family dates back to the early Colonial days.

During the civil war Dr. Billings served as Medical Inspector to the Army of the Potomac. Later he had charge of the library of the Surgeon General's office.

His great work consisted of the organization of the library which at the time he left was the largest medical library in the world. The monumental "Index Catalogue" of this library, in more than thirty volumes, remains as a tribute to his power of organization and to his bibliographical attainments. His record in library indexing in Washington was enlarged in his work for the New York Public Library. It was largely through his efforts, in fact, that Andrew Carnegie's gift enabling the development of the largest book circulating library in the world was secured. Dr. Billings was credited with the whole plan and arrangements of the new central library building.

Dr. Billings reorganized the United States Marine Hospital Service in 1870 and in 1879 became Vice President of the National Board of Health. During his tenure he was also in charge of the division of vital statistics of the Eleventh Census. Aside from his work for the New York Public Library, in all probability, his most cherished achievement was the building up of the Johns Hopkins Hospital as an important centre of medical relief and instruction.

Forty-three medical and scientific societies claimed Dr. Billings in their membership and in many of them he held offices of trust. At various times he served as President of the American Library Association; Chairman of the executive committee of the Carnegie Institute at Washington; President of the Philosophical Society of Washington; President of the American Health Association; Treasurer of the National Academy of Sciences and Vice President of the American Statistical Association.

GEN. F. C. M'LEWEE DIES SUDDENLY AT 58

Ex-Inspector General of National Guard of New York Stricken in His Office.

REMOVED BY GOV. MORTON

After He Had Almost Completed 25 Years of Service—Granted Honorable Discharge by Gov. Roosevelt.

Gen. Frederick C. McLewee, who was Inspector General of the National Guard of this State under Gov. Levi P. Morton, died suddenly of apoplexy in his office at 30 Church Street yesterday. Gen. McLewee, who was in his fifty-eighth year, had not been feeling well for several days. He was sitting at his desk when stricken. Dr. L. McDonnel, whose office is in the same building, and Dr. Shields of the Hudson Street Hospital found him beyond medical aid. His body was removed to his home at 790 Riverside Drive.

The death of Gen. McLewee recalls his removal from the post of Inspector General by Gov. Morton on Dec. 31, 1896. The dismissal of Gen. McLewee caused at the time a sensation throughout National Guard circles, because he had almost completed twenty-five years of service in the State militia, and had the highest indorsements as an officer when he aspired for the office which he obtained from Gov. Morton. The action of the Governor was based on the fact that Gen. McLewee had given his report to the public before it had been delivered to the Adjutant General. Gen. McLewee was charged with having made in his report severe criticisms of the members of the Governor's staff and of the camp of instruction.

Gen. McLewee's report was published in THE TIMES of Dec. 31, 1896. Adjt. Gen. McAlpin immediately sought the Governor, who had already read the report with its criticisms of conditions in the Guard. The Governor promulgated an order for Gen. McLewee's removal. A court-martial was suggested, but this was thought to be a slow procedure, especially as Gen. McLewee's twenty-five years of service in the Guard would have expired that night. As Gov. Morton's term and Adjt. Gen. McAlpin's expired at the same time they thought it better to act in the most summary manner possible, and Gen. McLewee was removed ten hours before the expiration of his term of office.

Gov. Morton subsequently regretted his action. He wrote Gen. McLewee a letter in which he said: "In my letter I stated that had I been aware at the time of making the removal order of facts and conditions which have since come to my knowledge, I would not have removed you from office, and I was not then aware that you had served almost twenty-five years in the National Guard, the completion of which would have entitled you to the gold long-service medal." He requested Gov. Black, he stated in the letter, to issue, if possible, a full and honorable discharge to Gen. McLewee. Gov. Roosevelt, during his term, gave Gen. McLewee a full vindication by granting him a full and honorable discharge.

Gen. McLewee enlisted as a private in Company F, Twenty-second Regiment, March 14, 1872. He joined Company C, Seventh Regiment, in 1877. He was Assistant Inspector General in 1886. He was at the time of his death General Auditor of the Indian Refining Company. Gen. McLewee was a member of the New York Athletic, Republican County, and Atlantic Yacht Clubs. He left a widow and son.

ROBERT FUREY DEAD AT 80.

Once Friend and Co-Leader with "Boss" McLaughlin in Brooklyn.

Robert Furey, a wealthy contractor, and for many years the political friend and adviser of "Boss" Hugh McLaughlin, the former Democratic leader of Brooklyn, died last night in the Montauk Club, at Eighth Avenue and Lincoln Place, opposite the home of Mayor Gaynor. Mr. Furey was in his 81st year. He was a bachelor, and during the last eight years he had made his home in a suite of rooms on the third floor of the clubhouse. His death had been expected for several days. His body was taken to the home of his brother and only surviving relative, Brig. Gen. John V. Furey, U. S. A., retired, of 10 Eighth Avenue.

In the early years of his career in politics Mr. Furey was a member of the Board of Aldermen and later Street Commissioner of the old City of Brooklyn, when the office carried with it large patronage and made the holder a power in politics. He and McLaughlin quarreled over the nomination for Senator, which Mr. Furey desired for himself, but they became reconciled a few months before McLaughlin's death. Mr. Furey was said to be the principal stockholder in the asphalt contracting firm of the Cranford Company in South Brooklyn. Within the last twelve months he gave $100,000 to the building fund of St. Mary's Catholic Church and the same amount to Bishop McDonnell for the help of various Catholic charities.

MATTHEW CLARKSON DEAD.

Descendant of One of New York's Oldest Families Was 90 Years Old.

Matthew Clarkson, ninety years old, died yesterday in his home, 16 West Forty-eighth Street. He left a son, Banyer Clarkson of 26 West Fiftieth Street, and a daughter, Miss Catherine G. Clarkson, with whom he resided. He was a member of the New York Historical Society and of the Cincinnati Society.

Mr. Clarkson was the descendant of one of New York's oldest and most distinguished families. His great grandfather, Lieutenant Colonel Matthew Clarkson, served with the famous Minute Men in the protection of Long Island, and throughout the war until the fall of Yorktown, and afterward he was Major-General of the New York Militia, and for twenty-one years the president of the Bank of New York. The great grandfather of this Revolutionary soldier, also named Matthew, had been Secretary of the Province of New York, and his grandfather and father had held important posts in the Colony.

Mr. Clarkson married the grand-daughter of John Jay, the first Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. He and his wife passed much of their time in travel in Europe and in the social life here.

Reuben F. Smith.

Reuben F. Smith, President of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad, with which he had been connected for fifty-seven years, died on Tuesday from heart disease at his home in Cleveland, Ohio. He was born in Connecticut in 1830, and entered the employ of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad in 1855 as paymaster, later becoming General Manager and Vice President. Mr. Smith is survived by four children.

SUGAR PROFITS DROP $6,500,000 IN YEAR

Company Explains It by Pointing to High Price of Raw Sugar in 1911.

LARGE CROPS CAME AFTER

Magnitude of Business Required Carrying Over of Large Stock—Further Shrinkage Unlikely.

The American Sugar Refining Company reported yesterday net earnings for the year ended on Dec. 31, 1912, of $7,488,130, a decline of more than $6,500,000 from the previous year. The amount was equivalent to about 9.60 per cent. on the $45,000,000 common stock after providing for the usual 7 per cent. dividend on the preferred. There was taken from the net profits $1,937,865 for the depreciation account, as against $2,419,400 in the previous year, and after the payment of dividends and sundry expenses there remained $378,030 to be added to the previous surplus. The surplus for 1911 was $1,173,000.

Secretary Freeman gives this explanation of the extraordinary decline in earnings:

"It will be noted from the profit and loss account that the surplus earnings of the company after paying dividends were not as large as those of the year ended Dec. 31, 1911. That year was one of short crops, and the prices of raw material advanced to an abnormally high figure. Following this crop shortage, production has been increased to such an extent that prices of raw sugar have fallen to an abnormally low figure. The difference in the earnings of the two years consists largely in the difference between the profits made upon stocks of merchandise on hand."

"Because of the magnitude of this company's business," the report says, "it is always necessary to have on hand a considerable quantity of both raw and refined sugars. Consequently a rise or fall in the world's prices affects earnings very materially. The prices have now declined to a low and safe basis, and further shrinkage of values is not likely to occur.

"The average difference between raw and refined sugars for 1912 was 87.9 cents per hundred pounds against 89.2 cents per hundred pounds in 1911. In this connection we desire again to show that while the prices of nearly all commodities have increased very materially in the last decade, the price of sugar has not."

In regard to efforts put forth to maintain the company in a high state of efficiency, the report said:

"As shown in the last annual statement, the sum of $3,450,626.61 was set aside during the year 1911 for improvements to the plants of the company. To this sum there has been added during the last fiscal year the sum of $650,931.90 for further improvements and the purchase of real estate. The construction work provided for by these appropriations is being carried on and the efficiency of your company's plants correspondingly increased. There still remains of these appropriations an unexpended balance of $1,491,748.95.

"During the year the additional sum of $300,000 was appropriated for the pension fund, bringing it up to $600,000. The income of this fund is applied to the payment of pensions to faithful employes of the company whose time of service has ended. So far ninety-six pensions have been granted, with an average yearly payment of $356 to each person."

The company's balance sheet showed investments in bonds and stocks amounting to $23,433,000, and merchandise and supplies of other kinds on hand valued at more than $10,000,000 in contrast with $20,000,000 at the end of 1911. Accounts receivable aggregate $3,450,000, and cash on hand was $28,408,000, a $6,700,000 increase over the figure of the year before. Total surplus was given as $21,425,620.

The retiring Directors were re-elected yesterday. Edwin F. Atkins, the First Vice President, will continue as the acting head of the company.

BOND DEMAND BETTER.

Improvement Shown in Sale of M., K. & T. Issue to Speyer & Co.

Evidence of a slowly improving demand for investment securities was seen yesterday in the sale of $19,000,000 of two-year 5 per cent. secured notes of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company, to Speyer & Co. The proceeds of the new notes will be used to take up $17,500,000 notes due or called for payment May 1, 1913, and for other corporate purposes.

The new issue will be dated May 1, 1913, and mature May 1, 1915. They are redeemable at par and interest on thirty days' notice, and are part of an authorized issue of $25,000,000. The $19,000,000 will be secured by a deposit of $24,500,000 consolidated mortgage 5 per cent. gold bonds, due 1940. They are subject to the approval of public utilities commissions.

PRESSURE ON STEEL MILLS.

Manufacturing Consumers Still Buying Liberally.

Discussing current developments in the iron and steel trade, The Iron Age says in its issue of to-day:

> Manufacturing consumers of steel products reinforce the confident views of the steel companies by continued large specifications on their contracts. It is not surprising, with the heavy accumulations on order books, that new business is not up to the present record rate of output; the surprise is that there is so much new buying.
> That consumers are specifying further ahead than ever and are rarely giving the mills a chance to cancel any part of their monthly quotas shows confidence in the continuance of present conditions far on in the year.
> The pig iron situation has changed to one of larger inquiry in nearly all selling centres, but with no increase in sales. Foundry buyers are sounding the market for third quarter and second half, but are not disposed to pay prices recently quoted. Sellers are standing on the current consumption, which shows no falling off, while buyers make much of the recent increase in merchant iron production.

The Iron Trade Review says:

> Contracting for finished materials, especially plates, shapes, and bars, for delivery throughout the remainder of this year, and in some cases into next year, is being done as rapidly as mills will permit. Some companies are contracting rather freely at slight advances over prevailing prices, but leading companies which are not able to promise deliveries on present contracts before last quarter of this year and in some cases before the 1st of January are declining to book additional business. Had the policy of the United States Steel Corporation permitted, it could easily have booked orders for tonnages far in excess of 170,000 tons, the amount representing the reduction of unfilled bookings in February, according to their statement. Railroad demand continues to play an important part in the heavy pressure upon the mills.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Protest on Watch Fobs Lost—Platinum Caps Gain Free Entry.

The Board of United States General Appraisers overruled a protest by Butler Brothers against the classification under the Tariff act of 1909 of metal and leather watch fobs. Duty was taken at 45 per cent. ad valorem on manufactures of metal. The importer alleged duty at 40 per cent. as manufactures in chief value of leather. The importers failed to produce testimony.

Alexander Murphy & Co. were sustained on platinum caps used in the manufacture of artificial silk. The Collector assessed them at 45 per cent. under the metal schedule of the present law; the importers asked free entry under Paragraph 653 as apparatus for chemical use.

The board upheld J. F. McCoy & Co. and others on woven brass or bronze wire taxed 45 per cent. ad valorem under the metal schedule, and in addition exacted 1 cent a pound under Paragraph 135. The importers objected to the additional duty.

TOBACCO BONDS TAKEN UP.

American Company Shows Nearly All Have Been Retired as Decree Ordered

The annual meeting of the American Tobacco Company was held in Jersey City yesterday, and the Treasurer's report for the year 1912, ten months of which were subsequent to the dissolution of the old combination, was submitted.

It showed that of the $52,882,650 of 6 per cent. bonds $50,311,900 had been retired, of the $51,354,100 of 4 per cent. bonds $48,092,950 had been retired, and of the preferred stock $25,751,900, leaving only $477,800 of the one-third of preferred stock that was to be retired. This, with something less than $5,000,000 of the two kinds of bonds must be retired within three years under the decree. The bonds were paid off from the proceeds of the property sold to the P. Lorillard and Liggett & Myers Companies. The preferred stock was received in exchange for preferred stock of the two new companies.

Of the other stocks and bonds that the decree required should be disposed of by Jan. 1, 1915, $12,029,913 have been sold, leaving a balance of $2,631,481. The F. F. Adams Tobacco Company, B. A. Peterson Tobacco Company, and F. R. Penn Tobacco Company, of which the American owned all the stock, have been wound up and their assets taken over.

Sales of the American Tobacco Company and those companies all of whose stock it owns were $67,950,257, and the net earnings were $10,123,885, or nearly 15 per cent. of the sales. Dividends from companies, part of whose stock is owned by the American, were $1,626,223. After interest and preferred dividend payments the net income was $12,242,662. Three dividends of 2½ per cent. on the common stock amounted to $3,018,180, leaving the surplus, which was $40,095,048 the year before, at $49,319,530. Cash distributed to stockholders from the sale of securities and the par value of the shares of the American Machine and Foundry Company, also distributed, amounted to $9,248,480, leaving the surplus at the end of the year $40,071,050. The capital stock, outstanding bonds, and average surplus during the year aggregated $146,633,142, of which the net income was 10⅞ per cent.

Preferred and common stockholders numbered 5,959, and preferred stockholders now have the same voting rights as the common stockholders.

CENTRAL TAKES SMALL ROADS

Practically All in New York State Consolidated in the System.

The New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company will send to each stockholder early next week a circular letter explaining the plan under which will be effected the consolidation of the New York Central, Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg, Utica & Black River, Oswego & Rome, Carthage, Watertown & Sackets Harbor, Nigara Falls branch, and the Little Falls & Dolgeville Railroads. There already have been merged into the New York Central the Spuyten Duyvil & Port Morris, New York & Putnam, Mohawk & Malone, Carthage & Adirondack, Gouverneur & Oswegatchie, and the New York & Ottawa. These have an aggregate length of 375 miles. The other lines to be taken in aggregate 840 miles.

Stockholders of the New York Central will have in the consolidated corporation the same number of shares of stock that they now have in the New York Central, namely 2,227,293 shares. It will not be necessary to deposit or to surrender stock certificates, as the consolidated corporation will recognize as its own the now outstanding New York Central certificates.

By these mergers and consolidations all the railroad companies organized under the laws of New York which are leased or controlled by the New York Central, with the exception of the New York & Harlem, the Walkill Valley, and companies whose owned lines are partly in other States, will be brought together in one corporation.

A special meeting of stockholders of the Central will be held at Albany on April 16, at which the agreement of consolidation will be submitted for adoption.

GUFFEY SELLS COAL LANDS.

Morgan Interests to Take Over Properties Valued at $10,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, March 12.—The J. P. Morgan interests will take over the $10,000,000 coal properties of Col. James M. Guffey in Taylor, Barbour, and Preston Counties of West Virginia. It was said to-day, on what was called semi-official authority, that the negotiations had been concluded, and that only the recording of the deeds was necessary to complete the deal. It is understood that Col. Guffey is making a sacrifice in the transfer, as he receives about $100 an acre for the land. The deal lifts Col. Guffey out of bankruptcy, into which he was plunged in 1909 after an unsuccessful fight against panic conditions.

Col. "Jim" Guffey formerly was Democratic National Committeeman from Pennsylvania. He was read out of the party by Bryan, and since the convention four years ago has not been conspicuous in National politics. His business in the last three years has kept him most of the time in the Texas oil fields.

The Morgan interests will complete the construction of the Buckhannon & Northern Railroad from Rivesville to Belington, where it will connect with the Baltimore & Ohio and the Western Maryland. This will give the coal field two routes to the Atlantic Coast. The new line probably will be controlled by the New York Central.

SILK BUYING KEEPS UP.

Spread of Strike Forecasts Scarcity of Desirable Merchandise.

There has been practically no diminution of the activities of buyers in the local silk market in the last week. The growth of the strike at Paterson and its spread to the Scranton and Lehigh Valley silk districts of Pennsylvania is resulting in a wider curtailment that was at first believed would come about, and, unless the trouble ends in all the strike centers within the next week or two, a positive shortage of desirable merchandise will result Already peau de cygnes, moires, crepes, charmeuse and other much wanted merchandise is scarce here, and buyers in many instances have to be content with substitutes. This is especially true of crepes and chameuse, both of which have been none too plentiful here since the demand for them opened. Martine effects are being shown for immediate and nearby delivery by some of the leading novelty houses, and a duplication of the recent run on imported goods of this kind is anticipated.

A good Fall demand is reported from the largest buyers, with messalines and other staple lines moving finely. The movement of novelty goods is not expected to become really active for the next two or three weeks at least. Bulgarian effects in linings are reported to be much sought after.

SPICE BUYERS UNCERTAIN.

Little Advance Contracting Done—Ginger Hard to Get.

The recent disturbance in coffee and rubber here, and the financial tension abroad have combined to create a feeling of uncertainty which seems to have centered about the spice market. Buying is limited to actual requirements of grinders, and few attempts to provide for what may be future needs.

Coupled with this is the change of duty which is proposed in the new tariff to come up in April, and the whole combination of untoward influences is creating a poor condition in the trade. Importers and others may not mind so much what the tariff is, but it is the uncertainty which is causing trouble now. Ginger is in active demand, but sales are slow because of the difficulty of getting stock. Red peppers are sharing with ginger the activity which is the result of a good demand. Nutmegs have sold more freely of late. Cinnamon is strong, with a fair demand for most grades. Cassia is following cinnamon in demand and price. Other varieties are generally unchanged, and business is of fair volume.

FREIGHT STREETS SUGGESTED FOR CITY

Plan to Solve Problem of Heavy Trucks—McAneny Plan Opposed—Motorists Fight Bills.

This is a week of troubles for the automoile maker and the automobile dealer, not to mention a few persons who use the motor car. Just as these persons had become thoroughly excited over the possible passage of certain automobile legislation at Albany which they considered dangerous to the industry and as they were preparing to proceed to the Capitol or even to the "People's House" en masse to oppose the proposed bills a disturbing flank movement has been executed right here in this city in the shape of a proposal from the Borough President's office to add city licenses to those already required by the State and to tax heavy trucks—including horse-drawn trucks, however—from $1. to $100 or more, according to weight per tire inch. To say that this proposal, embodied in an ordinance submitted to the Board of Aldermen by Mr. McAneny, was unwelcome to the motor truck section of the automobile fraternity would be putting it midly. The truck men have a dozen arguments to advance against it, of course. The proposal has called forth a novel suggestion for the solution of the proplem of road destruction by heavy vehicles from J. Bernstein, a traffic expert who has been making analyses of traffic for the Fifth Avenue Association and other bodies. Mr. Bernstein said last night.

"It is putting the cart before the horse to attempt to limit the growth of heavy trucking or place an impediment in the way of a natural and inevitable development. What should be done is not to penalize the vehicle because it damages roads which are unfit for it, but to provide proper roads to take care of the natural increase in the weight of the vehicle. I believe a solution of the problem in New York would be to designate certain "freight streets" as distinguished from passenger streets just as a railroad has freight and passenger tracks and a building freight and passenger elevators. The freight streets could then be built to sustain vehicles of any weight within reason and, at the same time, they would prove of benifit to the passenger streets by relieving them of much traffic.

"Such a scheme is entirely practical in New York, if applied to the north and south streets or avenues. Thus, taking Third Avenue as an example of a freight street: If a truck desired to get to Fiftieth Street and Fifth Avenue, it could come up Third Avenue to Fiftieth and then go through the cross street to its destination. There could be no objection to this use of the side street, for Mr. McAneny pointed out that it was the constant usage by heavy vehicles, not occasional usage, that did the damage. In fact he said that special permits might be issued for single trips. Some such plan as this must be adopted, for trucking is sure to become heavier and heavier. It is the law of efficiency. For instance, on a ten-ton truck, let us say, two men will be required to handle the load. But on a two and one half ton truck two men will also be required. So if four small trucks be used instead of one large one, eight men instead of two will be required. Inferior service or higher prices are sure to follow any blocking of the logical development of heavy trucking."

To-day representatives of numerous automobile bodies and clubs will argue their case before the Internal Affairs Committee of the Senate and the Assembly at a hearing in Albany on twenty-one proposed motor vehicle bills.

Nelson P. Lewis, chief engineer of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of this city, will lecture on "Methods of Paving for the Construction of Street Pavements," at Columbia University to-night, in connection with the graduate course in highway engineering.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES

The Daily Consular and Trade Report notes the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding them may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., and giving the number of the item referred to:

10,550. JUTE TWINE.—An American Consular officer reports that a company in his district desires to be put in touch with manufacturers of or dealers in jute twine for use in tying rolls of news print paper, the twine to be purchased in carload lots. Should shipments be made to this concern the goods should be packed in the same manner as for shipment for long distances in the United States. The company has had some difficulty in the case of purchases made in the United States in the matter of shipment. This company is a large paper and pulp concern and furnishes bank references.

10,551. POSTERS, PRINTING PAPER, AND CARDS.—A report from an American Consular officer in a European country states that a resident of his district desires correspondence with and agencies for American and poster printers; also high-class printing paper and card manufactures.

10,552. SHOES FOR ITALY.—A business man in Italy informs an American Consulate that he desires to secure the agency for the sale of American shoes for men, women, and children. Concerns which are not represented in Italy and which turn out every type of shoe are invited to send samples with price lists, discounts, and terms. The samples will either be returned at the expense of the business man in question or, if satisfactory, paid for.

10,553. GAS COAL.—An American Consul in a European country reports that a resident of his district desires to secure offers from American concerns for gas coal. He states that if prices are satisfactory he will succeed in closing a contract for a large supply with the local municipal gas works.

10,554. MACHINERY FOR WORKING UP BY-PRODUCTS OF SULPHITE MILL.—A report from an American Consular officer states that a company in his district desires to be put in communication with chemists in the United States who have knowledge of the by-products obtainable from sulphite mills and the manner in which the same are extracted. This company is said to be one of the largest paper and pulp mill operators on the Pacific Coast and wishes to obtain this information with a view of installing the necessary machinery for the purpose of working up the by-products of the mill in connection with the manufacture of paper and pulp. This company furnishes bank references.

10,555. PRESERVED AND CANNED GOODS.—An agency in Portugal, furnishing references and with experience, informs an American Consular officer that it would like to represent American manufacturers of preserved fruits, preserved meats, and canned goods generally. This agency will handle goods for the country and its provinces. Correspondence may be in English.

10,556. ELECTRICAL DEVICES, RARIFIED GAS, COLD LIGHTS, &c.—An American Consul in Italy reports that the largest local dealers in electrical devices in his district desire catalogues of small electrical devices and utensils, rarefied gas, cold lights, &c. Correspondence should be in Italian or French.

10,557. CONSTRUCTION MATERIALS.—A report from an American Consular officer states that the manager of a company in his district is now in the United States to personally interview dealers in and manufacturers of concrete, re-enforced steel, and other construction materials, with a view of obtaining the agency for certain territory in these lines. The Consular officer believes that his district offers unusual opportunities for the advancement of American trade in these articles and expresses a hope that manufacturers will avail themselves of such openings. The building permits in one city alone amounted to approximately $20,000,000 during 1912.

10,558. FULLWAY WEDGE VALVES.—A resident of a European country informs an American Consular officer that he desires to communicate with manufacturers of fullway wedge valves, similar to a design which may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Specifications of the valves are as follows: Minimum height, hand opening and closing, circular flange diameter of the admission part 600 millimeters, sluice valve, which with lead of 7 meters of water might still be opened and closed by hand in short time. References furnished; correspondence in English.

Case Threshing Has Good Year.

The J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company made gross sales in the year ended on December 31, 1912, of $14,026,633. Cost of manufacturing threshers, plows, and tractors and other products was $11,606,183, and other expenses amounted to $900,000. The amount saved for the year's profit was $2,264,434, surplus after 7 per cent. dividends on the $12,150,000 preferred stock and liberal reservations for depreciation and renewals was $887,573.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Robes and tunics are the order of the day in dress garniture, and black embroidered nets are among the most popular materials used in them.

About $3,000,000 worth of women's shoes are annually sent abroad from the factories at Lynn, Mass. Slippers made in Haverhill, Mass., are very popular in Europe.

Fur and velvet are expected to play a strong part in the garniture of Easter street gowns this year because of the early coming of the day.

EIGHT TYPICAL WOMEN of AMERICA

CHOSEN AND SKETCHED IN TWO COLORS

By PAUL & HELLEU

The Sunday Times

MR. A. G. LEARNED

the most prominent of New York's Dry Point Etchers, says of these reproductions:

"I did not think newspaper art was far enough advanced to make such a reproduction possible. These eight pictures of typical American women sum up the best in Helleu's present style, which is the very epitome of elegance, refinement and graceful technique. Helleu's visit to America has done a great deal to boom the cause of dry point etching in the United States. He has been most fortunate in the selection of his models. They seem to me representative of the best we have here in America."

The Next Sunday Times afterward, that of March 23, will be

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COTTON GOODS VALUES FIRM.

Business Seasonably Active with Commission—Dress Fabrics Good with Jobbers.

Jobbers of cotton dress fabrics in the local market are still doing good business, though it is strongly evident that the high point of the season's activities has passed. Novelties of all kinds continue to lead the demand, with the better grade goods especially wanted. Staple and semi-staple lines are moving fairly well. Imported ratines and cotton crepes, in white and colors, are well up among the leaders in their field. The first-named goods are now reported scarce and difficult to get for immediate or near-by delivery.

Seasonable activity is found in the primary end of the market, with fairly large duplicate business coming from the jobbers. Prices are firm, generally in sympathy with the sustained strength of the raw material, and no appreciable softening is expected for some time. This is especially true of the heavier constructions. A somewhat more active call for narrow prints has been noticed of late, and a good movement of percales for Fall delivery is reported.

WOOL BUYERS CAUTIOUS.

Americans Conservative at London Sale—Crossbreds Best Taken.

According to advices received in this city regarding the London wool sale, there is a good demand for practically all grades of merinos and crossbreds. And this in the face of rather conservative operations on the part of American buyers. The best selling wools, so far as American buying is concerned, are crossbreds of the grades best suited to use on this side of the Atlantic. Some good speculative buying of merinos by foreign operators has been reported, but withdrawals of both merinos and crossbreds have been rather light. Prices are generally regarded as high in comparison with those obtained at the last previous sale, but have so far shown little change aside from the fluctuations noted on dirty and greasy fleeces. Medium grade wools from the Faulkland Islands and Punta Arenas have been practically cleaned up by the various continental buyers. An average run of wool is reported all through.

LONG SERVICE MEDALS.

84 Men and 23 Women Get Them in Havre, France, for 30 Years' Work.

According to a report of Consul J. B. Osborne of Havre, France, the press of that city has just published a list of 107 persons, eighty-four men and twenty-three women employed in Havre and vicinity, to whom silver medals of honor have been awarded by decree of the Minister of Commerce and Industry of France for thirty years' faithful service in the same industrial establishment or business house. In the list were included Superintendents, managers, dock foremen, accountants, clerks, weavers, spinners, tailors, dressmakers, tramway conductors, masons, cabinetmakers, boilermakers, stokers, and laborers.

The medal of honor for employes and workmen was established in France by the decree of July 16, 1886, which authorized the Minister of Commerce and Industry to give them to persons whose services had covered a period of thirty years. This service must be in the same establishment, but intervening military service does not interfere. An important condition is that the beneficiary must be a citizen of France, although his employers may be foreigners.

RUG SALES PROMISING.

Indications for the coming season in carpets and rugs are satisfactory, and the manufacturers are reported taking their full complement of supplies for tapestries, velvets, Axminsters, and Wiltons. A shortage of raw material and firmer prices are expected later. There is said to be a tendency on the part of larger mills to be conservative about placing their contracts for yarns for the next six months on account of the uncertain tariff conditions. Plain fabrics of one and two tone effects will be most in demand for the better class of decorating, according to a well-known member of the local trade. Floral designs and Oriental effects will be extensively used, and green will probably be the most wanted color. It is again expected that rugs will sell considerably better than piece goods.

Current business in linoleums is composed chiefly of duplicate orders, although there is considerable inquiry for large contract work in plain goods and cork carpets. It is said that prices will rule better next season.

Electricity for Penn. R. R. Section.

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—The Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad voted to-day to establish an electric system for suburban passenger train service on the main line between the Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, and Paoli, Penn., a distance of twenty miles. The work of electrification will be begun as soon as possible. It is thought suburban trains will be using the system next year. The installation will cost $4,000,000.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

It is reported that an Italian steamship Company is contemplating establishing a service between Genoa, Antwerp, and Kongo, with Lisbon as a probable port of call. Italy's interests in Kongo are not large, however. Imports into Kongo from Italy during 1910 and 1911 were valued at $12,856 and $35,849, respectively, representing the fourteenth and fifteenth positions among the several nations exporting merchandise to Kongo.

American Minister Nicolay A. Grevstad, at Montevideo, Uruguay, reports that the competition for the Artigas Monument, reference to which was made in Daily Consular and Trade Reports for April 4 and July 25, 1911, was opened early in January. The committee found two statues of equal excellence, one designed by an Italian and the other by a Uruguayan sculptor, and has ordered another competition between these two.

The Postmaster General of Denmark reports $3,684,000 as the total receipts for 1912, a gain over 1911 of 6.4 per cent.

The Royal Agricultural Society of England will begin a trial of milking machines at Grange Hill, Bishop Auckland, Durham, on April 22. It is expected that the trial will last for several days, sixteen machines of different makes having been entered already. Most of these machines have been entered by English exhibitors.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The meeting of the muslin underwear buyers of the Dry Goods Alliance, 75 Spring Street, which was scheduled for to-day, has been indefinitely postponed.

Exports of domestics and cotton duck from New York in the week ended March 8 amounted to 6,823 packages, valued at $562,559, against 9,284 packages, valued at $531,378, in the week before. Shipments to the Philippines were by far the heaviest shown on the list.

The Hayden Company, furniture and upholstery dealers, formerly at 523 Fifth Avenue, have engaged the entire fifth and sixth lofts in the new building at 511 West Forty-second Street, and are now located there.

F. W. Greene, who for the past eight years has been manager and buyer for Lazarus Brothers, Wilkesbarre, Penn., will shortly go in business for himself at Fourth and Market Streets, Harrisburg, Penn.

PRINTCLOTHS VERY DULL.

Yesterday was one of the dullest days in the local printcloth market in some time, and the tone was still easier than on Tuesday. Some 38½-inch, 60-48s, moved at 4½ cents, and some sales of 39-inch, 68-72s, were also reported at 5¾ cents. Aside from these, however, there was little doing. The call for sateens continued good, as did the demand for jacquard goods, ratines, voiles, and twills. Heavy goods showed a weakening tendency. The day's quotations follow:

27-inch, 56-52s..3 1-16c	38½-inch, 64-60s....5⅛c

Court Dismisses Cycle Brake Concerns' Demurrers to Indictments.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 12.—The alleged coaster-brake trust must stand trial on charges of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, Judge John R. Hazel in the United States Court having to-day overruled demurrers to indictments obtained by John Lord O'Bryan, United States District Attorney, a year ago.

The indictments charge eighteen individuals and six corporations embraced in the New Departure Manufacturing Company, the alleged trust, with conspiracy to restrain trade, the establishment of non-competitive prices, the destruction of competition, and an attempt to monopolize the entire trade in bicycle and motor cycle coaster brakes.

The case is different from any prosecution yet started by the Government under the Sherman act. It is charged that each of the six defendant companies owned its own patent under which it manufactured its own particular kind of brake. It is further charged that to carry out the conspiracy the defendants agreed that one of their number should pretend to take out a master patent controlling the brakes made by all of the parties and that each remaining defendant went through the pretense of taking a patent license from the alleged pretended controlling patentee. Under cover of this alleged pretended patent license, it is charged, the defendants fixed a non-competitive system of prices, and by joint action blacklisted manufacturers and dealers to kill competition.

The corporation has plants in Ohio, New York, and New Hampshire.

BOSTON'S SHOE EXPORTS.

Does the Bulk of This Business, Association Bulletin Says.

Boston is the foremost export shoe market in this country, according to a bulletin sent out by the New England Shoe and Leather Association. Its merchants have circled the globe with their agencies.

Commenting on the extent to which this trade has grown, the bulletin says:

> Boston sells the bulk of nearly $15,000,000 worth of American shoes that are exported each year. More than $3,000,000 worth are sent to Cuba and about $2,000,000 worth to Great Britain. Canada, and Mexico each take more than $1,000,000 worth. South American countries take nearly another million.
> The big trade with Cuba has been built up since the Spanish-American war. When the new reciprocity treaty was made with Cuba, soon after the war, the New England Shoe and Leather Association got in it, through representatives in Congress, a preferential tariff rate on American shoes. This advantage, together with the friendliness of Cubans for Americans, enabled American shoe manufacturers to successfully sell shoes to Cuban markets. Formerly Spanish shoe manufacturers controlled the Cuban market.
> The English and European shoe trade has been built up within the last decade. Some enterprising New England shoe manufacturers discovered that English people liked American shoes, and they pushed sales of them in English cities with characteristic vigor. Now American shoe stores bearing names familiar to New Englanders are firmly established in Regent Street, the Strand, and Cheapside in London, and in all the large cities of Great Britain. American college style shoes are sold at Oxford.

South America, according to the opinion expressed by some manufacturers, will eventually become the best market in the world for American shoes.

KNIT GOODS TRADE STRONG.

Satisfactory business continues among local knit-goods sellers. Many mills are apparently sold up, and dealers are asking immediate deliveries. Short-sleeved balbriggan union suits are said to be the most-wanted undergarments for men. It is also said that the Eastern trade is more inclined now toward union suits for women than formerly. At the moment tuck and fine-stitch garments are the most called for of women's underclothing. It is reported that staple numbers have advanced in price, and that good materials are scarce. Hosiery business at the moment is ahead of last year's, and low-end staples are well sold up. The demand in women's hosiery seems to tend toward fashioned domestic and foreign goods, and it was said that a scarcity of these seemed not improbable. The large demand for white material continues.

Manufacturers of sweaters report a lack of medium-grade goods, and that mills are sold up for Fall. Sweater coats are having the largest sales at present, and cardinal, Oxford, maroon, and navy are said to be the most-wanted colors.

Tracing Rail and Water Lines.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—In a general order to all railroads the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day required them to disclose, under oath, before April 15 what connection each might have in the transportation of freight or passengers by water. The information will be used in administration of the provision of the Panama Canal law which will make it unlawful after July 1, 1914, for any railroad company to own, control, or have an interest in any common carrier by water, operated through the Panama Canal or elsewhere, with which the railroad may be a competitor.

"Two lives" to our trucks

Six years ago the Wm. Peter Brewing Co., Union Hill, N. J., bought four of our trucks. These trucks made good and the Company did not hesitate to buy seven more at second-hand, although they had been used for several years.

Every one of these eleven trucks is now making money, and, as the Peter people say, "are good for 10 years more."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks React After Showing Improvement—Gold Demand Puts Money Up.

Money rates here showed the effect yesterday of Europe's urgent demand for gold, which New York was called upon to supply after a reserve which showed, when this demand made its appearance, a none too large margin over the required minimum. Gold has been needed more abroad than here, and it has been going out on a fairly large scale, but with the natural result of putting up our own interest rates. Call money rose to 6 per cent. yesterday, and it will now cost other markets more to draw additional gold supplies from this centre, for exchange rates dropped sharply yesterday in response to the rise in money. It was believed, however, barring a sudden change for the better in the European situation, that a further considerable amount of gold will be taken for export before the end of this month. It was estimated yesterday by bankers who have been taking an active part in the export movement that between $6,000,000 and $10,000,000 more was likely to be shipped out before the movement ends. Under the circumstances prevailing the decline in exchange is no effective barrier against a continued export movement for the reason that the European markets have been offering facilities to those importing gold to New York, and these can easily be made to overcome the ordinary obstacle of a reduction in exchange rates due to higher money here. The gold which New York is supplying to Europe should help measurably in enabling the European markets to meet the demands which they are facing at the close of this month. A contribution of gold which will ease materially any strain incidental to the coming quarterly settlements abroad will work in the long run to the advantage of our own market as well as all others, but its immediate effect is to put further restriction upon the American securities market.

The European bourses were somewhat more cheerful yesterday and prices here reflected a further hardening of prices abroad, but in the later trading the morning's improvement was lost, and at the close the general level of the market showed a small net loss. Sharp declines in a number of industrial issues, particularly among the newer issues of this group, were again the feature of Stock Exchange trading. Liquidation of such issues is naturally conducted at a disadvantage in a period of hardening money rates. The contrast between the state of the stock market and the condition of general business remains as marked as ever. In many lines merchants who at the beginning of the year expected by this date to be experiencing a considerable decline in the volume of their trade, find that it is still proceeding on a scale in many cases above last year's. The Iron Age, in its weekly review, says that it is not surprising with the heavy accumulation on order books that new business is not up to the present record rate of output, but rather is it surprising that there is so much new buying. Even business for future delivery is coming forward in large, though in somewhat reduced, volume. It is to be hoped that the situation abroad will clear itself with sufficient rapidity to prevent its curtailing our markets abroad or by forcing interest rates here to a still higher level, putting business here under the restriction of dearer money.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 4¼@6 per cent., with the last loan at 5 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 4¼ per cent.

Time money rates were 5¼@6 per cent. for sixty days, and 5½@5¾ per cent. for ninety days to six months.

Commercial paper was quoted at 5½ per cent. for best names.

Clearing House exchanges, $364,770,514; balances, $17,970,128; Sub-Treasury credit balance, $720,191.

The local banks have lost $2,854,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 5@5⅛ per cent. for short bills and 4⅞@4 15-16 per cent. for three months' bills; Paris, 3⅞ per cent., and Berlin, 5⅞@6 per cent. Money was 4¾ per cent. in London and 6 per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 25½ centimes, and the Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 44½ pfennigs.

Foreign exchange rates at the points noted were quoted as follows at the close of business yesterday:

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

London—Cable, $4.88; demand, $4.8715.
Paris—Cable, 5.17½ plus 1-64; check, 5.18¼ plus 1-32.
Berlin—Cable, 95½; check, 95⅜ less 1-32.
Switzerland—Cable, 5.18¾; check, 5.19⅜.
Holland—Cable, 40.22; check, 40.17.

SIXTY AND NINETY DAY BILLS.

London—Bankers', 60 days, $4.83; 90 days, $4.8110.
London—Commercial, 60 days, $4.82¾; 90 days, $4.80¾.
Paris—Commercial, 60 days, 5.21⅞ less 1-32; 90 days, 5.23¾.
Berlin—Commercial, 60 days, 94 5-16; 90 days, 93⅞ less 1-32.

DOMESTIC EXCHANGE RATES.

Boston, par; Chicago, 15c discount; St. Louis, par; St. Paul, 50c premium; San Francisco, 40c premium; Montreal, 15⅝c premium.

SILVER QUOTATIONS.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The European Factor.

Stories of a rather sensational nature about the possibility of trouble between France and Germany were not taken seriously by New York bankers yesterday, but the reports had an appreciable effect, none the less, in further increasing the tension at this centre. Estimates of the amount of gold which this country must be prepared to send abroad were considerably below those carried by cables from London and Berlin, leading bankers predicting that further exports this week would not amount to more than $4,000,000 or $5,000,000. The United States has no money to spare without limiting the needs of railroads and manufacturers at home, but there is practically no speculation at this time in real estate, stocks or commodities, and a demand for additional shipments would not precipitate any immediate trouble. It would result, in the opinion of bankers, in restricting American development at a time when commercial funds are in great demand.

Brokers Giving Up.

As a result, largely, of the recent flurry in the stock of the United States Hair Company, which enjoyed a brief period of great activity on the curb market, it is understood that a recently organized Stock Exchange house will shortly go out of business. There were widespread reports yesterday that the firm in question had been under investigation by the Exchange authorities, but it was learned after the meeting of the Board of Governors that no consideration had been given to the firm's affairs. U. S. Hair preferred, which sold one day at 10, was offered on the day following at 3½, but no transactions were recorded at that price. The next sale was made at 7.

Gold Exports and Exchange Rates.

If the money markets of the world were in a normal condition a sharp fall of foreign exchange rates like that which occurred yesterday would be expected by bankers to bring an end to gold exports until the exchange market changed front again. Under conditions as they are abroad just now, however, Wall Street is of two minds regarding probable movements of the metal in the next few days. Germany's need of strengthening banking reserves for the April settlement is no less urgent than it was at the close of last week, as far as can be judged, and the fact that Berlin banks have not been able to place loans of substantial amounts at this centre, on a 9 per cent. interest basis, would seem to indicate that gold must be purchased, even at a price. Local bankers who take this point of view predict that gold will continue to move to Berlin, however exchange may fluctuate. There are others, apparently a minority, who say that exchange rates in Berlin have so far admitted the importation of gold at a profit, and that the metal will be taken only as long as that margin of profit exists, unless the money market in the German capital becomes far more restricted than it is now. Leaving conjecture and theory aside, it was learned in the banking district yesterday that a concerted effort to buy a large amount of gold for Berlin was being made while sterling rates were declining rapidly.

Money Rates Affect Stocks.

The weakness of a number of industrial specialties, particularly some of those which have been listed only a short time, in the later trading yesterday was traceable to the rise of money rates. When interest rates turn strongly upward the banks naturally exercise a more particular degree of discrimination in regard to collateral for loans than in a period of nominal charges for funds, and the industrial shares are always the first to be affected. The decline of B. F. Goodrich common and preferred, however, was ascribed to a factor more intimate than 6 per cent. call money. The announcement by President Work that he would not recommend to the Directors that further common dividends be paid until a substantial surplus had been built up was interpreted in the Street as the final word on payments for a while, and the shares were sold in quantity.

Interest in Sugar.

The decline of American Sugar was the leading feature of yesterday's stock market, although there were other shares which lost far more ground. The attention of the Street was directed toward the stock the more especially because it had pursued the even tenor of its way for months without reflecting in any unusual fashion adverse talk on tariff prospects. When the price began to recede, upon publication of the unfavorable report for 1912, traders who followed American Sugar under the Havemeyer régime were moved to compare the methods of the company now with the methods of the old days. A statement of earnings could not affect the stock back in the 90's, they said, for the simple reason that none was ever made public, with complete information as to income.

Good Friday Holiday.

The petition submitted to the Stock Exchange Governors asking that the Exchange be closed on Good Friday, March 21, and on the Saturday following, was favorably acted upon at yesterday's regular meeting of the Board. A great many of the brokers will leave town Thursday afternoon, to be gone until Monday. The banking houses will remain open.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

London and Other Markets Cheerful and Firm on the Better International Situation.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, March 13.—The Times in its City article to-day will say:

"The money market was in a slightly more comfortable condition. It was able to repay a small portion of what it owed to the Bank and provided for the bulk of what was due by selling short bills to the Bank. The rates for daily money and short fixtures were unaltered. Discount quotations were inclined to be weaker, bills being less freely offered, but there was no material decline. There appeared to be no foreign demand for bar gold.

"The tone of the stock markets was distinctly better. The improvement was due to a more favorable interpretation of the news regarding the foreign political outlook. There did not appear to be any increase in the volume of business, however. In the absence of support, prices in most instances closed rather below the higher level attained at the outset. Consols again rose slightly. All movements in the home railway market were upward, the appearance of a batch of excellent traffic returns creating a good impression. The Continental Bourses were steady, and in the absence of further sales from Berlin there was a recovery of Canadian Pacific shares. Japanese 4½ per cent. bonds showed pronounced strength. Shipping securities were firmer. After opening in a very confident manner, the mining markets became easier in the absence of support."

PARIS, March 12.—Prices were firm on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 90f. 12½c. for the account.

BERLIN, March 12.—The Boerse opened firmer to-day on the Austro-Russian demobilization agreement.

A general advance in prices followed, but the market reacted slightly in the last hour.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Following an early display of strength, the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange developed weakness after midday. The special weakness of some of the recently promoted industrials tended to bring about unsettlement elsewhere in the list. The controlling influence at the opening of business was the improvement in the foreign situation as reflected by general price advances in the markets abroad. On the opening call at 9.30 o'clock the transactions reflected overnight price gains ranging from one-fourth of a point to 3½ points, the latter in the case of Canadian Pacific.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Financial Review for 1913, issued by The Commercial and Financial Chronicle, which is well-nigh indispensable in a statistical library, is ready for delivery.

The Stock Exchange has admitted to the list $22,500,000 Canada Southern consolidated fifty-year 5 per cent. bonds, $10,000,000 Kansas City Terminal Railway Company first mortgage 4 per cent. bonds, $3,276,000 Homestake Mining Company additional capital stock, and $290,000 Pacific Power & Light Company first and refunding 5 per cent. bonds.

H. G. Dalton has been elected a Director of the Lackawanna Steel Company, to succeed the late S. S. Palmer.

The syndicate which underwrote the $67,000,000 American Telephone & Telegraph Company convertible 4½ per cent. bonds has been dissolved.

In addition to the usual quarterly dividends of 2 per cent. regular and 2 per cent. extra, the Westinghouse Air Brake Company has declared a special stock dividend of 5 per cent.

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday, copper was a shade easier for all deliveries up to May. Spelter was up 5 points. Tin was weak and slightly more active. Fifty tons each of July, August and September delivery sold at 45.25. The closing bid and asked prices follow:

Standard copper—	—Wednesday— Bid.	Asked.	—Tuesday— Bid.	Asked.
Spot	14.25
March	14.25	14.75	14.37½	14.75
April	14.25	14.62½	14.37½	14.75
May	14.25	14.62½	14.37½	14.75
Lead	4.30	4.40	4.30	4.40
Spelter	6.35	6.45	6.30	6.40

The following table of prices were recorded on the London Metal Exchange yesterday, for spot and future deliveries of copper and pig tin. These closing quotations make comparison with Tuesday's final figures:

	Wednesday. £ s. d.	Tuesday. £ s. d.
Copper, spot	64 17 6	65 5 0
Copper, futures	65 10 0	65 15 0
Pig tin, spot	211 10 0	212 00 0
Pig tin, futures	208 5 0	209 00 0

The market ended easy. Spanish pig lead £15 13s. 9d., up 2s. 6d. Spelter £24 10s., unchanged. Cleveland warrants 63s. 3d., up 4½d.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Grains Higher—Cotton Lower.

Wheat rallied sharply from the [illegible] low prices, and closed ⅛c to ⅝c net higher. Corn prices were very steady, with final prices showing a net advance of ⅝c. The oats market ruled steady, and the close showed gains of ⅛c to ¼c net. Cotton closed at practically the day's lowest, at a net loss of 5 to 9 points.

WHEAT.

There was further liquidation in the wheat market during the early operations and the near positions declined ½ to ⅝c while September held steady. Late in the day a sharp rally occurred, however, and final quotations were ⅛ to ⅝c net higher. The news pertaining to the statistical position and the new crop outlook was undeniably bearish but not a few operators were inclined to take the stand that the bear news is all in and that future developments will depend on new conditions. So far the crop outlook in America has been unusually favorable and up to the present time there has been practically nothing to justify any apprehension of damage. It seemed hardly reasonable, however, to expect these conditions to continue and on this account it was believed that any change in the crop situation will be in favor of holders. On the decline export orders again appeared and proved the principal sustaining factor of the day. Sales were reported of about 125 loads including a large amount of No. 1 Northern Spring wheat from Chicago as well as considerable hard wheat by way of the Gulf. An official German report placed the reserves on March 1 at 45,600,000 bushels compared with 29,600,000 last year, but added that a considerable percentage of this is of inferior quality. The poor condition of the European wheat this season as well as the high character of the American grade is believed by some authorities to insure a condition of an export demand throughout the season. The Northwestern Miller said that flour sales by Minneapolis mills last week were again small, and with one or two unimportant exceptions bookings fell far short of the output. Advices from Chicago said that it was believed there that an important long interest had liquidated but it was not made plain whether or not the sellers had transferred their influence to the bear side. In the local market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.09 elevator and $1.10½ f. o. b. afloat; No. 1 Nor. Spring 98½c f. o. b. afloat.

CORN.

Underlying sentiment in the corn market appeared to favor the buying side, and prices throughout the day were very steady, closing at a net advance of ⅝c. Shorts were nervous and inclined to cover, and there was renewed buying by commission houses. Interior cash markets were irregular, but receipts, while fairly liberal, were not as large as a year ago. Export corn in the local market was quoted at 58¾c, free on board, afloat.

OATS.

The influence of the recent bearish Government report was offset by indications of renewed export demand, advices from the West stating that sales of 550,000 bushels had been made for export during the last two days. Prices ruled steady throughout the greater part of the day and closed at a net advance of ⅛c to ¼c. The local cash market was steady; standard white quoted at 38c; No. 3, 37½c; No. 4, 36½@37c; natural white, 36½@38c; white clipped, 36½@40c, all track.

COTTON.

The cotton market just about lost Tuesday's advance during yesterday's trading, although there seemed to be no particular change in the general character of the news. It seemed, however, that recent buyers to cover shorts or for a rally were disappointed that the market had not attracted a more active or a more general demand, and were reselling owing to continued reports of favorable new crop prospects in the South and an unfavorable view of conditions in Germany, although the European situation as a whole is considered rather more favorable by some owing to the outlook for a settlement of the troubles in the Balkans. Bullish estimates of the season's consumption and favorable spot advices failed to check the decline during the afternoon, and after a fairly steady morning the market closed steady, but at practically the lowest point of the day and at a net loss of from 5 to 9 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 4 points in response to relatively steady cables. There was some foreign buying as well as scattered covering, and while prices eased off slightly right after the call the market held pretty steady until after the close of Liverpool had shut out arbitrage business. Then demand tapered off somewhat, and as soon as prices began to ease off the selling became a little more general. Reports that Neill Brothers, the prominent English trade authorities, estimated the world's consumption of American cotton at over 14,750,000 bales, comparing with their original estimate of from 14,500,000 to 14,750,000, excited some surprise in the local trade, which has recently been disposed to shade its estimates of requirements owing to unfavorable conditions in certain Continental circles, but the figures stimulated no immediate demand, and the market was unsettled in the late trading.

Reports that rains in the South were delaying farm work or even planting in some sections, and forecasts for continued wet weather probably restricted offerings to some extent during the morning, but the talk around the ring indicated that the trade was not disposed to be much impressed by talk of delayed planting so early in the season, as it is only in the more advanced localities that seeding could be expected before the end of March. Private reports from Houston estimated an increase of 5 per cent. in the Texas acreage, and reports from other sections of the belt continued to indicate favorable prospects, with good weather for the next two months. While Southern spot markets as officially reported were somewhat irregular, being ⅛c higher to 3-16c lower, better sales were reported at several points, and several private wires were received indicating a better demand from exporters. Savannah sales of about 1,500 at a decline of ⅛c were said to represent cotton held b banks for the account of a firm recently reported in financial troubles rather than the general market.

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged at 12.40 for middling upland.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market showed a sharp recovery from the low point of Tuesday, owing to active covering and buying by commission houses, prompted by a further show of strength in the hog position. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 25,000; estimated for Thursday, 26,000; Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 10,800.

COTTONSEED OIL.

There was considerable selling in the cottonseed oil market during the first part of the day, prompted by tenders of about 2,000 barrels on March notices, but these were taken up by strong interests, and, after an early decline of 2 to 4 points, the market rallied, and at the close was 1 point higher to 2 points net lower. The firmness in lard had a sympathetic influence on values and while the crude market was said to be slightly easier in tone, offerings were light.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Rain is gradually overspreading the central and Southern portions of the country, and snow is falling in the Northwest, while the centre of the principal disturbance is still in the Far West, it not yet having advanced further eastward than the Rocky Mountain region. Although the area of precipitation is extensive, heavy rain falls are confined to the Gulf States. The temperature is still mild for the season in all sections, except the extreme Northwest, where freezing weather is reported.

The Western storm will move steadily Eastward and will cause general precipitation during the next two days in practically all districts east of the Rockies. It will be followed by decidedly colder weather. A marked change from the mild temperature conditions of the last several days is indicated for the trans-Mississippi region Thursday or Thursday night, and for the State lying to the east Friday and Saturday.

Winds along the New England Coast will be light south to southeast; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate east to southeast; South Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast.

Steamships departing Thursday for European ports will have moderate to brisk south to southeast winds with fair followed by rainy weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECASTS FOR TO-DAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York, Southern New England, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Increasing cloudiness Thursday with probably rain by night and on Friday; moderate to brisk southeast winds.

Western New York—Rain Thursday afternoon and on Friday, colder Friday night; brisk south winds.

Northern New England—Fair Thursday, Friday, rain, moderate south winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

Referees' Notices

SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF NEW YORK. —CHARLES A. ROBINSON, as sole acting trustee under the last will and testament of Agnes Hyatt Robinson, deceased, plaintiff, against ALICE M. LYNCH et al., defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 12th day of June, 1912, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 3,208-10 Third Avenue, in the Borough of the Bronx, City of New York, on the 21st day of March, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold and therein described as follows:

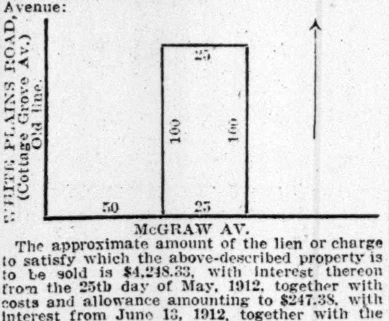
All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of the Bronx, of City of New Yorkk, in the County and State of New York, formerly Town of Westchester, Westchester County, N. Y., and known and distinguished on a map entitled "Map of 370 choice lots known as the McGraw Estate, desirably situated near Van Nest Station, Westchester, Westchester Co., N. Y.," made by Charles A. Mapes, C. E. & S., May, 1891, and filed in the office of the Register of Westchester County June 17th, 1891, as and by Lot No. 330, said lot according to said map being 25 feet front and rear by 100 feet deep on each side.

Dated New York, February 27, 1913.

CHARLES L. COHN, Referee.

ROLLINS & ROLLINS, Attorneys for Plaintiff, 32 Nassau Street, New York City.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold; its street number is 1,887 McGraw Avenue:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold is $4,248.33, with interest thereon from the 25th day of May, 1912, together with costs and allowance amounting to $247.38, with interest from June 13, 1912, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, and water rates, or other liens, which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money or paid by the referee is $691.51 and interest.

Dated New York, February 27, 1913.

CHARLES L. COHN, Referee.

RECEIVERS' NOTICES.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, Southern District of New York.—MAURICE DEICHES, as Receiver of THE AETNA INDEMNITY COMPANY, Complainant, against UNITED COPPER COMPANY, Defendant.

To the creditors of United Copper Company, the above-named defendant:

Take notice that we have been appointed and have qualified as receivers of the above-named defendant, pursuant to a decree made by this court and duly entered February 10, 1913, and that said decree contains a provision as follows:

"Ordered, that all such creditors of the said defendant, and each and every of them, be and they hereby are directed to file with the receivers at such office or place of business as said receivers may designate and within ninety (90) days from the date of this order, a duly sworn statement of all and any such claims as they may have or assert against the defendant. Such statement shall be verified before any officer authorized to administer oaths by the laws of the State where said claim is verified, and such statement of claim shall, where the same is evidenced by any written instrument, have the same attached to it."

You are required, pursuant to the said provision of said decree, to file your claim with the undersigned receivers at their office, Room 1,611, No. 27 Cedar Street, Borough of Manhattan, City and Southern District of New York, within ninety (90) days from the date of said decree, namely, on or before May 12, 1913.

Take notice, further, that said decree contains a further provision as follows:

"Ordered, that all such creditors as shall fail to file their claims with the receivers, as hereinbefore provided, and within the time hereinbefore fixed, shall be debarred from any share of, in or to the property of the defendant, and shall not be entitled to receive any share of said assets or property of the defendant or the proceeds thereof."

Dated New York, February 15, 1913.

Yours truly,

JOHN S. SHEPPARD, Jr.,
ADDISON E. CUDWORTH,
Receivers.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

$1,000,000 Loft Property in 22d Street Sold—Taylor Estate at Oakland Taken in Trade—Fourth Avenue Deal—West Side Activity—Catholic Sisters Buy Hempst ad Sanitarium.

Considerable activity was apparent in the realty market yesterday. In the mid-town loft section there was a sale of a sixteen-story loft in Twenty-second Street approximating close to $1,000,000, in which a Long Island estate was taken in part payment, while the speculative buying interest was also shown in an exceptionally marked manner by the lively bidding called forth in the auction sale of the old Child's Hospital on Lexington Avenue, which went to several buyers for a total of $446,100.

The loft transaction involved the purchase by the heirs of the John H. Taylor estate of the sixteen-story building at 20 to 26 West Twenty-second Street, a plot fronting 103 feet by 98.9 directly in the rear of Stern Brothers' store. It was sold by the Silk Realty Company, of which Samuel K. Jacobs is President, and in part payment he has taken the old Taylor estate at Oakland, L. I., of about 210 acres with a large house and other buildings, and which adjoins the links of the Oakland Golf Club. The Twenty-second Street property has been taken subject to its mortgage of $600,000, held by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

The Twenty-second Street plot was acquired by Louis Korn about two years ago. He encountered financial difficulties before the structure was finished, and eventually Mr. Jacobs, who had sold the plot to Mr. Korn, took over the property. The Taylor estate was held at about $650,000, or $3,100 an acre. Mr. Jacobs will hold it for future development, believing that the proposed extension of the subway system from Corona to within five blocks of the property, combined with the electrification of the Long Island Railroad, will make it an unusually attractive residential section.

Speculative interest in Lexington Avenue property was shown in a manner which has not been seen for some time in the auction room yesterday, when Bryan L. Kennelly offered the block front on the east side of Lexington Avenue, between Fiftieth and Fifty-first Streets, now occupied by the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital. The avenue frontage is 200.10, with 320 on Fifty-first Street, and 47.3 on Fiftieth Street. The total price was $446,100, and, as the buildings are valueless, since under the terms of the sale by the city they must be removed within sixty days, the price is an excellent indication of the growing value of Lexington Avenue property, as the land assessment is $300,000.

Four buyers obtained portions of the property. Lowenfeld & Prager got the lot on the southeast corner of the avenue and Fifty-first Street, 25.5 by 100, for $59,250. Three adjoining lots on the avenue were taken by Harris & Maurice Mandelbaum for $42,450, $33,000 and $30,000, respectively, a total of $105,450. The remaining half of the Lexington Avenue block, including the Fiftieth Street corner, went to Max Marx for $80,500, the corner, 47.3 by 75, figuring at $61,500, and the adjoining avenue lot, with an irregular rear, at $19,000. The balance, including the nine lots on the south side of Fifty-first Street, 100 feet east of Lexington Avenue, were bought by Bing & Bing for a total of $200,900, the first three lots going for $25,000 each, the next two at $22,750 each, and the last four at $20,100 each.

Sixty per cent. of the amount received goes to the hospital, and 40 per cent. to the city.

Another Apartment for West 79th St.

Three more fine private dwellings in the upper west side were disposed of yesterday and will be torn down to make way for a tall apartment house. The property, which was purchased by the Brixton Construction Company, consists of 138, 140, and 142 West Seventy-ninth Street, occupying a plot 58 by 102.2 feet, between Amsterdam and Columbus Avenues. Dr. William C. Bergmann, Matthew Farris, and Phillip H. Smith, respectively, are the sellers. Carl Levis was the broker, Slawson & Hobbs being associated in the sale of 138. A twelve-story apartment house will be erected on the site by the buyer. The operation will mark the third enterprise of that character on the block. At 155 to 161 the Laurel Construction Company built a twelve-story structure, which it sold last October to William M. Sperry of the Sperry & Hutchinson Company. The Vadrick Realty Company erected a similar-sized house at 150 to 158.

Buy Fourth Avenue Loft Site.

The old brick buildings at 329 and 331 Fourth Avenue were purchased yesterday by the Polo Construction Company as a site for a twelve-story commercial loft and office building.

The Realty Holding Company, which sold the property, held it at $200,000. It has a frontage of 39 feet and a depth of 84 feet. Plans for the new structure, which will be started on May 1, are being prepared by Neville & Bagge. The operation involves an expenditure of about $400,000. M. & L. Hess were the brokers in the transaction.

Jersey Property Traded for The Chautauqua.

The sale of The Chautauqua, a twelve-story apartment house at the southeast corner of Eighty-eighth Street and West End Avenue, recently reported, was consummated yesterday through A. Frank and Mark Rafalsky & Co. as brokers.

It was held by the owner and builder, Harry Schiff, at $1,000,000. The buyer, an investor, gave in part payment 570 lots and fourteen one-family houses at Roselle Park, N. J.

The Private Dwelling Market.

Folsom Brothers Inc., in conjunction with Adam Schopp, have sold for the estate of Charlotte A. Van den Heuvel, through Strong & Cadwallader, attorneys, the three-story and basement private dwelling, 106 East Twelfth Street, to Mrs. Mary O'Neill, for her own occupancy.

Recent Buyers.

Deutsch Brothers, bankers, are buyers of 818 to 824 East 167th Street, sold Tuesday by Lowenfeld & Prager.

The Charles I. Weinstein Realty Company is the buyer of 304 to 312 West Fourteenth Street, sold by Jacob Kottek. An elevator apartment house will be erected.

Bronx Borough.

Kurz & Uren Inc., have sold for Mrs. S. Sullivan the seven acres of land on the Eastchester Road, between Mace Avenue and Allerton Avenue, having a frontage of 292.78 feet on Eastchester Road, a depth of 961.59 feet on the north line and 1,075.85 feet on the south line. This property has been in the possession of Mrs. Sullivan for upward of ten years.

The George Bockhaus Company has leased from the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company two five-story apartment houses, 354-356 Mott Avenue, for a long term of years.

Bronx Loans Placed.

John A. Steinmetz has placed a $115,000 building loan on Bronx Park, south of Crotona Parkway and Mohegan Avenue, for the F. B. Construction Company, also for the Obark Realty Company $26,000 on the west side of Daly Avenue, 231 feet south of 180th Street, also $36,000 on the north side of 179th Street, 95 feet east of Mohegan Avenue.

Brooklyn.

Charles W. Seitz has sold 191, 193, and 195 Schermerhorn Street, the northwest corner of Hoyt Street, each 25 by 100 feet; 191 for Hannah A. Edgett and Ida B. Lowndes; 193 for Louisa A. Beckett; 195 for Henry Hyams to Louis Beer's Sons, who will demolish the present buildings and erect five store and apartment buildings on the 75 by 100 foot plot facing same on Hoyt Street; also 291 State Street, between Smith and Hoyt Streets, a three-story and basement brownstone dwelling, 18.9 by 45 by 100 feet, for Mary A. Cunningham to Louisa A. Beckett for occupancy, and 391 Bridge Street, between Fulton and Willoughby Streets, a three-story and basement brick building 20 by 45 by 100.3 feet, for Philip M. Holland to Hyams Realty Company, Inc., for investment.

The Jerome Property Corporation has sold 355 First Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, a two-story and basement brownstone private residence, on a lot 19 by 100, for Emma Werner to Margaret Culleeny for occupancy. The same brokers also resold for a client 352 First Street, a two-story and basement brownstone private dwelling, on a lot 19 by 100, to E. P. Nichols for investment.

W. H. Goldey has sold to William D. Winter the house at 790 Argyle Road, on a plot 40 by 100; for the Ascutney Realty Company to M. M. Marcy the house, on a plot 45 by 100, 915 East Eighteenth Street, and for the same to Frank B. Klyn the house, on a plot 40 by 100, at 901 East Eighteenth Street. And he has also sold, in conjunction with Maurice Straus and W. V. Broach, the detached house at 450 Westminster Road, a corner plot, for $13,000, for occupancy; to Harry A. Meyers the house at 1,191 Ocean Avenue, on a plot 50 by 100, and to R. Leifert the house at 1,783 Brooklyn Avenue, on a plot 40 by 100.

French Sisters Buy at Hempstead.

It was ascertained yesterday that the Hempstead Sanitarium, formerly the home of the Wall Street broker, John Slade, had been purchased for about $18,500 by the French Visiting Sisters, whose home is now on Henry Street, Brooklyn. The property contains about nine acres, and has been owned by Dr. L. N. Lanehart, Fred Ingraham, and Charles L. Phipps. One of the owners stated last night that, while he believed the deal had been closed, he did not know whether the final papers had been signed. The organization of the French Visiting Sisters came here from France a few years ago. They will use the Hempstead Sanitarium as a hospital and home for their order.

Long Island.

John R. Davidson and David Kraus have sold for E. J. Howell the Howell Manor house at Bellport, situated on Main Street. The property has been in the Howell family over 200 years. The buyer will occupy it as a Summer residence.

New Jersey.

The Hasbrouck Park Land Company has sold at Hasbrouck Heights to Michael Thomas a plot 75 by 125 on Williams Avenue; to Mrs. Anna Griffen a plot 50 by 125 on Williams Avenue; to William Newman a plot 50 by 125 on Stanley Avenue; to Gustave Marks a plot 50 by 115 on Longworth Avenue; to Henry A. Gilroy a plot 50 by 100 on Terrace Avenue, and to Fred Read a plot 50 by 100 on Hasbrouck Avenue.

Important Mount Vernon Lease.

The Anderson Realty Company of Mount Vernon has leased for Ann Stephenson to the Washburn Realty Trust, Ltd., of Boston, the Stephenson Block, North Fourth Avenue, corner of Prospect Avenue, Mount Vernon, for a long term, subject to renewal.

This is one of the most important leases ever consummated in Mount Vernon. The property is directly opposite Proctor's new theatre and close to the new civic centre. The Washburn Realty Trust has now acquired four prominent business corners in Mount Vernon.

Leases.

J. B. English has leased for Evelyn G. Manley and Louise M. Grey to a client for a term of ten years the four-story building 129 West Forty-fifth Street. The tenants will make extensive alterations and occupy the premises for business purposes.

The McVickar, Gaillard Realty Company have leased for a long term of years, to Van Horn & Sawtell, the store, basement and seventh floor in the Anderson Galleries, 15-17 East Fortieth Street.

Country Rentals.

De Blois & Eldridge have rented for Mrs. Blair Fairchild her villa, known as New Lodge, on the easterly side of Bellevue Avenue, at Newport, R. I., to Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock for the season.

Pease & Elliman have rented for Herbert A. Weeks his cottage, known as Onaway, at Cedarhurst, L. I., to Eben E. Whitman.

Sale of Gen. Sickles's House Adjourned.

The sale of the residence of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles at 23 Fifth Avenue, which was scheduled to be sold at public auction yesterday by Joseph P. Day, was adjourned until April 16.

$1,800,000 in Loans Placed.

The McVickar, Gaillard Realty Company have placed loans aggregating over $1,800,000 recently. Among the largest placed were the following: Building loan for Isaac A. Hopper, Inc., of $300,000 on the twelve-story loft building to be erected on a plot 225 by 100 by irregular, 423 to 437 West Fifty-fifth Street. Building loan for the Comfort Realty Company of $150,000 on three five-story buildings to be erected on the west side of Wadsworth Avenue, near 186th Street. For the Twenty-fifth Street Construction Company, $170,000 on the twelve-story loft building, 141 and 143 West Twenty-eighth Street. For Mrs. Roberta F. Frank, $110,000 on the property 225 to 229 West Forty-ninth Street. For the Fox Square Building Company, $150,000, being $37,500 each on four houses on the west side of Hoe Avenue, near 165th Street, and for the Democratic Club, $125,000 on its clubhouse, 617 Fifth Avenue.

New West Side Theatre Rumor.

A rumor of another West Side theatre in the Ninety-sixth Street section was current yesterday. A syndicate is said to be negotiating for the Astor plot on the southwest corner of Broadway and Ninety-fifth Street, now owned by Vincent Astor. It fronts 100.8 on Broadway and 125 on Ninety-fifth Street.

Home for Catholic Mechanics.

Plans have been filed for a six-story and basement home for the Society of Catholic Mechanics, of which the Rev. Herman Eitel is the President. It will be on the north side of Eighty-eighth Street, 125 feet west of Third Avenue, having a frontage of forty feet. The first floor will contain a dining room, billiard room, a meeting room and the office. From the third to the sixth floors, inclusive, will be eighty-eight bedrooms. Daus & Otto are the architects, and have estimated the cost at $60,000.

Realty Notes.

E. Brooks & Co., Inc., have been given the general contract for the construction of the ten-story store for Lord & Taylor, to be erected by F. V. & J. H. Burton, on Fifth Avenue, Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth Streets.

A regular meeting of the West Side Taxpayers' Association will be held at 267 West Thirty-fourth Street this evening.

A $300,000 building loan has been obtained by the Odell-Townsend Holding Company from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company on the new apartment to be erected on the northeast corner of West End Avenue and Ninety-first Street, a plot 58.4 by 100.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination on April 7 for agronomist in sugar-cane investigations, for men only, to fill a vacancy, at $2,500 a year, in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, and vacancies in positions requiring similar qualifications as they may occur. Competitors will not be required to appear at any place for examination, but will be rated on the following subjects, which will have the relative weights indicated: General education and scientific training, 40; practical experience and fitness, 40; publications, 20.

An educational training equivalent to that required for graduation from a college or university of recognized standing is a prerequisite for consideration for this position. Statements as to training, experience and fitness are accepted subject to verification. Under an act of Congress applicants for this position must have been actually domiciled in the State in which they reside for at least one year previous to the date of the examination. Applicants must have reached their 30th, but not their 50th, birthday on the date of the examination, which is open to all men who are citizens of or who owe allegiance to the United States and who meet the requirements. Persons who meet the requirements and desire this examination should at once apply for Form 304 and special form to the Secretary of the Board of Examiners, Custom House, New York.

RAILROAD STRIKERS FIRE AT DEPUTIES

Discharged Pennsylvania Men Repulsed After Hot Battle at Roebling, N. J., Station.

PASSENGER TRAINS STONED

Ten Strike Leaders Captured—Strikers Expect Reinforcements from Near-by Towns.

Special to The New York Times.

ROEBLING, N. J., March 12.—Several striking section men are believed to have been wounded in a riot at Roebling Station on the Pennsylvania Railroad this afternoon when sixty strikers attacked a work train, drove off thirty strikebreakers and guards, and held possession until they in turn were driven out by railroad Deputy Sheriffs in a battle in which at least 200 shots were exchanged. As the mob retreated down the river road before the deputies' revolvers several men were seen to be limping and others were helped along by their companions.

Disorder broke out again shortly before 6 o'clock this evening, when passenger trains were stoned while passing a bridge near Roebling. Sheriff Jordan, who had just sworn in thirty-seven deputies at Bordentown, and was hurrying to Burlington, was a passenger on one of the trains thus attacked. The Sheriff sent a detail of police back to arrest the gang. He said he believed those who participated in the attack were mostly young hoodlums and not actual strikers.

Ten strike leaders were captured this afternoon, among them Lecarte Degrosse, who, it is alleged, opened the battle by firing pointblank at Robert Bankey of Camden, leader of the deputies. The bullet scraped the crown of the deputy's hat and was the signal for an immediate opening of hostilities. The strikers, most of them Italians and all in an ugly mood since they were paid off and discharged by the railroad company, drew revolvers and knives. Only the fact that the Italians were poor shots and that the deputies at first shot only to scare their opponents prevented bloodshed on the work train and among the big crowd that watched the battle.

Sheriff Jordan had been at Roebling until this morning ready to swear in a host of deputies if disorder occurred. There were no strikers left in the factory town and county business required the Sheriff's attention at Mount Holly, so he was absent when the work train fight started. Hearing that the Sheriff was away and that a work train filled with strikebreakers had begun road repairs at Roebling, the sixty strikers set out from Bordentown, four miles distant. The strikebreakers and guards, outnumbered two to one, gave only poor resistance when the strikers charged the train.

Noise of the battle drew a big crowd of non-combatants, mostly women and children, from the villages of Roebling and Kinkora, and the women called encouragement to the men. As the strikers had been discharged, the railroad viewed them as trespassers, and a hurry call was sent to nearby towns for deputies to dislodge them. Robert Bankey, Elisha Lloyd, and Joseph Daily of the Camden terminal force were at Bordentown and reached Roebling on the next train. They rallied the guards and some of the strikebreakers and called on the strikers to disperse and get off the railroad property. Degrosse's shot at Bankey was the answer, and the fight was on.

The deputies soon arrested Degrosse and nine others. They were handcuffed and left under guard on the train while the deputies charged the main body, drove them from the train and down the river toward Florence. One of the prisoners is an American, Somers Pittman of Bordentown, who has a wife and five small children. The ten, under guard, were held on the work train, which made a quick run to Burlington, where they were locked in the city jail and later sent to the county prison by trolley. Rioting and assault were charged against the nine and attempt to murder against Degrosse.

The strikers have established a rendezvous between Florence and Roebling, where they are caring for their wounded, and expect reinforcements from Bordentown and Trenton. The seriousness of the situation is aggravated by the presence of 200 Italians at Florence, who went on strike and were discharged yesterday from the Wood Iron Works and ordered to immediately vacate their homes, which the company owns.

NEW HAVEN REFUSES DEMAND.

Murray Says Pay Increase Won't Be Granted to Electrification Men.

W. S. Murray, electrical engineer in charge of electrification and construction for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, said yesterday that, in response to Maurice Breen's efforts, about 150 of the employes engaged in electrifying the system had joined in a demand upon him for an increase in wages. The advances asked are: For foremen, from $4 to $5 a day; for sub-foremen, from $3.50 to $4.50 a day; for linemen, from $3 to $4 a day, an average increase of approximately 28 per cent.

Mr. Murray said that the demands would not be complied with, and added that plenty of capable men were readily available to fill these places should the 150 decide to walk out on March 18, the time set by Mr. Breen for the threatened strike to begin.

CLOTHING WORKERS GO BACK.

Return to Work with Brass Bands—Children's Dressmakers Win.

The strike of the workers on men's and boys' clothing, which began on Dec. 3 of last year, ended yesterday when 30,000 strikers returned to work, many of them marching to the factories behind brass bands. The new agreement had finally been signed all around.

The articles of agreement approved yesterday differed very slightly from those submitted to the strikers more than a week ago. They were more acquiescent yesterday, and when the arrangements were reported at the different meeting halls there was a general disposition to call the strike off at once.

The agreement was reached by Marcus M. Marks of the Civic Federation, Dr. J. L. Magnus and Meyer London, the latter representing the garment workers, and Eugene S. Benjamin, President of the New York Clothing Trades Association and spokesman for the Allied Clothing Manufacturers' Associations.

It provides for a working week of not more than fifty-three hours up to January 1, 1914, for tailors; a fifty-hour working week for cutters, the working hours to be reduced to forty hours a week on January 1, 1914; increases in wages averaging $1 a week and other concessions.

The children's dressmakers who went on strike on Monday met in the Labor Temple, Fourteenth Street, and in a number of other halls yesterday and voted to return to work under the terms of an agreement reached between Saul Elstein, organizer, and other officers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and a committee of the Children's Dress Manufacturers' Association. This agreement affects 18,000 strikers, ninety-five per cent. of whom are girls.

John Wanamaker in School Board.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., March 12.—John Wanamaker has been appointed to a seat in the Philadelphia Board of Education as a result of a recommendation by the progressive members of the board, who are striving for fiscal and other reforms. Mr. Wanamaker's selection to fill a vacancy caused by the death of William McIntyre is generally approved, particularly in view of the fact that he has previously refrained from allying himself with either of the two factions in the board.

FREMSTAD SAVES AN OPERA.

Takes Mme. Duchene's Place on a Twenty-Minute Notice.

About fifteen minutes before the curtain rang up on the first act of "Les Contes d'Hoffmann" last evening at the Metropolitan Opera House Mr. Gatti-Casazza's telephone rang and he was notified that Mme. Duchene had fainted just as she was starting from home and would be unable to appear as Giulietta in the opera that evening. Fortunately this character does not make her appearance until the second act, so that the General Manager of the opera company had a few minutes at his disposal.

There was but one thing to do. It was too late to change the opera and there was but one other member of the company who could sing this part, Mme. Fremstad, who sang it when the opera was first produced at the Metropolitan in December. Mr. Gatti-Casazza accordingly called up Mme. Fremstad and asked her if she would sing after explaining the situation.

"Certainly," said the soprano, "I'm on my way down now."

Telling her maid to quickly pack up her costume she ordered her motor and it was less than twenty minutes before she was in the opera house. There was no wait necessary. William J. Guard came before the curtain to announce the change in cast and the announcement was received with applause by the audience.

"Mme. Fremstad's act was a particularly fine one," said a member of the business staff of the opera house. "A singer of her standing is not accustomed to make substitutions at the last minute, but she realized that it was too late to change the opera and that but for her the house would have to be closed. She did not hesitate a minute."

Miss Robeson sang Mme. Duchene's other part, that of Antonia's mother in the last act. The remainder of the cast was the familiar one, including Miss Bori, Miss Hempel, Mme. Maubourg, and Messrs. Jorn, Gilly, Rothier, Didur, Reiss, Rossi, and de Segurola. Mr. Polacco conducted.

Efforts are being made by the Board of Education through public lectures on music and lecture recitals to educate the adults of the city to a better appreciation of music. For this purpose on Tuesday evening at Y. M. H. A. Hall, Miss Margaret Anderton will give a lecture recital on "Classic Music versus Romantic Music and Popular Music," explaining how to listen for the difference and illustrating the talk with selections at the piano from typical composers. The same evening at Public School 132, Daniel Gregory Mason of the Department of Music at Teachers College, will give a recital on "Saint-Saëns."

Another feature of the week will be a recital by Mr. and Mrs. Barclay Dunham on "Songs from the Land of the Steppes" at Public School 17, Forty-seventh Street, on Friday evening.

Other important lectures in music and lecture recitals announced for the week are:

Tuesday—"Edvard Grieg and Scandinavian Songs," Mrs. Gurli Lennborn Smith, illustrated by songs of Mrs. Smith and instrumental selections by Miss Charlotte Herman, at Public School 4, Rivington and Ridge Streets.

Wednesday—"Irish and Scotch Ballads," Miss Ethel C. Gentsch, illustrated by vocal music, at Public School 95, West Houston Street.

Thursday—"Scotch Music," Lewis W. Armstrong, illustrated by vocal and instrumental music, at Public School 36, Castle Hill Avenue, Unionport.

NEW IMPORTING PLANS MADE.

C. C. Kurzmann Says French Gowns Will Be Shipped Direct This Fall.

The North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. arrived yesterday from Bremen with a big list of cabin passengers, which included a number of Americans. H. N. Harriman, who has been hunting in British East Africa, returned and brought a small white-faced monkey from Uganda. Sir William Young, the head of the Cuban Railways, was another passenger. He will sail to-day on the Mexico for Havana. Lord Albert Fairfax arrived on his annual visit to this country, and will spend a month with his brother, C. Edmund Fairfax, at 162 East Forty-sixth Street.

Charles C. Kurzmann, who brought about the negotiations in Paris on March 3 between the American dressmaking firms and the Paris houses, whereby the goods will be bought direct, instead of through the French syndicate brokers, returned from Cherbourg, and said that arrangements had been made for beginning the shipment of goods in the Fall. This would benefit both the American firms and the French houses, he said, and it was only the commission men who would suffer. In his opinion women's gowns will fit closer and be more filmy this Summer than last year.

Purser Charles A. Schnell of the Kaiser Wilhelm II. will complete his 300th trip across the Atlantic when he gets back to Bremen. He joined the company in 1882, has been purser on forty-one of its steamships, and has traveled 1,800,000 miles at sea in its service. He left the Elbe the trip before she foundered in the North Sea, and missed the great fire in Hoboken in 1900 by one day.

Mr. Schnell was entertained at Meyer's Hotel last night by a number of German-American residents.

Metropolitan Art Museum Again a Buyer at Drake Sale.

The sale of the A. W. Drake collections at the American Art Galleries yesterday afternoon and evening, brought the total returns up to $10,148. The afternoon's sale brought $1,662, and the evening's $3,588.

A number of purchases were made by the Metropolitan Art Museum, which paid $160 for a needlework picture in petit-point, a pastoral scene, a shepherd playing a pipe under the trees, a shepherdess and a flock of sheep; $52.50 for an interesting sampler, unusual in color and arrangement, dated 1765, and $80 for two American samplers, 1807 and 1833. The museum paid $37 for five historic printed handkerchiefs, one American, the William Henry Harrison "Hard Cider Campaign"; a French romantic scene and three with English scenes.

William Skinner paid $75 for a very fine English sampler dated 1734, a little moth eaten; $52.50 for a New England sampler, by Lydia Tallman, New Bedford, Mass. 1808, and $60 for an American sampler, by Abigail Ridgway, in tapestry colors, 1795. David Belasco paid $42.50 for a sampler showing a full rigged English ship, and Mrs. George Frazer paid $40 for an early American sampler, by Lydia Stockton; $42.50 for a loosely woven woolen canvas sampler, and $45 for an American sampler, by Ann Newbold, house, trees, animals, verse, and flower border, dated 1810.

J. H. G. Gilbert paid $65 for a very fine sampler, American, with an elaborate vase of flowers and border in petit-point and a foreground of various stitches, and a group of lambs, dated 1827.

The sale will be continued this afternoon.

GOVERNOR FIELDER ANGRY AT MARTIN

Resents Tacking of Amendment on to New Jersey Jury Reform Bill.

HEARING ON LOCAL OPTION

Measure Limiting Saloons and Connection of Wholesalers with Them Is Argued—Railroad Bill Also Up.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., March 12.—The Assembly adopted late this afternoon the Zisgen Jury Reform bill, but not until there had been attached to it an amendment by Mr. Martin of Hudson providing a referendum. As the bill now stands two Commissioners will be named for each county by the Governor, and they, instead of the Sheriff, will draw Grand and Petit Juries. The act will not apply, however, in the county unless it is adopted upon a vote equal to 30 per cent. of that cast at the preceding general election.

Senator Davis of Salem County, the majority leader, admits that there is little likelihood of getting enough votes for the bill in the Senate. The measure was passed in the lower House with Republican help, Minority Leader Richards of Atlantic declaring that his colleagues would give the Democrats the rope with which to hang themselves.

Gov. Fielder was angry with Martin, and said so.

"Assemblyman Martin pretends to be a friend of mine and interested in my nomination for Governor," he said. "After I had explained to him how much interested I was in definite action being taken on the Jury Commission bill I was disappointed in his dilatory tactics. I could not see that they comported in any way with his professions of friendship, and I told him so very positively."

The Democrats are badly split among themselves, especially in the lower House, and there probably will be several lively scenes before final adjournment is reached. Both Houses have agreed on sine die adjournment April 3 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and no bills are to be introduced after March 24 unless by unanimous consent. But much remains to be accomplished, and the Constitutional Convention proposition will doubtless fall through, as North and South Jersey are hopelessly divided on the question of representation.

Assemblyman Adams has presented a bill in the House which suggests a radical amendment to the Bishops law. It provides that a building to receive a liquor license does not have to be 200 feet from a church if the barroom itself is removed at least 200 feet away. The measure is designed to meet a situation in Burlington, where a theatre building is less than 200 feet from a church in the rear, but on the street line is about 600 feet away.

Speaker Taylor, who used to be a railroad brakeman, was the chief advocate of the Egan Full Crew bill at the hearing on the measure before the Senate Committee on Railroads and Canals. The measure has already passed the Assembly. He and the other speakers in favor of the measure had opposed to them several of the leading railroad officials of the State.

FUSION MOVEMENT STARTED.

Democrats, Republicans, and Progressives Sign Anti-Tammany Call.

A fusionist movement against Tammany Hall in the approaching city campaign was started yesterday when fifty leading citizens signed a call for a citizens' municipal conference, to be held on Wednesday, March 19, at the Fifth Avenue Building. The signers were:

Edward M. Bassett, Democrat; Charles L. Bernheimer, Republican; Arthur von Briesen, Progressive; Charles C. Burlingham, Democrat; Frederic R. Coudert, Democrat; Joseph H. Choate, Republican; Audley Clarke, Progressive; Cleveland H. Dodge, Democrat; J. Hampden Dougherty, Democrat; Norman Hapgood, Democrat; Timothy Healy, Progressive; Job E. Hedges, Republican; William M. Ivins, Republican; Henry Moskowitz, Progressive; Darwin R. James, Jr., Republican; Seth Low, Republican; William A. Marble, Republican; Alfred E. Marling, Republican; Gardiner D. Matthews, Progressive; Robert C. Ogden, Republican; George H. Putnam, Democrat; Frederic B. Pratt, Republican; Joseph M. Price, Democrat; Isaac N. Seligman, Democrat; Carl L. Schurz, Democrat; Antonio Stella, Progressive; Oscar S. Straus, Progressive; Franklin S. Tomlin, Democrat; William H. Williams, Democrat, and Richard Young, Republican.

A committee of sixty or seventy citizens will be selected to carry on the campaign. An anti-Tammany programme will be considered and a Mayoralty candidate who will be acceptable to all the anti-Tammany elements will be discussed. Borough President McAneny, District Attorney Whitman, and John Purroy Mitchel, President of the Board of Aldermen, are among the names already suggested.

BROADWAY CHARACTER DIES.

Chauncey C. Vibbard, Famous Cafe Manager, Passes at Roosevelt Hospital.

Once a familiar figure in Broadway and known for years to most of its conspicuous characters as the café manager at different times in the Hotel Albany, the Hotel Metropole, and the old Metropolitan Hotel, Chauncey C. Vibbard died on Tuesday evening in Roosevelt Hospital. For the second time within a week the family was notified of his death.

The first time was one evening in the latter part of last week, when, after Mr. Vibbard had been a patient in the hospital for a fortnight, he sank so rapidly that the doctors looked upon him as a man who had only a few hours to live. So there was no surprise in the office when an orderly reported that he had just been to the sick man's bedside, and that the end had come.

A doctor gave orders that word should immediately be sent to Mrs. Vibbard, and then went to Mr. Vibbard's bed. It was a slight twitching of the lips that halted him, and then he and an interne went to work. So that by the time Mr. Vibbard's brother-in-law, G. E. Trinini of 507 West 142d Street arrived, Mr. Vibbard was able to introduce him all around in a manner more cheerful than he had worn any day since his coming to the hospital. From then on, there was an increase of strength, but the sudden turn for the worse came Tuesday evening.

Before coming to New York Vibbard was for many years a hatter and furrier at Saratoga Springs. His father was the late Lorenzo Vibbard, who owned the Vibbard Steamship Line on the Hudson—the predecessor of the Albany Day Line. Chauncey C. Vibbard was 67 years old, and lived at 101 West Eighty-fourth Street. Mrs. Vibbard and a son survive him.

ELEVATED STATION AT 99TH.

Commission Willing, Provided Property Owners Give Consent.

Commissioner Eustis intimated yesterday that the Public Service Commission would order the construction of a new station on the elevated railway at Ninety-ninth Street and Columbus Avenue, provided the consent of property owners could be obtained. He adjourned the matter till March 28, to give time for this to be done.

Frank Hedley, Vice President and General Manager of the Interborough, estimated the cost of the improvement at $100,000, and in answer to the contention that such a station would improve the neighborhood greatly, said:

"The company is not particularly interested in the improvement of a neighborhood from the ordinary point of view. We get more passengers from four-room flats than out of the better class apartments."

BELT LINE CAPITAL GOES UP.

Commission Authorizes Increase to $600,000—Bond Permit Held Off.

The Belt Line Railway Corporation, which has been formed to operate the old Central Park North & East River Co., received permission yesterday from the Public Service Commission to increase its capital stock from $200,000 to $600,000. It will have to receive a certificate from the Secretary of State before it is enabled to issue the stock.

This line was purchased last November at foreclosure sale by Edward Cornell, acting for principals whose names he has refused to tell to the commission. Since then it has made application to the commission for the issue of $2,200,000 of bonds, which would cover the price paid for the road at the sale and claims for taxes, &c., which were in existence against it. The commission has not yet passed upon this application. The Third Avenue Railway Company is prepared to buy the road for $2,450,000.

HUSBAND FACES KOHLER.

Schearer Says He Broke Into His Own Home and Found Police Chief.

CLEVELAND, March 12.—Samuel D. Schearer, the principal complainant against Chief of Police Fred Kohler, told the Civil Service Commission to-day his version of the occurrences at the Schearer home which constitute the basis for the charges against the Chief.

Schearer said that on the night of June 5, 1912, he smashed a window in his home after ringing the door bell several minutes, and, going through the house, found Kohler hidden behind the icebox in the kitchen.

"You've got me," Kohler exclaimed, according to Schearer, "now what are you going to do with me?"

Then, Schearer said, they went upstairs to where Mrs. Schearer was found. Schearer insisted that his wife must go away that night, and said he asked Kohler to provide a place for her to stay. The witness added that Mrs. Schearer did finally leave the house.

The prosecution then rested, and Dr. Maurice Budwig, a witness for the defense, said he had prescribed for Kohler while the Chief was at home in bed on Feb. 2, 1912, the date of his first alleged visit to the Schearer home.

WEDS TO AVERT DEPORTING.

Elsie M. Cawthorne, Writer Whom Government Sought, Becomes Bride.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, March 12.—Elsie M. Cawthorne, author of a novel entitled "A Year Without a Chaperone," was married at Walla Walla last night to John A. McNeil, who is said to be a wealthy stock raiser of Sherman County, Ore.

For several weeks the Government has been trying to deport Miss Cawthorne on the ground that she is unlawfully in the United States. Miss Cawthorne had many friends who vouched for her good character and denounced the Government's activity against her. It is believed her marriage to an American citizen will stop the deportation proceedings. She is said to be a native of Canada.

Prof. Jimbo of Tokio Here.

Dr. Kotora Jimbo, Professor of Mineralogy at the University of Tokio, Japan, arrived yesterday from Antwerp on the Red Star liner Kroonland on his way home, and will stay a few days in New York to visit the Columbia School of Mines. Prof. Jimbo graduated from the University of Berlin fifteen years ago and has recently been on a tour through Europe inspecting the museums in the principal cities.
